TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 20 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks" wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering Coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth st., Philadelphia.—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the Ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory.

PEACE, BE STILL.

On Judah's sea a fearful storm was sweeping
[illegible] and chill;
But one was there, upon a billow sleeping,
Who, to the billows, in their fury leaping,
Said, "Peace, be still."

So, when the storms of earth sweep round our dwelling,
Both loud and shrill,
O, Savior, speak, our anxious fears dispelling,
And to the tempest in our bosom swelling,
Say, "Peace, be still."

The friends we loved are falling all around us
Look where we will;
O [illegible] that to the earth have

Our Southern Field.

BY E. Q. FULLER, D.D.

The abolition of slavery places the two sections of our country, the North and the South, in much better relations to each other than previously existed. Future peace, harmony, and unity, are now possible, and highly probable in our nation. This change has deeply affected Episcopal Methodism in its different branches, in all sections of the Union, and among both races of our people. If slavery be considered the cause, or the occasion, of the separation of 1844, the conclusion is the same, namely, that this alone divided the Methodist Episcopal Church. Whether it shall be again united in one body or not is for the future to determine; but that all branches of Methodism may continue to live and grow side by side, in peace and fraternal accord, cannot be successfully denied. The precepts of the Gospel require love among brethren. If they be Christians they must be fraternal, though in different organizations.

Methodism spread rapidly in the South at an early day, and in 1844 there was, probably, more of wealth and culture among Methodists in the Southern States than in the same denomination in the North. But since that time the Methodist Episcopal Church has moved forward with marvelous rapidity in the acquisition of wealth, culture, social position, and popular influence, as well as in numbers and usefulness; while the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has not held the foreground which it assumed, and which was granted to it, at the time of its organization. It may be conceded that it has maintained itself strongly in the South, but certainly it has not advanced in these respects so rapidly as the Northern people or as the Methodist Episcopal Church has done. These are points which should be kept in mind in studying the present status of either Church, or the relations of the two to each other.

Our Southern field, geographically considered, is large, embracing all of the late slave States; for though a portion of this territory adhered to the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1844, and has always been included in that connection, it was, and is now, claimed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Long-continued efforts have been made to wrest it from us, and we have been compelled to practically, if not nominally, reorganize in nearly all of it since the war. The con[illegible] which originally formed [illegible] Methodist Episcopal Church, [illegible] were the Virginia, Kentucky, [illegible] Arkansas, Memphis, Tennessee, Holston, North Carolina, [illegible], Georgia, Alabama, [illegible] and Texas, with a [illegible] membership of [illegible],233. [illegible] of Delaware and the [illegible] Shore of Maryland and [illegible] were embraced in the Philadelphia Conference, a large part [illegible] and Virginia in the [illegible] and the remainder of [illegible] and West Virginia in the [illegible] and Ohio Conferences. [illegible] the seceding [illegible] conferences is [illegible] Beginning on [illegible] Bay at the mouth [illegible] these [illegible] of the [illegible] across to the Big Sandy on the Kentucky line, and down that river to the Ohio; down the Ohio to the Mississippi, and up the Mississippi to the north line of Missouri, and west along that line to the western boundry of that State. This is the northern line of the Southern Church, conditionally agreed to in the so-called "Plan of Separation," according to the terms of which it had no rights north of this boundary. By that document, however, the Methodist Episcopal Church had a right to claim all societies, stations, and conferences on the border south of this line which should, by a majority vote, decide to adhere to it.

Across this line to the southward the Methodist Episcopal Church from 1844 to 1848 did not propose to go, unless it was to minister to such societies as voted to adhere to it, as provided in the report of the Committee of Nine. On the contrary, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, using all of the means in its power, proper and improper, passed over this border to the north, and sought to occupy all of the territory in the slave States, and some in the free as well, in the most flagrant violation of the provisions of the report called by the Southern Church the "Plan of Separation," and for which it now professes such ardent love. The Virginia Conference crossed the Chesapeake Bay to the Eastern Shore, and sought to break up societies and circuits in the Philadelphia Conference, also the Rappahannock to the north, and the Blue Ridge to the west, into the Valley of Virginia, in the Baltimore Conference, disaffecting societies and seizing churches without respect to the "border." The Kentucky Conference crossed the line to the east into West Virginia, then in the Ohio Conference, and made most extraordinary efforts to break up our work there, and to drive the Methodist Episcopal Church from the country. Nothing in the history of mankind is more certain than that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, determined to occupy all of the slave territory, and exclude the Methodist Episcopal Church therefrom. It organized a conference in California in 1852, and made a vigorous effort in Kansas in the early settlement of that State, in the expectation that slavery would be established there in violation of a most solemn compact.

The idea of holding all of this slave territory has never been relinquished by the southern Church. In 1861 the Virginia portion of the Baltimore Conference met in Staunton, most of the members from Maryland being absent because of the breaking out of the Rebellion, and, in a kind of outside convention, voted the whole conference, with the membership and Church property, out of the Methodist Episcopal Church, intending to transfer all, in opposition to a majority of the preachers and members, to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the General Conference to be held in New Orleans in 1862. The General Conference, however, did not meet till 1866. Then this faction, having become an independent Baltimore Conference, united with the southern Church, and claimed to transfer to that body every thing originally belonging to the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This was done with the knowledge, approval, and concurrent action of the New Orleans General Conference, in 1866, since the war, and the territory is still claimed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It is, therefore, plain that, in considering our southern work, this long-disputed ground should be taken into account. Our southern field, then, extends from Delaware to Mexico, along the old border of freedom from the Atlantic across the Mississippi Valley to the western line of Missouri, down the Atlantic to the Florida Keys, and along the Gulf of Mexico to the Rio Grande, embracing sixteen States, nearly one-half of all the organized States of the Union, ten of which are larger than Ohio, and all averaging one third more in area, having an aggregate of 890,972 square miles with a population of 13,877,612 in 1870.

Financially, the South is poor, and in comparison with the North, very poor. The aggregate wealth of these sixteen States, as given by the [illegible] report of 1870, from [illegible] on financial [illegible] questions are taken, [illegible] while that of New [illegible] nearly [illegible] than the [illegible] South. The wealth of Pennsylvania is $3,808,340,112, these two States having nearly twice as much property as all of the South. Over one-half of the wealth of the South lies along the old border of freedom, mostly in the States of Missouri, with $1,284,922,897; Kentucky, $604,318,532; Maryland, $643,784,976: total of these States, $2,533,026,425. Ohio has nearly as much wealth as these three put together, namely, $2,235,430,300. Add West Virginia, $190,651,491, and the District of Columbia, $126,873,618, and the aggregate on the border is, $2,850,451,534, over one-half of the wealth of the South. Tennessee has $498,237,724. Illinois has $2,121,680,579, nearly as much as all of the cotton, sugar and rice producing States combined, namely, Virginia, $409,588,133; North Carolina, $260,757,324; South Carolina, $208,146,989; Florida, $44,163,655; Georgia $268,169,207; Alabama, $201,855,841; Mississippi, $209,197,345; Louisiana, $323,125,666; Texas, $159,052,542, and Arkansas, $156,394,691; aggregating, $2,240,451,313; but little more, as already observed, than Illinois, or than either Massachusetts or Ohio. Other comparisons fully as striking might be made.

Here is food for reflection. Why this wide difference in the temporal condition of these sections of our common country? Why the poverty of the one and the prosperity of the other? This question has an important bearing upon our southern work. If the South is naturally and necessarily poor, the hope of large returns for our expenditures in this field is not flattering. But there is nothing discouraging for the future in these startling facts. The South need not remain poor. Its resources are abundant. The country is not ruined by the war. By far the greatest financial loss attributed to this cause is by the emancipation of the slaves, which numbered in 1860, 3,953,760, and are estimated in the South at a valuation of $4,000,000,000, or over $1,000 each. But this sum is less than two-thirds of the valuation of New York, and but little more than that of Pennsylvania. Nor is the poverty of the South due to the soil of this section. Everything can be raised to advantage here that is produced in the North, and cotton, sugar and rice besides. The cotton crop in 1860 amounted to 5,387,052 bales of four hundred pounds each, worth at least ten cents a pound, $215,482,080. Since the war the average product has been greater than before. In the past twelve years, beginning with 1865, 2,000,000 bales more have been raised than during the twelve years preceding 1861, and much more than any other time previous. In that year, 1860, 187,167,032 pounds of rice and 230,982 hogsheads of sugar were produced on southern plantations. The rice and sugar interests have not recovered their former proportions for manifest reasons. In the matter of raising home supplies there has been a great improvement in later years in most of the States, and there is no room for doubt that if our laboring force, white and colored, were stimulated to a reasonable activity by a hope of fair compensation, all necessary provisions for the plantation could be raised, and as much rice and sugar annually as in 1860, and 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 bales of cotton in addition. The time is not distant when even greater results than these may be realized by improvement of the soil, better methods of cultivation, and more intelligent and increased industry, if justice be done and peace maintained. Add to these the products of the mines, with which the country abounds, and of manufactures, which are rapidly increasing, and it is seen that the resources of the South are almost without limit. Perhaps there is no country on the globe of equal extent having greater natural advantages. The climate is mild, and yet remarkably healthful, affording the best possible opportunities to the husbandman and other laborers. The hills of the center and plains of the coast in future ages will teem with tens of millions of people. The whites are of Saxon blood, and if they differ materially from the population of the North, it is because they have been placed in different circumstances.

Why, then, the poverty of the South? Slavery is the cause. This institution turned European immigration, the best the world ever produced for peopling a new country, largely from the South to the North, and also drove thousands of our best native population across the Ohio River to the West, to escape its baneful influence. Immigration brought to the North, year by year, brain, muscle and money to aid in developing the country, while the South wastefully and wickedly poured out its millions to purchase men to till its lands and build its cities. When a slave died the money invested in him was lost; and thus every generation sunk and annihilated hundreds, and in late years thousands of millions of dollars, which, under free institutions, would have gone into improvements, and helped to swell the wealth of the nation. The free immigration of the North and the purchase of laborers for the South go far towards solving the question under discussion. Again, slavery was degrading, necessarily so, and the idea of this degradation inevitably passed from the slave to all branches of manual labor. Work was shunned because workmen were despised. Instead of promoting industry slavery was its greatest enemy and hindrance, for, while it overtaxed the bondman, it discouraged, depressed, and almost destroyed free labor; and as two thirds of the population were free, the loss during the last hundred years through the inactivity of large numbers of white people has been immense. The slave system, also, impoverished the lands. In all civilized countries, the South excepted, the older the country the more valuable the soil. Not so here. A few years of cultivation, not enough even to bring it into good tilth under the old system, left the surface exhausted and wasted, and for the want of better culture, large tracts were thrown out as waste and worthless. Slavery has made the South poor, and not a barren soil, an unfavorable climate, or an indolent and improvident people. A century of freedom, peace, and enterprise, directed by intelligence, will make the South the pride of America, the admiration of all lands, the garden of the world. The ministers and teachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are not toiling in vain in these States.

The educational condition of the South is deplorable, and always has been. It has its statesmen, scholars, literary men and women, of whom it may be proud, but the mass of the people have been left, by them and by the Churches in ignorance. The slaves were prevented from learning by design; had they been educated they would have found a way out of bondage. To hold them in slavery it was necessary to keep them in darkness. For this reason it was made a crime punishable by law, in most of the States, to teach a slave a knowledge of letters. The poor white people were permitted to remain in a similar condition for a like purpose; to protect the peculiar institution. There were always in the South thousands who regarded slavery as an evil, and who thought it a Christian duty to instruct the ignorant; and if schools had been established for the benefit of the white people generally the colored would have found friends among them who would have taught them to read in disregard of the law, and thus slavery would have been undermined. For the same reason manufacturing was but little encouraged in the South before the war. Profits were as much desired then as now, and abundant openings might have been found for various enterprises of that kind; but manufacturing called for skilled laborers, and these would have demanded schools, and education would have endangered slavery, and this was sustained and guarded at all hazards. An ignorant people might be controlled by a designing aristocracy, but an enlightened community would become independent, or, at least, restive under self-constituted leaders. Slavery kept the South in ignorance.

Notes from Austin, Texas.

From the Texas Iron Age of Austin, we gather the following.

Rev W. E. McCarty has been elected president of the Austin Ministerial Association.

On Sunday night March 24th Rev E. B. Snider of Pittsburg Pa., preached a powerful and logical sermon in College Hill M. E. Church. It was an able and eloquent discourse, and was listined to with much interest by a large congregation. Since Rev. W. E. McCarty has become pastor of this church it has been growing very rapidly. Six months ago the sunday school hardly numbered a dozen scholars; now it has a hundred or more. Scarcely more than a dozen people attended service, now the church is well filled every Sabbath. This speaks well for the popularity and energy of Mr. McCarty.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is increasing very rapidly in Texas, at least six new churches will be completed this year, the one at Austin costing about $18,000. A new church will be dedicated at Sherman the first Sunday of April, and another will soon be completed at Fort Worth. A handsome brick church was dedicated by Rev. Dr. Brush at Denison about three weeks ago. This building cost about $8,000, and is elegantly furnished. The pastor is Rev. M. A. Dougherty, who has been very efficient supervising the interests of the church.

Rev. Dr. Wm. Brush, Presiding Elder of the Austin District, is displaying great energy in behalf of his church, and is constantly visiting not only all portions of his own district, but others. The Northern Methodists are doing much to encourage immigration to Texas, and the great number of Northern people who are now coming to Texas, is greatly to be attributed to their labors and influence. No church has a more devoted minister, or one who labors with more zeal for its interests than does Dr. Brush. He is an able and eloquent divine, and is a worthy Christian minister.

The old City of Damascus.

Dr. DeHass, late American Consul to Jerusalem, in a letter to the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, says: The history of this city runs back very near the Flood. It is supposed by some to cover the site of the Garden of Eden, and to have been founded by Uz, the grandson of Job. It must have been a place of importance in the days of Abraham whose Steward was "Elizer of Damascus," and according to Josephus, Abraham himself was a Prince of this city. It certainly is the oldest habitable city on our globe, and what is remarkable it has flourished under every change of dynasty, and is still the largest city in Syria; beautifully situated on the banks of the Abana and Pharphar rivers, in the luxurlant gardens and may very appropriately be called "the pearl of the East."

Our first stroll was through the crooked "street called Straight," by the house of Judas and Ananias, and out of the eastern gate where we were shown the traditional site of Naaman's house, and where Paul was let down over the wall. But to me, the most interesting object was the Great Mosque, 1,100 feet long and 800 wide—the largest house of worship in the world, except the noble sanctuary at Jerusalem, originally a Pagan Temple, then a Christian Church dedicated to St. John, and said to contain his head in a casket of gold,—now a Mohammedan Mosque. Over one of the grand entrances to this temple, but now closed, may still be seen the very singular Greek inscription, "Thy kingdom Christ, is an everlasting kingdom, and Thy dominion endureth throughout all generations." This prophet inscription has stood here since the earliest ages of Christianity, and over the portals of Islamism for the twelve hundred years.

The Living Spring.

Go among the mountains, and you will see that it is the living spring that flows away. And where it flows the grass is green, and the flowers bloom, and the cattle drink, and the children linger to dip the foot, and hear the sweet song of the little rill. Yet the spring itself is in no way exhausted by all this. It is fed by the drawing sun, by the condensing mountains, by the beautiful clouds, by the great and wide sea. When the sea is empty, and the heavens are dry, the little fountain of the earth will yield no more. Well up without stint, ye springs sent into the valleys, which run among the hills! Give drink to every beast of the field, let even the wild asses quench their thirst! Go murmuring into rills of laughter, and rolling into rivers of song, and never be afraid or give one backward look. You have the sun above you, and the great oceans of earth behind you, all holding themselves bound, and ready to serve you, if you continue to serve others by your flow. Christians, let your inner life, fed and nourished by the in-dwelling word of Christ, have—not ostentations or self-confident or noisy, but yet natural, continuous outflow and expression. So, light will come to you from the land of lights. So, you will draw from the infinite ocean of divine love.—Alex. Raleigh

The Sabbath Day.

The proper observation of the Sabbath day is the dead line of this nation; a line of separation that if over passed will be fatal.

At this time when infidels are blatant and Sabbath desecration common, it may be well for us to remember the remarkable words of Lincoln in his army order in 1862, and apply the principles to common everyday life:

LINCOLN'S ARMY ORDER.

"EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, Nov. 15, 1862.

"The President, Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, desires and enjoins the orderly observance of the Sabbath by the officers and men in the military and naval service. The importance for man and beast of the prescribed weekly rest, the sacred rights of Christian soldiers and sailors, a becoming deference to the best sentiment of a Christian people, and a due regard for the Divine will, demand that Sunday labor in the army and navy be reduced to a strict necessity. The discipline and character of the national forces should not suffer, nor the cause they defend be imperiled, by the profanation of the day or name of the Most High. At this time of public distress, adopting the words of Washington in 1776, men may find enough to do in the service of God and their country, without abandoning themselves to vice and immorality. The first general order issued by the Father of his Country, after the Declaration of Independence, indicates the spirit in which our institutions were founded and should ever be defended: The General hopes and trusts that every officer and man will endeavor to live and act as becomes a Christian soldier defending the dearest rights and liberties of his country."

Fate of the Apostles.

All the apostles were assaulted by the enemies of the Master. They were call to seal their doctrines with their blood, and nobly did they bear the trial.

Matthew suffered martyrdom by being slain with the sword at a distant city of Ethiopia.

Mark expired at Alexandria, after having been crully dragged through the streets of that city.

Luke was hanged upon an olive-tree, in the classic land of Greece.

John was put into a caldron of boiling oil, but escaped death in a miraculous manner, and was afterward banished to the Isle of Patmos.

Peter was crucified at Rome with his head downward.

James the Greater was beheaded at Jerusalem.

James the Less was thrown from a lofty pinnacle of the temple, and and then beaten to death with a fuller's club.

Philip was hanged up against a pillar at Hieropolis, Phrygia.

Bartholomew was flayed alive.

Andrew was bound to the cross, whence he preached to his persecutors until he died.

Thomas was run through the body with a lance, in the East Indies.

Jude was shot to death with arrows.

Matthias was first stoned, and then beheaded.

Barnabas, of the gentiles, was stoned to death by the Jews at Salonica.

Paul, after various tortues and persecutions, was at length beheaded at Rome by the Emperor Nero.

Why Popes Change thier Names.

It is a fact generally known that monks and nuns on assuming their vows, and popes on ascending the pontifical throne, usually change their names. The reason of this change in the case of the popes is a superstitous belief that unless this is done, the new pontiff will not live long. The custom has prevailed since it was inaugurated in 965 by Octavian Conti, who assumed the name and title of John XII. Julius Medici would have made a breach had he been permitted, but his friends prevailed on him to take the name of Clement, he being the seventh pope to bear that name. Thirty-two years later in 1555, Marcellus Servius was elected and insisted upon retaining his own name. As Marcellus II, therefore, he assended the throne on the 9th of April. He was a young man and in robust health, and yet he lived but twenty-one days after his elevation. Since that time no pope has ventured to offend against the tradition. It is a little singular that while the name John has been a favorite one, no less than twenty-two popes having chosen it, none have chosen it since the death of John XXII, in 1416. The first pope bearing the name Pius took the position in 142, and the name did not reappear after his death till 1458.

A bill was recently introduced in Congress, by Mr. Stephens of Georgia, authorizing the use of a metric system, the true intent and meaning of the act being not to enforce any particular system, but to provide for the public convenience, by adaptation to its circumstances or exigences. The following are the metric tables proposed by the bill:

Measures of Length.

One hundred hairs make a nail.
One hundred nails make a meter.
One thousand meters make a kilo.

Measures of Surface.

Ten thousand square meters make a great acre.

Measures of Bulk and Capacity.

One hundred drops make a spoon.
One hundred spoons make a quart.
One hundred quarts make a cask.

Measures of Weight.

One hundred seeds make a corn.
One hundred corns make a nut.
One hundred nuts make a bipound or bip.
One hundred bips make a ton.

The idea of the bill is to endeavor to introduce the French metric system, without the use of such words as kilometre, decimetre, decametre, &c.

Texas has increased in population and wealth with greater rapidity during the last six years than any other State in the Union. Her population 1850 was 212,000; in 1860, 600,000; in 1870, 818,000 and in 1876, it is believed to be fully 1,600,000.

The Supreme Court and the President's Title.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean publishes a letter from it's New Orleans correspondent "Ardleigh," which contains a criticism upon our article of last week in which we spoke of the possible bearing of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Anderson case upon the President's title. This correspondent is mistaken in assuming that we expressed our opinion as to the title of Mr. Hayes. We did not. We simply suggested that the decision in the Anderson case may have been intended to effect an ulterior object. But "Ardleigh" takes issue with us upon certain statements which we made in our article. We stated in substance that the Returning Board acted upon the supervisors returns, which they made the basis of the canvass, and not upon the Commissioners returns from the polls; that in order to give the Board authority to reject votes the law required that protests should be annexed to the returns; that said protests were annexed to the Supervisors returns and that these consolidated returns being illegal and void as a basis of a canvass, therefore, according to the Democratic argument, the declaration of results by the Board was void.

The Inter-Ocean correspondent calls attention to the fact that the law contemplates two kinds of protests: one eminating from the Supervisors and relating to the general occurrences during registration, and one from the commissioner relating to particular acts of violence and intimidation at particular polls. In this "Ardleigh" is right, and we were wrong in so far as our statement differed from his. But, with regard to the other statement of fact at issue between us, we were right and he is wrong. He says in his letter: "The Board did canvass the votes and compile the returns from the statements of votes of the commissioners of the several polls, and not from the consolidated statements of the Supervisors of Registration." We think that we are not mistaken in the assertion that an examination of the published minutes and proceedings of the Returning Board will disclose that the exact converse of this statement is the truth.

In this very case against General Anderson he was accused of having knowingly uttered as true a forged document, to-wit: the Supervisors consolidated returns of Vernon parish, which had been altered. In that instance the Board canvassed and promulgated the result of the election from consolidated returns. This was the uniform course.

Therefore, without expressing an opinion for ourselves we repeat the point which we made last week, that the decision of the Supreme Court in the Anderson case, in which it was held that the Supervisors returns "have no value or efficacy as evidence of the result of the election," was calculated to and may have been intended as the first step towards invalidating the title of President Hayes.

Peace.

A terrible war once raged between this country of ours and England, and war, you know, is always terrible, for it violates the sanctity of home; it sends the child out fatherless on the world; it clothes the bereaved wife in garments of mourning; it lays waste life and property with a ruthless hand; instead of fields of plenty it bequeaths to the world fields of blood. In this war to which I allude, for seven long years armies marched and counter-marched. Not a day passed but some wife was robbed of her husband; not a day passed but some mother sat down to weep as the tidings came that her dear boy had gone into a soldier's grave, and she never would see him again.

At last the two nations grew [illegible] of blood. They arranged an [illegible] The agents of the two governments assembled in a distant [illegible] to agree upon terms of peace. [illegible] met and took each other by the hand, and the spell of war was broken. Over all this land the people [illegible] interested in that greeting. [illegible] before the days of telegraphs. [illegible] could only be borne across [illegible] to us by ship. O, how [illegible] the people were for the [illegible] of that ship, for it would [illegible] of peace or prolonged [illegible] waited anxiously, and [illegible] each other daily what [illegible] passed. [illegible] ship was seen away [illegible]—then she came [illegible] news of the [illegible] flying like the [illegible] rushed to the wharf [illegible] the plank, a dense [illegible] That is enough. O, what a word to a nation tired of war. The crowd shouts it back to the ship, "peace!" Heaven and earth seemed moved with tumult. Old men embrace each other, the very boys are wild with excitement. Men rush to their homes to tell their wives. Lovers go quick to tell their sweethearts. Along the streets they go flying, "Peace," "peace," is on every lip; gladness on every face; joy in every heart. What would you say if that crowd should move away in silence? "Little they care for peace," you would say. Nay, you might as well expect to keep the birds from singing when the beauty of summer comes as to keep people from expressing joy when they feel it. Who so cold and stoical as to say they ought not to shout when such a burden is rolled off; when such a cloud is lifted from the sky. And so life is a battle, and all battle implies victory or defeat—all victory means joy. Has sin rolled its burden off your heart? Have you gained a victory over sin, in your soul shout—be joyful.

Free Labor better that Slave Labor.

On our third page we publish some facts showing that all fears of the South, that the destruction of slavery would destroy all hope of reliable labor, were groundless. The facts are as there shown that during the last eight years 2,772,371 more bales of cotton have been raised than during the eight years just before the war, which time included the palmiest days of slave labor. That is to say, already with free labor the South has gone beyond her best days with slave labor. All talk about the unreliability of colored men as laborers ought now to cease, because the great mass of the labor in the South is performed by them. So, too, ought that other foolish notion be forgotten, that white men cannot labor in the South, because the number of white men laboring in the South increases every year. With slavery gone the stigma is taken from labor, and agriculture is coming to be more and more profitable. The South, including all classes has only to cultivate her soil, and grow rich and prosperous.

Roman Morality under Roman Catholic Domination.

We have received the following and publish it, and ask the New York Advocate to give us the source of its "reliable facts." We have no other purpose than to deal justly with all classes, and we are quite sure this is the purpose of our New York confrere.

We wish to state, however, that we have statistics and facts in our possession which have fully convinced us that continued Roman Catholic domination in any country is detrimental to public and private morals. These we may publish hereafter:

Mr. Editor; I find published in your paper of March 28th, 1878, an article with the above heading, credited to the New York Advocate.

The article states, on the authority of "a recent number of El Solfeo, an Italian journal of prominence," that there was in Rome, in 1870, a total population of 205,000, and that the number of births reached, in the same year, to 4378, of which 1215 were legitimate and 3163 illegitimate; the illegitimate, therefore, being in the proportion of 75.25 per 100 of the total of births!

In reply to these "curious, reliable statistical facts," now published by you, the New York Advocate, and El Solfeo, as the true statistical tables of Rome for 1870, I will state that the same tables, the same figures, the same results were given and published in 1854, in a work by Rev. M. Hobert Seymour, and have been published and re-published in this country by nearly all the evangelical journals and anti-Catholic reviews, magazines and phamphlets previous to the date assigned by the New York Advocate as that to which they refer, namely, 1870. I have now before me a list of the names of seven publications in 1868 and 1869 with the same identical statements, so that the "reliable Italian journal" is somewhat behind its enterprising brethren in giving the moral statistics of Rome for 1870, as others have been publishing the same statements, the same figures, periodically for the last twenty-four years, that is sixteen years before the events are supposed to have happened.

The official census of Rome, published December 21, 1867, that is, before Rome was the capital of the Kingdom of Italy, in the Civilto Catholico, gives the total population at 215,573, and the number of legitimate births for the year from Easter 1866 to Easter 1867 at 5739. The average number of legitimate births for the previous ten years was 5637 [illegible] the average number of illegitimate births was less than six per cent, in place of the 75 per cent [illegible] in the article from the New York Advocate. The official statistics for the whole of Italy for the same period gives the illegitimate births at five per cent.

"The statistics corresponding to the latest years of the Pontifical government show that there was committed one murder in England for every 187,000 inhabitants and in the estates of the Pope one for every 750." These figures are sufficiently suggestive says the New York Advocate. I should suppose every one would think so. Let us examine them. This statement would give 130 murders in England and Wales for the twenty millions of inhabitants, and for the three millions of inhabitants in the "Pope's Estates," it would give 4000 murders, or 249 times as many as in the Pope's late dominions, for the same number of inhabitants as are committed in England in the same time.

This difference in this single crime between any two countries in the world, Catholic, Protestant, Mohammedan or Pagan, having any kind of a government, could hardly be believed by any person who investigates the statistics of crime; but when it is stated as between England and the Roman States, as giving their moral condition some ten or twelve years ago, I think that it is only necessary to point it out to any sane man or woman to have the statement discredited.

The Statistical Journal of London for 1867, gives the following tables for England for 1865—coroner's verdicts:

Willful Murder	227
Manslaughter	282
Concealment of birth—Infanticide	232
	741

I will make no other observation on this article at present, but ask you, in justice to fellow Christians, to publish, as I write it, this answer to these terrible charges against my religious brethren in Italy, and against Roman Catholic morality everywhere, and thus allow my reply to go before your readers and be contradicted if not true. Your obedient servant,

D. P. SCANLAN.

Our Church in Columbus, Tex.

At our quarterly meeting there were fifteen accessions. At the close of the protracted meeting last week, nine more were added. Eight of these are from the Sunday-school and soundly converted.

Notwithstanding the hard times and scarcity of money out here the church is doing her duty, in trying to meet the demands upon her as a church. Our Sunday-school, under the care of our very efficient superintendent, Bro. John Yancey, is on the march. We are organized into a Sunday-school missionary society, and on the first Sabbath in each month a missionary collection is lifted. Average attendance is about 95. Officers and teachers 10. All the teachers are members of the M. E. Church, filled with the Holy Ghost and zealous of good works. We use the Berean lesson papers, kindly furnished by the Sunday-school Union, M. E. Church. The revival that has commenced in our school speaks more than we can say with reference to the efficiency of the teachers. Pray for us that the leaven will leaven the whole mass. We look for grand results this conference year, both financially and spiritually.

Bishop Wiley in Japan.

Dr. Maclay writes us from Hakodati, Japan, Feb. 14: "Bishop Wiley and family arrived safely in Yokohama from Hong Kong Feburary 7, 1878, all in good health. While in China Bishop Wiley, accompanied by his family, visited all our missions in that country, and, with the single exception of the trip from Tientsin to Peking, (eighty miles,) traveled the entire distance by steamers. It is worthy of note, as indicating the progress of affairs in China, that, with two exception, the Bishop, while in that country, traveled in steamers owned by a Chinese company. The entire distance traveled by the Bishop in China was three thousand seven hundred and thirty miles, of which three thousand and seventy miles was by Chinese steamers, and only six hundred and sixty miles by foreign steamers. The Bishop spent nearly four months in China, during which time he visited Shanghai, Chefoo, Tientsin, Peking, Kiukiang, Foochow, Kucheng, Amoy, Swatow, Hong Kong, and Canton.

Returning from China, Bishop Wiley, as above stated, arrived in Yokohama from Hong Kong February 7, 1878. Next day (Feb 8) the the Bishop accompanied by the writer, embarked for Hokodati on the Japanese steamer Takachiho Maru, and after a pleasant passage of a little less than three days, arrived there safely on the evening of Feb. 11, to the great joy of the members of our mission resident in Hakodati, namely, Rev. M. C. Harris, and Rev. W. C. Davisson and wife. Mr. Harris initiated our mission in Hakodati, and is still carrying it forward with vigor and success. Mr. and Mrs. Davisson are spending the winter in Hakodoti with Mr. Harris, expecting shortly to go on to Hirosaki, where they are to take charge of the large school, which has during the past three years been so efficiently taught by the Rev. John Ing and Mrs. Ing, of our Japan Mission. At the date of this writing the Bishop is looking after the interests of our work in Hakodati. By next mail we hope to send more information on this subject."

Fruit Trade of New Orleans.

A reporter of the Democrat has interviewed some of the principal fruit-dealers in this city in reference to the importance of that trade. From their statements, as given in the issue of the 7th, we take the following:

Mr. J. P. Macheca, No. 8 Toulouse street; The fruit trade is on the increase. The demand was never better than now. It comes principally from Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnati and Memphis. Bananas and cocoanuts sell most readily; they come principally from Jamaca. From Ruatan we receive bananas, plantains, pineapples, mangoes, limes, oranges and yams. Plantains may supersede potatoes in the market at some future time. They are cheaper and are in good demand. To carry on the trade there are now, altogether, about twenty sailing vessels and one steamer. I own four schooners and am consignee of eight vessels owned by parties in Portlnad, Maine. We send flour, pork, lumber, dry goods, hardware and agricultural tools in exchange for the fruit. We make all transactions on a cash basis; that is, the fruit is sold here for cash, which is then invested in merchandise for exchange. The receipts since September, 1877, are, bananas, 70,000 bunches; cocoanuts, 2,800,000; pineapples, 1400 tons; limes, 500 barrels and boxes; oranges, 100,000 barrels; plantains, 100,000 bunches. The export of Louisiana oranges is on the increase. The demand comes from the West; the crop last year was short on account of the blossoms having been affected by cold weather; the exports since September are about 150,000 barrels, and the prospect for next year's crop is very encouraging. The pecan trade is fair; the crop averaged 8,000 to 10,000 barrels, both of Louisiana and Texas pecans. The most saleable fruits of Louisiana are oranges, figs, pecans and persimmons. This summer we expect to have a very large crop of peaches, pears, plums and strawberries. We receive monthly 12,000 bunches of bananas, 100,000 plantains, 200,000 cocoanuts, some 100 barrels of limes, and about 100,000 oranges in bulk.

C. J. Berry, of the firm of Berry & Co.; To show you the importance of the fruit trade, I will say that for many years our relation with the tropical fruit growing regions have been carried on by Mr. Fred Camerden with a single schooner. In 1867 the fruit carrying fleet consisted of six small schooners; in 1870, of ten schooners, each of a capacity of 2000 bunches of bananas, and to-day the number of these vessels is no fewer than twenty-six, among which are the Santo Oteri and the Ward, each of which carry cargoes three times as large. The other vessels are also of much larger capacity than their predecessors, generally three times as large. The Bay Island Company runs nineteen of these vessels. The trade has grown of late years in importance to the extent of requiring the house of Gordon & Gormila, of this city, to establish an agency at Kingston, Jamaca, to properly conduct their increasing business. You will find now that much of the industry of the islands is carried on by Yankees. A few years ago myself and another gentleman connected with the Bay Island Company went North and bought or chartered nineteen vessels for this business. At the expiration of our contracts, the keen-eyed Yankees, having appreciated the value of the trade, went into it themselves. A single firm of Philadelphia has now twenty-one vessels in the trade.

Chas. H. Schenck, No. 11 Front street.

The fruit trade of New Orleans with the West is in this proportion. Out of every five cargoes of fruit that come here, three go to Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnati, Nashville and other cities. Formerly the markets of the West were supplied from the East and by steamboats plying on the Mississippi, the barkeepers on which would sometimes carry one hundred bunches of bananas at a trip. Now they buy very little, and only to supply the smaller towns on their way up. The cause of the change is the new mode of shipment, which, I think, I was the first to inaugurate, about seven years ago, in this city via the New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago Railroad, who now afford us every facility to send our fruit northward. They have built special cars and run them through in due time. The company in every way manifests its desire to propitiate the trade. We can compete with the Atlantic ports in shipping fruit to the West. The trip to New York, for exemple, is longer, and let us take the article banana, which sell cheaper here, commands $2 00, $2 50 and $3 00 per bunch. The freight to New Orleans is cheaper than to New York. In the climate of New York, in winter, the fruit often freezes, and frequently, owing to the length of the trip, the fruit is spoiled in warm weather. Owing to these facts the fruit has to come more carefully packed, entailing therefore additional expense. The car rates from New York to Chicago are 80 cents per 100 pounds, whilst oranges in boxes weighing seventy-five pounds are conveyed from New Orleans to Chicago at 45 cents per box, and sometimes as low as 10 cents. The car rates on bananas from New Orleans to Chicago is only $120 a car, and to Louisville $100.

To further improve our fruit trade all that we need is capital. With capital we could command the entire trade of the West, by the establishment of a steamship line from Sicily and the ports in the Medeterranean. They could take back cotton and everything else that is shipped from this port to Europe.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. J. M. Parks, Forest, Miss.; "We have had nine recent accessions. Our people are still striving to serve the Lord. Pray for us."

Rev. J. W. Hilton, Fairfield, La.; "We have just held the quarterly meeting of this work. We find the circuit in a better condition than we have before known it to be in. Both church and Sunday-school are doing well."

Rev. N. Thompson, Martin, Tenn., "We have just closed a one week's meeting. Six persons professed faith in Christ as a personal Savior, and twenty-three were received in the church on probation."

Rev. P. Nobles, Richmond, Texas; "We have just closed a glorious meeting in which there were twenty-five conversions. The accessions to the church this year number fifty-five. We bless the Lord for His goodness."

Rev. W. B. Kendrick, Chickasaw, Co., Miss.; "My work I find to be all in the woods, hardly a stick amiss. Have four appointments, and find at them earnest Christians. We have commenced building a church, and with God's blessing will go forward."

Rev. L. R. Brown, Kosciusko, Miss.; "We have been greatly blessed of the Lord. In a meeting continued for three weeks we have had forty-eight accessions to the church. In addition many parents are bringing their children for baptism. May the Master direct us in His service."

Rev. Prince King, Convent, La.: "There have been two recent conversions, and seven accessions to our church. We are raising money to purchase a bell and to make some needed repairs in our church. We have three large Sunday-schools on this work, all doing well."

Rev. A. E. P. Albert, Houma, La.; "Our protracted meeting had been brought to a close but last night at our regular prayer meeting eighteen presented themselves as desiring the prayers of Christians on their behalf, so we shall continue our special services at least one week longer. We baptized seventeen persons last Sunday."

Rev. B. F. Smith, Cuero, Texas, "Our presiding elder not being able to attend our first quarterly service his place was filled, very acceptably, by Rev. Mack Henson, of Victoria. We have but a small membership here, only about twenty, but will endeavor to build a church this year. We have three other appointments on the work."

Rev. Frank Walker, Campti, La.; "Our church is in a prosperous condition, conversions are frequent and our numbers constantly on the increase. Another Baptist congregation have come over to us, transferring their church property, a very comfortable house of worship. Our church building is nearly completed. We expect to commence another on this circuit soon."

Rev. Frank Vance, Houston, Texas; "At the request of the pastor, Rev. J. R. Loggins, I write you in reference to the wonderful revival in First Church, of this place. The meeting has now been in progress nine weeks and the interest at this date (April 1st) is unabated. There have been eighty-seven conversions and one hundred and twenty eight accessions to the church."

Rev. Jas. Hayward, Franklin, La.; "We have had a meeting in progress for the past three weeks. There have been, to this time, eighteen conversions and twenty accessions to the church, and still the gracious work goes on. Pray for us. The recent visit of our presiding elder, Rev. E. Williams, is remembered with pleasure by all. His sermons to the congregations were full of spiritual instruction and comfort and the counsel given by him to the quarterly conference on certain disciplinary matters, wise and timely."

Rev. Tennessee Jackson, Shreveport, La.; "We have organized a third church in this city, and put a house in suitable repair for a place in which the congregation can worship. We commenced with sixteen full members and three probationers. There have since been three conversions. Elder Davage held our first quarterly services which were a great blessing to us. I have not had tobacco in my mouth since I gave the promise to good Bishop Harris on joining conference, and I feel that I have been blessed in quitting the filthy habit."

Religious Items.

The General Conference of the Colored M. E. Church of America, will be held at Jacksonville, Tennessee, Aug. 7, 1878.

There have been built by the Methodist Episcopal Church in the past ten years 4,978 new churches, at a cost of $30,000,000.

The World's Conference of Young Men's Christian Associations will be held this year at Geneva, Switzerland, August 13-20th. Arrangements are making for an excursion thither from New York by way of Scotland and England.

The United States commercial agent at Gaboon reports to the Department of State, that the knowledge of Congo or Livingstone river derived from Stanley's discoveries is already bearing practical fruit. English missionaries have followed the course of the river as far as the first series of rapids, and are about to establish a missionary station at that point.

The Methodist says: At Schroon Lake, N. Y., a wonderful temperance work has grown out of a mock Methodist class-meeting held in a saloon by the inebriates. One of the speakers lapsed into the truth one night, and told his real experience, and sobered the company, who organized a reform in which 1100 have signed the pledge. Every bar has been closed, and a clean excise board elected. The temperance revival was followed by a revival of religion, which gives promise of sweeping results.

The Illustrated Christian Weekly, replying to the question of "Why is it that the the late pope Pius IX should have masses said for the repose of his soul? and why is it necessary for him to go to purgatory, he claiming to be infallible?" says, "The mere statement of such questions is their answer. Even the Romanists themselves have felt the difficulty in the case of the pope, and have attempted in one way or another to parry the force of these questions which would come up. But without success."

General News Items.

CINCINNATI, April 6.—A dispatch from Lexington Ky., says that at many of the principal towns in the interior of the State there are one or more Englishmen buying horses for the London market. They are buying a good class of heavy horses, and paying fair prices.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—In the response to the trade circular of the Department of State, the Consul at Cape Town writes that in his opinion the establishment of a sample depot at that place, under competent management, would open a profitable market to the special productions of the United States.

The report that Southern Africa will soon be under white domination from Cape Point to the Seambesi, is attracting commercial attention to so vast a field of profit and enterprise. There is not a manufactory of any kind in the Cape Colony; everything is imported. There is already a fair trade with the United States in lumber, staves, petroleum, tobacco breadstuffs, pork, beef, canned provisions, butter, hardware, agricultural implements and cotton goods.

PARIS, April 6.—Richard C. McCormick, commissioner general for the United States, who arrived in the French capital on the second instant, was yesterday presented by Minister Noyes to Senator Krantz, commissioner general for France. Gov. McCormick was accompanied by Lieutenants Buckingham and Rogers. Their reception was very cordial, and Senator Krantz said: "Although the Americans were late in the field, I do not doubt that they be will ready on the first of May, as the rapidity of their workmen is well known.

After the reception, Gov. McCormick was escorted through the exhibition buildings. For the first time the American flag was conspiciously displayed.

The cargo of a steamship "Supply" had already been delivered in the American section, and exhibitors were busily engaged in putting up the work. The "Constitution" began to discharge at Havre yesterday, and they will be delivered in three or four days. The detachment of United States marines, who are to do guard duty in the American section, will arive to-day and occupy the barracks assigned them by the French government.

GALVESTON, April 5.—The News' Dallas special says: The through express train on the Texas Pacific road was stopped and robbed last night at Eagle Ford Station. The express messenger and mail agent surrendered without resistance; the passengers were not molested. The amount stolen is not known. The robbery is supposed to have been committed by the same party that recently robbed the trains at Hutchins and Allen stations on the Central road.

April 21, 1878.—JEREMIAH IN PRISON.

Scripture—Jer. 38: 1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—3.

TOPIC.—"The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger and pleanteous in mercy."—Ps. 103: 8.

The Great Physician (1-3.—The venerable Jeremiah was in prison. How came he there? A succinct answer would be that he was there because he did not prophesy to please the people. His whole history was an unpleasant one. He was commissioned to tell unwelcome truth, unwelcome even to himself, and to experience the dislike, the derision, and the hatred of the generation to whom he faithfully told it. Afterwards, when the facts vindicated all his predictions, he was held by the people in singular reverence—an experience not uncommon in the history of reformers. The Jews, of course, did not relish their subjection to the Babylonian yoke. In the effort to escape from it, they were willing to make use of any means. In court there was a strong party that advocated an alliance with Egypt as the way out of bondage. But Jeremiah, instructed of God, counseled temporary submission to Babylon. He set it forth as the decree of God, not only that Judah should serve Nebuchadnezzar, but that all the nations round about, including even Egypt, should do so. "Seventy years," said the prophet, "these nations shall serve the king of Babylon," and, after that, he predicted that the land of the Chaldeans should be a perpetual desolation. His utterances were regarded as unpatriotic. They created against him as much personal dislike as though they were the expression of his own wishes, instead of being, as they were, the voice of God. For what he had said his own towns-people threatened him. His own father and brethren acted treacherously toward him. He lost favor with the people, with the princes, and even with the prophets. Because what he said was made a reproach and a derision daily, he, at last, said: "I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name." But that attitude he could not long retain. "But his word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing and I could not stay." 20:9. Men of God will always find more peace in speaking his message, however disagreeable it may be, than in withholding their testimony. Jeremiah was arrested just as he was leaving the city to go to his home in Anathoth. But he got no farther than the gate of the city. There he was arrested on the false charge of deserting to the Chaldeans. No protestation of his to the contrary had any weight. The princes were angry with him and smote him and put him in prison. Their rage was not satisfied by ordinary confinement, but; on the plea that he was speaking words that were weakening the hands of the men of war, they obtained from the king permission to do whatsoever they pleased with him. Their pleasure was to let him down into a rayless dungeon, or, rather, hole in the ground, where "there was no water, but mire," and there let him starve to death. 38:6. From this horrible place he was rescued, as has been stated, by the intercession of Ebed-Melech the Ethiopian.

The Hopeless Patient (4, 5).—Jerusalem, the patient, was apparently in a hopeless condition. In the interests of defence the houses, both of the private inhabitants and of the kings, had been thrown down. As the besiegers made progress from the outside, the houses nearest the places in the walls that were threatened were pulled down to strengthen them. It was all one, whether the property was private or royal. The city was fast assuming a ruinous appearance—torn to pieces by its defenders in order to protect it from those who, the prophet himself had said, would burn it with fire.

And the future looked no brighter than the present. For resistance to the Chaldeans, the prophet knew, was hopeless. God put no bright tints in the picture that he drew of the present, and the immediate future, condition of his people. They would come out to fight the Chaldeans, but it would only be to fill their houses with their own dead bodies—men slain, so it is said, in the anger and fury of the Lord. But God is never angry, and never furious as men are. The latter term, especially, involves an utter loss of temper and of self-control such as we cannot think of in relation to God. But in speaking with Jeremiah, God was using the vernacular of our race. Inasmuch as it is impossible for man to conceive of violent things being done in any but a violent mood, God adapts himself to our notions of such affects, and speaks of himself as being moved with anger and fury, when he really refers to the impression which his more terrible judgments make upon the minds of men. The words merely interpret the acts, and not the temper of him who performs them.

Such an anger Jerusalem was now experiencing. God had hidden his face from the doomed city. Better that the sun had gone out of the heavens than that should have happened. Death and destruction were immediately before them. With the hiding of God's face went strength and life and health. If the sun were blotted out, disease and death would reign supreme. When God hides his face from men or nations can the effect be less? If it cannot, then let us, with the psalmist, devoutly pray: "God be merciful unto us, and bless us, and cause his face to shine upon us, that thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations." Ps. 67: 1, 2.

The Promised Cure (6-9).—First, we note that the cure was promised when there did not seem any hope of recovery. Second, that it was promised at the time when the prophet was told that the patient would become worse before he would become better. Third, that the cure [illegible] was to be complete and thorough. Fourth, that the cure was [illegible] both of the city and of the people. Fifth, that the Lord [illegible] what he meant by the term "cure" in each case. For the people it meant, 1st, that he would reveal unto them "abundance of peace and truth." That, however, promised that there was a time coming when they would repent and become his obedient children again. And for all that to do, there is "abundance of peace and truth." They [illegible] "passeth under[illegible]" 2d, the captivity, both [illegible] and of Israel, was to be [illegible] to be built as [illegible] their nation stood [illegible] of its fame. Many friends, in Boston, unable to give money in these hard times, have contributed building material and many publishers have given books. That these books may be turned into money, we offer them as prizes for the sale of bricks. We can furnish almost any book in the market. We will send a printed list of the books on hand in reply to letters of inquiry enclosing a stamp. We can only enumerate a few as follows:

LINKS IN REBECCA'S LIFE.

Links in Rebecca's Life. By "Pansy." Price, $1.50. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co.

"Pansy" has no rival as an author of the best class of Sunday school books. Her "Easter Bled" and "Chautauqua Girls" series are models in that important line of literature. Her new book, "Links in Rebecca's Life," is worthy of a place in the same list. This book is an admirable one. Its tone is healthy and stimulating, without a trace of sentimentalism or cant; and its characters are thoroughly natural, such as any reader can recognize in the community in which he happens to live. The heroine, Rebecca, is intensely human, with a noble nature in which many weaknesses hide themselves and come often to the surface. But she is a Christian of the best type, and her aspirations and hard fought battles inspire enthusiasm in a reader. The Committee on International Lessons couldn't do a better thing than to circulate this book in every part of the land. It shows how the lessons may be made helpful in the daily life, and how the Old Testament may be taught with interest to an Infant School, or to men and women of every congregation.

WEBSTE AND HAYNES SPEECHES.

Webster and Haynes Speeches, as delivered in the United States Senate, January, 1830, on the Resolution of Mr Foot: with Daniel Webster's Speech in the United States Senate, March 7, 1850, on the Slavery Compromise, all complete and unabridged, is published by T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, in one large octavo volume, printed from large type, and bound in paper cover, and will supply what has long been wanted, a verbatim report of these celebrated speeches, which will live as long as the country lasts, and no better notice can be given of them than "Webster's own closing peroration in reply to Colonel Hayne," viz:—"While the Union lasts, we have high, exciting, gratifying prospects [illegible] before us, for us and our children. Beyond that I seek not to penetrate the veil. God grant that in my day at least, that curtain may not rise. God grant that on my vision never may be opened what lies behind. Slave and Free Labor Cotton.

Twelve crops of cotton have been raised by free labor, and the comparison of the returns with an equal number of crops before the war shows some interesting results. The period of free labor may properly be divided into two portions—the first, including four years, during which the crops of 1865 to 1868, both inclusive, were made, and in which the labor system was greatly disorganized. If we divide the twelve crops preceeding the war in the same manner, we shall get the following results:

FIRST PERIOD—FOUR YEARS.

		Bales.
Crops of 1849-'50 to 1852-'53 incl'.		10,729,874
Add consumption of the South, not then included in the commercial crop statement		500,810
Total (slave)		11,230,684
Crops of 1865-'66 to 1868-'69, inclusive [free]		6,346,793
Excess of slave crop over free		1,983,891
SECOND CROP—EIGHT YEARS.
Crops of 1869-'70 to 1876-'77, inclusive, being eight years of organized free labor		31,570,212
Crops of 1853-'54 to 1860-'61, inclusive, being eight years of slave labor immediately preceding the war	27,535,949
Add Southern consumption then excluded from commercial crop statement, but included since the war	1,261,892	28,797,841
Excess of free labor		2,772,871

In the last eight years free labor has, therefore, overtaken the palmiest days of slavery, and has produced two and three-quarter million bales more cotton. This crop is now more free from the encumbrance of debt than ever before, and with it has been raised a supply of food far greater than slavery ever compassed.

Without entering into minute statistics, it is safe to say that the money value of the thirty-one and a half million bales of cotton produced in the last eight years, has been over two thousand million dollars in gold, and that over two-thirds of this value has been exported.

Texas, which seems to be the true land of the cotton farmer, has made the greatest relative progress, now producing double the crop of cotton that she made before the war. During the last cotton year, on less than half of one per cent. of her area or on less than half an acre in a hundred, she produced a quantity of cotton equal to one-half the entire consumption of the United States.—New York Herald.

Died.

At Edwards', Miss., on the third inst., Mrs. Elizabeth Baldwin, aged 48 years.

She was an humble, devoted Christian and one of our most zealous church members. The minister of the gospel ever met a hearty welcome at her door and her ready sympathy and goodness of heart had endeared her to all who knew her. Her death has left a void in the church and in the community that will not soon be filled. The grace of God she found sufficient for her in a dying hour.

C. P. HEAD, Pastor.

The Stockholm (Sweden) Aftonbladet says; "His Majesty the King has to-day presented the Academy of Music, on occasion of its dedication, with an organ of superior quality, made by the Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., Boston, U. S. A. On the front of the organ is a plate thus engraved: 'King Oscar II, to the Royal Academy of Music, the 2d March, 1878.'" The Mason & Hamlin Co. also received an official appointment as Cabinet Organ Makers to the King of Sweden and Norway. This is quite a compliment to these well-known American manufacturers, whose organs are almost as famous in Europe as in America.—N. Y. Philharmonic Journal.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study, and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local [illegible] whose licenses are to be renewed [illegible] of Quarterly Conferences [illegible] the first year, and [illegible] through the four [illegible]

Tortures that need not be Endured.

People suffer a great deal of pain unnecessarily. Among tortures that need not be endured are those inflicted by the rheumatism and the gout, since the acrid element in the blood which produces them by contact with the sensative coverings of the muscles and joints may be eleminated by the use of that matchless depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, before the inflamatory symptons are developed to any great extent. When it is considered what excrucinting tortures rheumatism inflicts, and what a tendancy it has, when fully developed to attack the heart, the advisibility of an early use of such a reliable antidote becomes at once apparent. The rheumatic virus is expelled from the blood by the increased action of the kidneys—which act as strainers—produced by the Bitters, and the sufferer will find if he uses this supreme defensive agent, that he will be protected against a return of the agonizing complaint. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, liver and bowel complaints and other maladies, are also cured by this admirable remedy. apr.4 4t.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.—Read's Sore Throat and Catarrh Powder is one of the most wonderful articles of the present age for all affections of the throat, head, and lungs, including sore throats of any description, whether incipient, chronic, ulcerated, or consumptive. For catarrh, influenza, elongation of tonsils, quinsy, sore mouth, sore tongue, canker, sore lips, hoarseness, etc., and for clearing the voice it has no equal in the world. Ministers, lawyers, singers, and every one using the voice should use this wonderful powder, it can be sent by mail on receipt of 50 cents. W. H. Read, 179 W. Baltimore st., Baltimore, Md. The following gentlemen have used Read's Sore Throat and Catarrh Powder for years, and recommend it as the greatest remedy they ever knew: Rev. T. R. Slicer, N. Y. Conf: Rev. Drs. A. A. Reese, Jas. H. Brown, and Peck, Balt. Conf: Rev. Dr. E. J. Way, Phila. Conf: Rev. Dr. I. E. Gramme, P. E., Baltimore; Rev. Dr. Wm. S. Edwards, and thousands of others who consider it the greatest good of the age. Dec. 13-tf.

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty, that one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Color Restorer," the most delightful article ever introduced to the American people for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and at the same time a lovely hair dressing and beautifier. It is totally different from all others; not sticky and gummy, and free from all impure ingredients that render many articles obnoxious; in fact, it is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury. Sold by all dealers in fine toilet articles, at 75 cents a bottle, or six bottles for $4. E. Hart & Co., wholesale agents, New Orleans.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic affects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Class-Leader.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,

Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo..$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to hand into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous [illegible] and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have [illegible] color of skin, or yellowish-brown [illegible] on face or body, frequent headache or [illegible], bad taste in month, internal heat or [illegible] with hot flushes, low spirits [illegible] forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweets, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough; strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory.

THE FOUR ANCHORS.

The night is dark, but God, my God,
Is here and in command;
And sure am I, when morning breaks,
I shall be "at the land."
And since I know the darkness is [illegible] as gayest day,
[illegible] the anchor Patience out,
[illegible] wait—for day.

[illegible] the storm, but winds and [illegible]
Within His hand are held,
And, trusting in Omnipotence,
My fears are sweetly quelled.
If wrecked, I'm in his faithful grasp;
I'll trust Him, though He slay;
So, letting go the anchor Faith,
I'll wish—but wait—for day.

Still seem the moments dreary, long?
I rest upon the Lord;
I wait all His "eternal years,"
And feast upon His word;
His promises, so rich and great,
Are my support and stay;
I'll drop the anchor Hope ahead,
And wish—but wait—for day.

O [illegible], O light
[illegible] divine!
[illegible] doubt,
[illegible]
[illegible] believed,
[illegible]
[illegible] anchor Love,
I'll [illegible] day.

One half of the adult population of [illegible] in 1870 was illiterate. At [illegible] there were 5,658,144 [illegible] United States, over [illegible] who could not [illegible] native born, [illegible] were in the [illegible] 1,447,065 illit- [illegible] of whom [illegible] of foreign de- [illegible]: Massachu- [illegible] over ten [illegible] born were [illegible] remaining [illegible] foreign [illegible] native [illegible] of these candor extorts the remark that they are greatly lacking in organization, intelligence and morale. The Southern Presbyterian Church, according to the latest statistics, has 112,000 communicants; the Cumberland Presbyterian about the same, though only about 100,000 in the South; the Lutherans possibly as many, and the Protestant Episcopal Church has 67,928 in the Southern States, according to the Church Almanac of 1878. The Congregationalists have a number of organizations formed since the war, and are accomplishing much good, especially through the schools of the American Missionary Association. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has 715,951 white members; 2,083 colored members; 4,315 Indians, 3,271 traveling, 257 superannuated, and 5,462 local preachers; total, 731,361. In 1844 it organized with 439,233 members and 1,251 preachers; total 440,484; and in a short time wrested several thousand more from the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1860 it had 749,068 members, and 2,884 preachers; total, 751,952; loss in sixteen years, from 1860 to 1876, 20,501. It had in 1860 175,252 colored members, and has now but 2,083. The gain in white members and preachers during these sixteen years has been 148,243, an average of 9,265 a year. The African Methodist Episcopal Church has, perhaps, 180,000; the Zion Methodist Episcopal Church, 120,000; and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America, 80,000 in the South, though the last three are doubtless over-estimated. Allow to the Methodist Protestant 50,000. All other evangelical Churches in the South are small in numbers and feeble in influence except the Methodist Episcopal Church. Giving these denominations all they claim by the largest reasonable estimates, there are not over 2,800,000 nominal communicants in protestant Churches, not including our own, in the South. Supposing two additional adherents, for small children and outside friends, to one member, as many as facts will justify, they embrace only 8,400,000 in a population of 13,877,612, leaving five and a half millions without the Gospel, except as they receive it at the hand of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This is as good showing for the South as can be reasonably made. The practical work and efficiency of a Church is in part indicated by its Sunday-schools. Tried by this standard the condition of the South is appalling. The million and a quarter of Baptists only claim to have 220,000 in Sunday-schools. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South has 346,759; these two leading denominations, with two millions of members, having but a trifle over half a million in their Sunday-schools. Outside the Methodist Episcopal Church there are not a million persons even enrolled in Protestant Sunday-schools in the South, not an average of one in thirteen of the population. It is evident that there is ample room for the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South in addition to all the other Protestant forces in this section.

The Churches of the South as a whole, are lacking in moral strength. The people are generally orthodox in sentiment, believing in the inspiration of the Scriptures, the atonement, and in salvation from sin by faith in Christ alone. There is less skepticism in the public mind in the South than in the North. The first [illegible] of the law touching man's relations and obligations to God has been well maintained by the religious press and the pulpit, but the [illegible] view of man's duty to man has been greatly overlooked by [illegible] ministers and Churches. The [illegible] of the Gospel has been [illegible] neglected in precept and practice. The pulpit has been orthodox [illegible] teaching of the theory of religion so far as it has gone, but [illegible] in enforcing the divine precepts touching practical questions of [illegible] wrong.

[illegible] colored people, especially, [illegible] sufferers. They number [illegible] most of whom are [illegible] want, who have been [illegible] placed at our doors. [illegible] were brought to this country [illegible] the ignorance, poverty, and [illegible] barbarism, and here [illegible] held in the lowest [illegible] to mankind—slaves [illegible] degraded, they were [illegible] for freedom, [illegible] without lands, [illegible] man on the way from Jerusalem to Jerico, they have fallen among thieves, been waylaid, beaten, and left bleeding and half dead, while scarcely a Samaritan hand has been extended to bind up their wounds or alleviate their distresses. And yet they have kept the peace and struggled upward. They are rising to manhood, and cultivating a better social and Christian life. That they have done so well is the wonder of our times. God is with them; he pities them, and will care for them. For the Church to cast them off would be folly and sin. Of these there is no thought, but to help them to help themselves should be the aim and ambition of every Christian and philanthropist in the land. There are also thousands of whites as much neglected by the more favored classes as these, and whose condition calls for as deep sympathy and active co-operation. Surely no one will say that there is no need of this, or any other branch of the Church which is able to lend a hand in aid of these lowly and unfortunate classes.

The welfare of the country requires that all of these be taught in the duties of Christian citizenship in a free country. They vote, and otherwise take part in the affairs of State. Upon their action may depend the most momentous results. If intelligent, they may act independently and wisely; if ignorant they may fall a prey to demagogues, and by misapprehension of duty, bring shame and ruin upon the country. They will be a source of danger or of security; they will add strength or weakness to the nation as they are enlightened or neglected. There is more to be feared from the five and a half millions of illiterate citizens of the United States than from any other equal number of our people, because of the ease with which they may be misled in times of peril. The vicious are always suspected and watched, but an ignorant population may at any time, prove a broken reed, piercing the hand that leans upon it. Important events in our history, well calculated to arouse the thoughtless and to alarm even the most hopeful, have only been made possible by the ignorance of the multitudes. Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people; but there is little hope for better morals without more intelligence among the masses. In our country the people are sovereign, and an ignorant and corrupt ruler is a public calamity. Shall not the strongest church in America continue to do something in the darkest corner of our land for its future safety and well being?

Sailing of Rev. M. Y. Bovard.

From our Mission Rooms, New York, March 28, we have the following: We have already announced that two men had, somewhat recently, been appointed by Bishop Haven to Africa, and that they would sail about the first of April for their mission stations. One of the two, Rev. Melville Y. Bovard sailed from New York on Wednesday, March 27th, in the brig Mary E. Thayer, direct for Monrovia. He is appointed Superintendent of the Bopora Mission, the name by which the missionary field northwest of Liberia is now designated. It is not merely Bopora and vicinity that are to be reached, but any portion of the remoter interior to which we may be providentially led. Bopora itself is a large and important town, where it seems practicable to begin our work and where we hope to be able to erect proper quarters for the missionaries, and at once attempt the establishment of schools. Rev. Joel Osgood is supposed to be already at Bopora. It is uncertain when Brother Bovard may be able to join him, as he will arrive in Liberia in the rainy season, a time of year held by some to be favorable for acclimation, as the miasma is less than at the close of the rains, when the streams subside and the excessive vegetation begins to decay.

Bro. Bovard is supplied with cheap muslins and various other articles which are the substitute of currency after leaving the coast. Rev. Dr. Pinney also sailed in the same vessel. He goes out to endeavor to resuscitate the Liberia College, which has been long fostered by the American Colonization Society. There are no other passengers. A goodly company gath- [illegible] amongst whom [illegible] wife, daughter [illegible] This is the [illegible] by Dr. Pinney to Liberia. Just before the vessel was hauled out into the stream the company assembled in the cabin, and were led in prayer by Rev. Dr. Reid, Corresponding Secretary of the Missionary Society.

There was more of the old time missionary feeling in the parting than we have noticed in years. The indefiniteness of the field, the limited acquaintance with the conditions of life therein, the positive pioneering, if not original exploration, involved in the undertaking, the possible far-reaching results to a continent in darkness—all this, and much else enters into this case in so unusual a degree that it brings to mind the old heroic days of Methodism, and the self-denial and daring of the primitive missionaries to foreign lands. Will the Church not be moved to prayer for this young man who goes as her representative to the dark places of cruelty, and in untried paths?

Value of Class-Meetings.

[The subjoined testimonies were compiled by Rev. Thomas Chipperfield, of Rock River Conference.—New York Advocate.]

"It can scarce be conceived," writes Wesley, "what advantages have been reaped from this little prudential regulation. Many now happily experienced that Christian fellowship of which they had not so much as an idea before."—Stevens' History of Methodism, vol. ii, p. 453.

"It is by these blessed institutions (class-meetings) that the blind are led in the right way; the penitent encouraged; the tempted comforted, and all urged forward to the mark of the prize of our high calling."—Richard Watson.

"Nothing, indeed, could supply its place. It is a fact that cannot be concealed, that the most faithful, useful, and influential Methodists are most devoted to our peculiar meetings, especially the weekly class, and most punctual to attend, while the luke-warm worldly-minded and disaffected are least disposed to enjoy the priv'lege"—Bishop Morris.

"Our Methodist brethren have their weekly class-meetings for conference and contributions both; and these, I feel assured, are the sources and groundwork of the immense increase of that denomination, now largely ahead of us, though we had a century or more the start of them. Their class-meetings keep them all at it, and always at it."—Dr. Wayland.

"The class-meeting among the Methodists is nothing but the realization of the communion of saints. It has been the true life of everything in Methodism." — London Quarterly Review, Oct. 1854, p 131.

"The class-meeting has, more than any other means, preserved the original purity and vigor of Methodism. It is the best school of experimental divinity the world has seen in modern times."—Stevens' History of Methodism, vol. ii, p. 431.

"To sever it from the Methodistic system would be to inflict a paralyzing stroke, if not a death blow. Key's Class Leader's Manual.

"Much of the energy, unity, and stability of Methodism is due to the class system. The most intelligent and advanced Methodists hold it in high esteem."—McClintock and Strong's Cyclopedia.

"To surrender the class-meeting is to take the heart out of Methodism; to esteem it lightly is to enfeeble the pulsation of that heart." —Annual Address of the British Methodist Conference.

"The class-meeting has done more to promote Methodism than any other part of its organization, and that Methodism would never succeed as a spiritual power in the earth without class-leaders."—Rev. A. McCauley, President of the British Conference.

"I may be permitted to say that I do not believe the Methodist Church would have accomplished one-tenth part of the work she has accomplished in the last century had it not been for the class-meeting."—Bishop Simpson.

There is a prospect of a large emigration of English people, discouraged by stagnation of business, resulting from strikes, etc., to the mineral and agricultural lands of Alabama, following the investment of English capital in the railroads of that State.

"That's Thee, Jem!"

A TRUE AND TOUCHING STORY.

I was some few years ago sojourning at a very beautiful and much frequented English watering-place. I met with an earnest Christian tradesman of the town, whose labors in the cause of religion are many and great. Although his occupation was not in selling books, yet he had, in a prominent place in his shop window, an assortment of Bibles, with an illuminated card containing this announcement: "Luther's Sword Sold Here!" With one of these "swords" that Christian soldier, whom I shall here call by the name of Mr. Carr, fought and won the following battle:

A band or "troupe" of young men, with hands and face blackened, and dressed in very grotesque costumes, arranged themselves before this gentleman's door one day for an exhibition of their peculiar "performances." These people used to be called "Ethiopian Serenaders." After they had sung some comic and some plantive melodies, with their own peculiar accompaniments of gestures and grimaces, one of the party, a tall and interesting young man, who had the "look" of one who was beneath his proper station, stepped up to the door, tamborine in hand, to ask for a few "dropping pennies" of the people. Mr. Carr, taking one of the Bibles out of the window, addressed the youth:

"See here, young man," he said, "I will give you a shilling and this book besides, if you will read a portion of it among your comrades there, and in the hearing of the bystanders."

"Here's a shilling for an easy job!" he chuckeled it out to his mates, "I'm going to give you a public reading!"

Mr. Carr opened at the fifteenth chapter of St. Luke's gospel, and pointing to the eleventh verse, requested the young man to commence reading at that verse.

"Now, Jem speak up!" said one of the party, "and earn your shilling like a man!"

And Jem took the book and read "And He said, a certain man had two sons; and the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living."

There was something in the voice of the reader, as well as in the strangeness of the circumstances, that lulled all to silence; while an air of seriousness took possession of the youth, and still further commanded the rapt attention of the crowd.

He read on, "And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance in riotous living."

"That's thee, Jem!" ejaculated one of his comrades; "it's just like what you told me of yourself and your father!"

The reader continued: "And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land, and he began to be in want."

"Why, that's thee again, Jem!" said the voice. "Go on."

"And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his field to feed swine, and he would fain have filled his belly with husks that the swine did eat, and no man gave unto him."

"That's like us all!" said the voice, once more interrupting; "we're all beggars, and might be better than we are! Go on: let's hear what came of it."

And the young man read on, and as he read his voice trembled: "And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! I will arise and go to my father."

At this point he fairly broke down, and could read no more. All were impressed and moved. The whole reality of the past rose up to view, and in the clear story of the Gospel a ray of hope dawned upon him for his future. His father—his father's house—and his mother's too; and the plenty and the love ever bestowed upon him there; and the hired servants, all having enough; and then himself, his father's son, and his present state, his companionships, his habits, his sins, his poverty, his outcast condition, his absurdly questionable mode of living—all these came climbing like an invading force of thoughts and reflections into the citadel of his mind, and fairly overcame him.

That day—that scene—proved the turning point of that young prodigal's life. He sought the advice of the Christian friend who had thus providentially interposed for his deliverance. Communications were made to his parents which resulted in a long-lost and early-loved child returning to the familiar earthly home; and still better, in his return to his Heavenly Father! He found, as I trust my readers will, how true are the promises of the parable of the "Prodigal Son," both for time and for eternity.—Ex.

What are You at Home.

Strolling round among members who live on the suburbs of our town I found two boys playing marbles. The boys play a different game now from what I used to play. We had a ring, with a big marble in the center, and to plump that out from taw was to win the game. Now they had a straight line, with two marbles and "play for keeps." I always stop to talk with boys, and I stopped to have a chat with these. I told them how we used to play, and they told me how they play now. "Well," said I, "boys, you don't play for keeps, do you?" One of them cut his eyes at me a moment, and said, "Ain't you Joe Hooper's pa?" "Yes," said I, "but how did you know it?" "You can't get him to play for keeps. He says its gambling, and that his pa says so." I was gratified to hear such a good account of one of my boys from a stranger, for it is not always so. But that boy's recognition of me through my little son set me to thinking. He is not at all like me in person, but when I began to denounce a certain game as sin the intuition of that strange boy led him to know me as the father of his playmate. Isn't it often the case that our children are but the reprints, a kind of pocket edition of ourselves? As they sit around the fireside and hear us talking; as they ask us questions and receive, sometimes, an inconsiderate answer; as they watch our indoor life, when we are not on guard, and draw their inferences, are we not holding a most solemn position,—and unconsciously giving tone, and taste, and character to those who, of all others, ought to concern us most? You are rich, your children may inherit your riches. You are poor, but your children may be rich. You are talented, and your children may inherit your talents. But you can not convey to them by will your education, or your principles, or your religion. These are to be impressed upon them, not by one act, but by the constant persevering efforts of your daily life. But under "the grace of God" they may become, and they will become, what we most desire them, and in nine cases out of ten will be reprints of ourselves. Let us learn, them, to "show piety at home."—Christian at Work.

Stopping too Late.

When I was in Charmoni, Switzerland, I saw in the window of one of the shops a picture that impressed my mind very much. It was a picture of an accident on the side of one of the Swiss mountains. A company of travelers, with guides, went up some very steep places, which but few travelers attempted to go up. They were, as all travelers are there, fastened together with cords at the waist so that if one slipped the rope would hold him—the rope fastened to the others. Passing along the most dangerous point, one of the guides slipped, and they all started down the precipice; but after a while, one more muscular than the rest struck his heels into the ice and stopped; but the rope broke, and down, hundreds and thousands of feet, the rest went. And so I see whole families bound together by ties of affection, and in many cases walking on slippery places of worldliness and sin. The father knows it and the mother knows it, and they are bound all together. After awhile they begin to slide down, steeper and steeper, and the father becomes alarmed and he stops, planting his feet on the "Rock of Ages." He stops, but the rope breaks, and those who were tied fast to him by moral and spiritual influences once, go over the precipice. Oh! there is such a thing as coming to Christ soon enough to save ourselves, but not soon enough to save others.—Talmage.

A fine telescope, presented by Mr. L. J. McCormick to the University of Virginia, has been declined, because the State cannot mount it as stipulated in the gift. It is to be hoped that some one will be found to build the observatory, and thus secure for the State a telescope said to be the third largest in the world.

Ministerial Modesty.

Modesty shines nowhere more beautifully than in the character of a minister. As an ambassador he stands not for himself but for his Lord, and should ever keep his interests in front. A worthy representative of the Master does not need to proclaim himself; his excellency will shine forth as the sun, and the odor of his virtue become diffused like a precious ointment, the fragrance filling the whole house. How unworthy a thing for such a man to be ever on the alert to obtain conspicuity, to impress the public with his ability to preach himself rather than the Lord who sent him forth! The modest minister will not have much to say of himself or of his doings; they are, in his veiw, too poor to be proclaimed on the house-top or in the newspaper. If he preaches a great sermon, or is blessed with an extensive revival, he is reticent on the matter until the work has been proved, and then no trumpets are needed. His works praise him in the gates. In all his modes of expression, too, he is self-oblivious. Cautious in giving forth his own experience, he recognizes the importance and excellency of those to whom he ministers. He never speaks of "my people," of "my church," or of "my services." His own life is merged in that of the flock; he is only one of "our people," only a servant in God's house.—Zion's Herald.

First Methodist Episcopal Ordination in Japan.

Sunday evening, Feb. 17, 1878, Bishop Wiley ordained, as deacon in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. Yoitsu Honda, a Japanese local preacher, who had been duly examined and recommended by the Quarterly Conference of Hirosaki, Japan, and elected by deacons order's by the Newark Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, United States of America. The ordination service was conducted in the new mission church in Hakodati, Japan, (which the Bishop had dedicated the afternoon of the same day) and in the presence of a large Japanese audience, who evinced the liveliest interest in the solemn service. Mr. Honda being well acquainted with English, the Bishop conducted the ordination service in that language. Mr. Honda, just before his ordination, preached a stirring discourse in Japanese from the text, "Wilt thou be made whole?"—N. Y. Advocate.

Jew and Christian.

Some time ago, one of our Methodist organizations was holding a revival service to the annoyance of the residents living around their church building; some of the non-church-goers got up a petition for signers, intending to present them as a nuisance. The paper was handed to a Jew for his signature. After reading he refused to sign it. The persons expressed great surprise. One said, "Are you not a Jew?" "Yes." "Well, why not sign the paper, and help us get rid of their noise every night?" Said the Jew, "If those people are honest in their belief, let them alone; if I thought and believed that the Messiah had already come, I would stand on the corner of the streets and day and night proclaim it with all the noise I could make to attract the people." This stopped the paper, and was a rebuke to the signers; it is a rebuke to us. We profess to believe, and yet how cold and lukewarm are we as believers of such a truth.

"Rum Did It."

That's the stereotyped phrase—"Rum did it"—and our sympathies go out to the criminal who made himself such, voluntarily, by taking the rum. "Rum did it!" It is a lie and a false charge against a dead, unconscious thing, that has no power to defend itself. The man himself committed the crime, under the influence, perhaps, of an insanity excited by the use of rum, but the man and not the rum is the responsible agent.—The temperance reform will begin at the right end and move onward, when men are made to realize that they, and not the liquors they drink, are the parties with whom the law must deal. "Rum did it!" is a false and pernicious sentiment that is doing more mischief than rum itself.

The Church of To-day.

We do not say what is about to follow in anything like a croaking spirit, but we have some fear that the church of to-day is not quite so full of the true espirit de corps of old time Christianity as it should be. We have had what might almost be called a mania for great churches, expensive churches. The village has vied with the city, and the cities have vied with one another, while in each great city there have been several rival societies, each striving to out-do the other in magnificent display of architectural beauty; in other words, each striving to see which could put the largest mortgage on the record. Now, if men of large wealth choose to expend their means in the erection of large and expensive church edifices, on the ground of personal liberty, they have the undoubted right to do so, but we hold that they have not at least the moral right to burden the societies with debts which crush out the spiritual life of all the people.

We think too many churches in christendom are simply corporations—they exist as mere societies of men and women. What they want is a large and elite congregation, fine talking in the pulpit and general good order. These people are usually whimsical, captious, and sit on the sermon as a goose sits on an egg to hatch out a criticism on manner or matter. It is not heart with them, but brain; it is not christanity in its essence, its power, its real work and worth, but society which occupies a plane a good way below the genuine Christianity. These same societies have a mission, and do some good, but they do not measure up to the New Testament standard. We would not have them blotted out of existence, but rather spiritualized. It is a sad commentary on Christianity when a church of commanding proportions and influential position comes, by general consent, to be known as "The Corpse." Yet we know of one which meets the above description. The appropriate question to ask the people as they come out of its great doors is, "Have you had a good sleep to-day?" There are more sleepers than pillars. The captious spirit of many in their likes and dislikes, is seen in the way they receive and treat their pastor. If they do not happen to fancy the [illegible] world by leaving their pews vacant most of the time. They remark, "he is not my style of man," or "I don't like him." They do not know why, only they know they don't and act accordingly.

And thus people injure their church and themselves in order to vent some personal whim. The man whom you say you do not like might do you a world of good after all, if you would only let him have the opportunity. The minister is not the church. He is only one, an officer. You cannot expect much good to come to you if you reject the Lord and all the good in the church because of some mere prejudice in your heart against one person, even if that should be the minister.

A much despised general was about to review a brigade in the army, when a regiment proposed to show their hatred by withholding the accustomed salutations. But the colonel said, "No, boys; honor the uniform if not the man, it is a symbol that commands your respect. Salute the office if not the officer." So we say respect and love your church though you may not be in sympathy with every person in it.

The true Christian supports his church from principle—as a religious duty—he loves it for itself, he is not captious, he finds good in the [illegible] and appropriates it as the bee gets honey out of the lowliest flower by the way side. The church is a very holy institution and it should have our most ardent affection.

We know very well that the membership is often taxed very severely to support the cause, but is it not worth it?

Many churches have pressing debts, and these are a source of constant annoyance; people are nervous, restive. There is a state of [illegible] feverish anxiety in the minds of the officiary. They rush after every new minister they hear of, and thus keep up just enough excitement to prevent any very decided [illegible]. We do not say that it was [illegible] so in the days of old. Those days are passed with their good and evil; it was not so much so formerly, we think, as now. But what we wish to say is that in the good time coming, it will not be so. The golden [illegible] of the church lies in the [illegible] when that time comes [illegible] be a holy body, full [illegible] de corps, free [illegible] debts, a live [illegible] will dwell [illegible] Let us [illegible] New [illegible] be [illegible]

What is Religion?

We mean by the above question spiritual religion in the heart and not any system of faith merely. There are skeptical minded people in the world, not a few, who try to reason away all that which we call religion. They tell us it is superstition and they brand all the believers in Christ as the morest fanatics and enthusiasts. But are they not mistaken in their judgement? We hold that there is something as certain and real in that peculiar experience called a change of heart as there is in the shining of the sun, or the roar of the thunder. Men may differ as to what religion is, as an abstract principle, but that there is something which strangely and superuaturally affects the heart, is certain. To say there is no such thing or condition, is indeed to deny the experience of millions of intelligent and holy people in every part of the world.

St James says, in answer to this question, that it is to "visit the fatherless and the widows in their afflictions," and to keep one's self "unspotted from the world." St. Paul says we are justified by faith. So, to the casual or indifferent reader, there is a contradiction—a conflict of opinions between James and Paul. The one teaching the justification of works, the other the justification of faith. But upon a more careful examination, we may discover that Paul is speaking of the sinner who is saved from his sins by faith, while James is speaking of the believer whose piety must show itself by works. Hence we see there is no disagreement, but the most perfect concord.

Now if we ask, what is religion? Paul's answer is, the implanting in the heart a new life principle. We are thus "born again"—begotten of God into a lively hope by the faith of Jesus. "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men." "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

But there is an outward manifestation of religion which proceeds from this principle within. It begins in the heart and goes out in the life so that James tells us it is to "visit the fatherless and the widows in their afflictions"—that is, it means to be broadly benevolent, to be active in doing good to all men. This exactly corresponds with the rule laid down by the Savior. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Religion begins with a recognition of the enormity of sin—sin as offensive to God, as something destructive to the human peace, as a wrong in itself. It implies confession of sin, repentance of sin, a determination to sin no more. It implies a recognition of the Fatherhood of God, and the divine atonement of Jesus, as well as the entire reliance on the Redeemer of men. But it goes still further. It means a new heart; a heart cleansed from its stains by the "blood of sprinkling." It goes still further, it means a setting apart of all we have and are to God in the holiest consecration. All of this we should seek after. With anything less than this we should not be content. But we should grow up into Christ in all things.

Good Training at Home.

Not long ago we were asked by a mother to lay down some rules for the proper training of young people. This is a difficult and delicate subject. Nothing but age and experience can fit one for so difficult a task. And even then human judgment is, with the wisest and best men, too weak and shortsighted for this. It is a subject which parents may well carry up to God and ask direction of their Heavenly Father. For it often happens that when parents have done their best, avoiding extremes and regarding their children with a vigilance which knows no weariness, we say even then it happens that these same children go to destruction—madly, blindly do they rush down the steep of moral death.

We have no rules to lay down. But still we will present some thoughts from the stand-point of Christianity. And, first, let it be understood that true piety does not impose on young people a soberness and solemnity that is oppressive and which is antagonistic to all the instincts of young life. It is just as natural for young people to be bright and cheerful and happy as it is for the birds to sing or the flowers to bloom. Now, you blind the young people down to gloominess, moroseness—crush out their nature, the nature which God has given them, and it need not be wondered at if they have a disrelish for all religion. "The only thing," said one, "I can remember at home with distinctness is the absolute sternness which made a laugh a sin, and the outburst of playfulness an offense in the sight of God." That is a false religion which perverts nature and puts the whole being into mourning.

Children should grow up in the midst of home pleasures and joys, with suitable innocent amusements, made as far as possible instructive to the mind, and thus they will be made to love home and all associations of home. And, as a general thing, they will be less willing to leave home permanently. There is no scarcity in these entertainments which combine instruction for the mind with good morals and the purest pleasures. The principal thing which we as parents or Sunday School teachers, or as preachers, have to do is to teach the difference between simple right and wrong. Arm the child with this armor of defense against the attacks of the enemy of the soul.

Everything should be done which can be to lead the children into the life of true spiritual religion. We put the question squarely: Are you this moment as anxious to have your daughter pious with a pure and joyful religion, modest and intelligent, as you are to have her graceful, fashionable and attractive? Do you encourage your children in all ways which look to the establishment of the heart in true righteousness? Do you set them an example of a cheerful and hearty christianity every day? Will they recollect you as a praying man or woman? Will their lives be made pleasant by the recollection of the times when you went with them hand in hand to the place of worship? or will they recollect you as irreligious, undevout, absorbed in selfishness and worldliness? Which! One reason why so many young men and women are irreligious is because they see so little exhibition of religon at home. These are plain words but they are true.

The Phonograph.

Not of science "falsely so-called" but of science truthfully so-called do we write. It is not yet half a century since the dictionary makers had to put a new word into their vocabulary; namely, the word now so familiar, "telegraph." When it was first discovered that the electrical currents could be utilized in the interest of swift communication of thought it was almost regarded as a miracle. Gradually has that which was new and startling become old and common. The telegraph surprises nobody now. The only wonder is how the world got on so well and so long without it. If the electrical currents should become deranged all of a sudden some day, a thing not likely to occur, so that messages could not be sent it would almost destroy the business of the world, so much does the business world depend upon the omnipresent wire. Go back a hundred years, when Washington, the "Father of his country," was living. That great man never saw a steamboat, or a railroad car, or a friction match, or telegraph, or sewing machine; and yet he managed somehow to live and be useful. These things, therefore, are not absolutely essential to life. Now, however, they seem to be for everything is adjusted with reference to them.

Next comes the telephone, by which the human voice is carried a distance of two or three hundred miles so as to be distinctly audible. Think of two persons talking with each other three hundred miles apart! The science is yet in its infancy and the instruments used are imperfect. Doubtless the day will come when a man in New Orleans can place his lips to the speaking-tube and say good morning to his wife in New York or London as easily as we can now speak from one room in the house to another.

But the last sensation is the phonograph—the sound-writer, as the word in plain English means. A machine has been invented which will carefully record, on tin-foil, a sermon, speech, lecture or concert. This can then be laid away and next year, or a score, or a hundred of years hence, the whole can be reproduced with perfection in every particular. It is indeed wonderful and illustrates the old saying that "truth is often more strange than fiction." Imagine these sound-writers everywhere recording conversations. There might be some startling revelations in social life if all that is said in the secret places should be proclaimed upon the house top. But we wait. The world moves; what next will startle us we know not. Science is at work unfolding God's hidden resources, and as Galileo said once we say now, "The world moves."

The May number of Golden Hours is before us for examination, and critical as one should be in recommending literature for the young, we are free to wish every child in the land had the reading of this magazine, published by Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Obio. $1.60 per year.

The New Orleans Sunday School Association.

We have before mentioned the organization of this Association and are pleased to note that it is actively taking hold of work. By a report given from the Executive Committee the objects of the Association are as follows:

1. The perfection of Sunday School statistics, and their presentation to the membership in manner and form best adapted to foster and increase that interest, and afford that encouragement and profitable knowledge which are the best fruits of trustworthy and copious statistics.

2. The communication of such various methods of school organization, management, instruction, etc., as the experience of idividual workers here and there may have shown to be useful and valuable; thus to make available to all whatever one or another has found desirable and profitable in the work of the superintendent, secretary, librarian or teacher.

3. A continuous, intelligent and general knowledge of each other's needs; the saving of waste material by well-supplied Sabbath Schools, and their distribution to indigent schools, according to the expressed preference of the donors.

4. To quote literally: "To gather and disseminate all manner of intelligence valuable to the Sunday School cause, and to do this in a general and therefore unofficial and unofficious manner."

The Executive Committee represents the various churches of the city, and are as follows: Messrs. R. M. Wamsley, J. H. Keller, R. H. Browne, Frank Butler, and C. H. Shute. The annual dues have been fixed at $1.00 and no assessments can be levied, and no debts be made.

The statistics of the Sunday Schools of the City have been gathered. We give one table show- the Peace Probable.

After all, the hope gains ground that England and Russia will not go to war. The latest dispatches are to the effect that Germany, led by the prudent and sagacious Bismark, was acting as peacemaker with good effect. There are strong prudential reasons which indicate that all the great powers would prefer peace to war. Germany and Austria are satisfied as they are, and war would endanger especially the territory of the latter, and might draw Germany into trouble. Turkey has had enough war. Russia is greatly in debt and war with England would add greatly to her burdens. England is committen before the world to peace to the last extremity. France has her International exhibition in hand which will bring her millions of dollars if there is peace. Let England be moderate in her demands and we will have no war.

The case of Mrs. Ormsby, in this city soon to be tried for murder, excites great interest. Mrs. Ormsby, a milliner on Magazine street, has been the mother of eleven children, six of whom are living. She is respected by all who know her and has, for years, supported herself and family. She has a husband, who for three years has rented rooms and "kept a mistress" in the person of a strumpet named Josie Lawler. The outraged wife, learning of this fact after repeated expostulations with her recreant husband, it is said, declared she would kill Josie. It is also said that she procured some cakes, put poison in them and sent them to her home with directions that only she should eat them. Another woman ate them and died. This is the statement upon which the coroner's jury gave the verdict that the deceased came to her death by poison from cakes sent to the house by Mrs. Ormsby. The unfortunate lady gives signs which indicate that her grief has unsettled her mind. This is the opinion of ladies who have visited her in the Parish Prison. We hope this will be proved true and that she will not be convicted of murder.

But what shall be said of the husband of this unfortunate lady? There is no law in this State by which even a public adulterer can be punished. The last "reform" legislature refused to pass such a law. Here is a man, who, still professing to be true to the wife who has borne him children, and whose brains and industry give bread to him and his, maintains criminal relations with a public harlot. God is indeed good; else the earth on which he treads would open and he be hurled into the bottomless pit.

We have a supply of new books, and are ready to supply our preachers and people. Read the advertisements, and see what you need and send your orders and the cash.

Simon's Supper.

When the Lord Jesus with his disciples visited Bethany for the last time, Simon made a great supper, and invited in Lazarus and many of the Jews who wished to see the wonderful Life-restorer. Mary had an alabaster box of rare and costly perfume. While they sat at supper, Mary brought in the box, broke it open and poured the precious oil on the head of our Lord. It ran down to his feet, and she wiped his feet with her hair, while the odor filled the house where they were. Judas was angry at this, and asked, "Why this waste?" for it could have been sold for so much and given to the poor. "The poor ye have always with you," saith our Lord, "but me ye have not always," and He added, that wherever his gospel shall be preached, what this woman had done unto Him should be told for a memorial of her. Here is a lesson of moment to us all, that the true test of believing is personal attachment to the Lord Jesus Christ. The wants of the poor are obvious; these sufferings and tears are within sight of us, appealing to our natural sympathies, and a benevolent activity in their behalf may and does exist in selfish, envious and worldly hearts. It was Judas who was angry at the waste. But while kindness to the poor is everywhere commanded by the word of God, it is not proof, in itself, of a renewed and sanctified heart; that rests upon a personal love to the personal Christ, and the humblest acts of devotion and love done in his name for his sake, will be held in everlasting remembrance when more renowned charities have perished. Without the Lord, as believers, we can do nothing.

J. D. HAY.

Henderson, Tenn.

Fort Worth, Texas

The Lord is with us. We organized the St. Paul M. E. Church in Fort Worth, Dec. 4, 1877, a little over four months ago, and now have 48 members and 8 probationers. Have purchased three lots on the corner of Ninth and Main streets, the exact center of the city as surveyed. Paid $500. Have built a parsonage 16x24 feet, 1½ stories high costing $300, all paid for. Are now building a church 30x50, with class rooms, etc., and have money enough to enclose it. Have received no missionary aid. The people have supplied my necessities, so far, but it is close work. The Church Extension donated us $500 and loaned us $500, which makes our success certain. We have as good a membership, pious and willing, as I ever met, but we are poor. I am satisfied we have a great work to do in this land. But our people would be more useful and a greater work be done if the M. E. Church, South, would drop the South, and be more genial, so we could go into the church and revive real, genuine piety, and not build up another Methodism, for the two will eventually be one. We expect to occupy our church next month.

Fort Worth, April 3d, 1878.

Holly Springs, Miss., District Conference.

The District Conference met at Kosciusko, March 23d, 1878, the presiding elder, Rev. J. G. Johnson, in the chair. "Be careful brethren! Discharge the duties assigned you as ministers of the gospel" was the admonition of the chair to the members present.

On motion, it was resolved to double the annual assessment for the benefit of Shaw University, made by the last Annual Conference.

On motion it was resolved to hold a District Sunday-school Convention and the following named members from different parts of the District were selected to constitute a committee to determine the time and place, and to arrange a programme of exercises for such Convention: President W. W. Hooper, chairman, Rev. D. A. Williams, Prof. Higate, Mrs. M. A. Harvey, Miss Anna Howard, M. A. Trotter and A. Frazier.

It was the request of the Conference that a synopsis of its proceedings be published in the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE.

A. FRAZIER, Secretary.

Dallas Commercial: The completion of the Texas Pacific will not only add an immense population to Texas, and thus increase her Congressional representation and consequence in the Electoral College, but it will give two new States to the Union, namely, New Mexico and Arizona. These beautiful territories, abounding in resources of soil and mineral wealth, will at once fill up with a population sufficient to entitle them admission to the sisterhood of States. The South will thus gain four United States Senators and several members of Congress.

To think kindly of each other is good; to speak kindly of each other is better; but to act kindly towards one another is best of all.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. H. Green, pastor at First Street M. E. Church, of this city reports an interesting revival in that church. There have been thirteen conversions and eighteen accessions to the church. The interest is unabated.

Rev. G. W. Townsend, Boerne, Texas: "We have had three recent accessions to the church, and on last Sunday night there were many at the altar for prayers. There are four appointments on the work, and flourishing Sunday-schools at each. Three teachers for day-shools are needed within the bounds of this work—competent teachers could get good situations here."

Rev. A. M. Gregory, Waco, Texas: "We have just closed a two weeks meeting in which there were forty-eight conversions and fifty-two accessions to the church. Such a revival had not been known here before. The Lord has graciously blessed us, the membership have received new spiritual life, and we realize 'how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.'"

Rev. Stephen Priestly, Pleasant Plains Church of this city: "A festival recently given for the benefit of the church by the ladies, under the direction of Mrs. Cecelia Lewis and Mrs. Mary Walker, proved a success. The amount realized came to our depleted treasury in very opportune time, and was very gratefully received. Our work goes on in peace. The missionary meetings held with the children once a month are very interesting."

Rev. N. Cannon, Meridian, Miss.: "We have had seven recent accessions to the church on probation and eleven in full connection. All moves on harmoniously. The Meridian Academy, Mrs. M. V. Keener principal, is in a very flourishing condition. We were fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. Keener, for she gives entire satisfaction, and then she is a great Sunday-school worker, and is of great assistance to us in that way. The people are so pleased with the Academy that they now want a College located here."

Rev J. W. Robinson, Waxahachie, Texas; "Our quarterly meeting, just held by our presiding elder, Rev. D. Gregory, was an occasion of deep spiritual interest. A large number of persons presented themselves at the altar for prayers, and when opportunity was given four united with the church on probation, two were received from the A. M. Church and two from the M. E. Church of America. We commenced our organization at this place at the beginning of this conference year with two members. We now have a good sized congregation in regular attendance, and a good Sunday-school. The people know that the old M. E. Church has been the champion of their freedom, and of their temporal and spiritual blessings in the past and they seek her protection for the future by coming within her fold."

General Religious Items.

Two native Chinamen, converted to Christianity at the meetings held in the Chinese Mission House of the M. E. Church in San Francisco, have been licensed as local preachers.

The Presbytery of Florida has been divided into the Presbytery of Florida and the Presbytery of St. John's. It is proposed to add the Presbytery of Savanah, in Georgia, and form the Synod of Florida.

The Frst M. E. Church, South, of Atlanta, will be finished for General Conference, and will be one of the most beautiful and commodious in the South. The pews alone, seating 1200 persons, cost $3,000.

At Havre de Grace, Md., one hundred and twenty-six persons have united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Forty-six young men (composing a social class) were among the converts, and by a formal vote changed their club into a Young Men's Christian Association.

At the late session of the Kentuky M. E. Conference, a report was adopted that no local preacher ought to be licensed, and no layman elected to official position in the Church, who does not and will not take one of our Church periodicals.

There are in Mexico of missionaries (foreign), male, 10; female, 22; native, 57; school-teachers, 35; Bible colporteurs, 15; all other agents, 22; congregations, 137; members, or probable adherents, 12,000; churches, 16; other places of worship, 121; Sunday-schools, 36; male pupils, 636; female pupils, 501; orphanages, 3; orphans, 105; Bible and tract depositories, 14; presses in use, 11; periodicals issued, 7.

The statistics of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States, according to Sadlier's Almanac, are as follows: Archbishops, 11; bishops, 54; priests, 5,548; churches, 5,634; chapels and stations, 11,777; theological seminaries, 21; ecclesiastical students, 1,121; colleges, 74; schools, 519; parish schools, 2,130; asylums, 248; hospitals, 102. There are no exact statistics of the Catholic population of the United States; it is estimated at from 5,000,000 to 8,000,000, the smaller figure being probably more nearly correct.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will be petitioned to abolish the pastoral term from the government of the church. The official board of Trinity Church, Richmond, Va., has adopted a memorial asking the general conference "to remove all limit to the pastoral term, or else to confer on the several annual conferences the full power to extend the successive annual pastoral terms indefinitley, as the wisdom of each may be determined by the wants of their people." The memorial is published entire in the Richmond Advocate, and will no doubt meet a hearty seconding from many of the city congregations of the church. In 1866 a similar proposition was before the conference, and received a minority vote of 72, embracing many prominent men of the church.

General News Items.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The excitement in the City Hall over the death of Wm. M. Tweed remains unabated, and some of the older employees, who served under the Boss, are wearing mourning. It is not expected that any official action will be taken in the matter.

LONDON, April 13.—Everything is very quiet. There is absolutely nothing new from the East. Everything now seems to indicate a peaceful solution of the trouble, and it is said that the war preparations, both in Russia and throughout Great Britain, have been greatly diminished within the last few days.

MEMPHIS, April 15.—A destructive fire occurred at Clarksville, the principal tobacco market of Tennessee, yesterday morning. The best judges estimate the loss at $500,000. The burnt district covers fifteen acres. The insurance is estimated at $150,000, but has not yet been itemized.

NEW YORK. April 11.—Bayard Taylor, United States Minister to Germany, sailed to-day in the steamship Holsatia. Mrs. Murat Halstead, daughter and son, Miss Jenny and Robert, and Mark Twain and family, are passengers in the same steamship.

The World says this is a distinction necessary to be kept in mind; an unscrupulous man may be not altogether odious if the ends for which he chooses his means without scripture are worth aiming at. But if he has no aims except purple and fine linen and champagne, and violates all the duties of life in order to put himself above its decencies, it is impossible to make anything out of him except a vulgar and commonplace criminal. That was the case with Tweed.

WASHINGTON, April 10—The House Committee on Mississippi Levees to-day agreed to the bill authorizing the appointment of a commission to report upon the improvement of the Mississippi levees from St. Louis to the mouth of the river.

The commission is to consist of three army officers, to be appointed by the Secretary of War, and three civilians, to be appointed by the President, with an annual salary of $3500. The bill appropriates $250,000 to defray the expenses of the survey to be made by the commission, salaries, etc.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The Graphic's Washington special says: The President stated, that he intended to do all that was possible and lawful for him to do to assist the Republican party in the approaching campaign. When the congressional committee calls on him for assistance he says that he will meet them half way. As to recinding the order prohibiting office holders from mingling in politics, he could not accommodate them, but would refer to the letter Attorney General Devens wrote Collector Simmons just before the campaign in Massachusetts last fall, for an interpretation of the order.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., April 15.—The community is excited over a double murder committed at the African Metodist Church last night. While the crowd was coming out after the evening service, Wm. Baker stepped upon a lady's dress. She resented the act as intentional. A friend, Tobias Hanna, took up the quarrel, as he had an old grudge against Baker, and after a few words drew a revolver and shot at him. The weapon was knocked up, so that the ball missed Baker, but struck a bystander, Clarence Hubbard, killing him almost instantly. Not content with this bloody deed, Hanna fired again at Baker, inflicting a fatal wound, from which he died at 3 o'clock this morning. All the parties concerned are colored, and well known in this city. Hanna was immediately arrested and lodged in jail.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—In the Senate, Mr. Dennis, of Maryland, presented, as he said, by request, the famous Blair resolutions looking to the removal of Hayes and they were referred to the Judiciary Committee. In presenting the document, Mr. Dennis took occasion to remark that he had no sympathy with the movement and sincerely deprecated it. There was an unusual expression of approbation from Senators of both parties, of Dennis' remarks and Mr. Conkling, as he finished, at once walked across the chamber and shook his hand. Several other Senators followed Conkling's example, and Vice President Wheeler left the chair to offer his congratulations.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Burnside's bill to repeal the statutes by which three regiments of the army are composed exclusively of colored men, and providing for the general enlistment of colored men and their distribution throughout the entire service was considered in the Senate to-day without reaching a conclusion, but it gave Mr. Bruce an opportunity to make a very sensible speech, for which he was afterward complimented by Thurman, Conkling, Blaine, and other Senators in their remarks. Bruce favored the bill and said that he hoped the time had come when there would be no further race legislation in Congress, and that the word "color" would not longer appear on the statute books. He said that the colored men had been made citizens, and they wanted no further legislative patronage. They wanted to be left to make their own way in the world and enjoy the condition and position which the talents, industry, and character of each one would command He wanted the colored regiments of the army abolished, and the colored men admitted to all branches of the service upon the same regulations that white soldiers were enlisted.

April 28, 1878.—THE RECHABITES. Scripture.—Jer. 35 : 12-19.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the Lord."—13.

TOPIC.—"For the wages of sin is death: but the gift of God is eternal life."—Rom. 6:23.

Obeying an Earthly Father. (12–14) —The temptation was in private. The lesson to be derived from it was to be made public. When the Rechabites had stood the test so nobly, then God commanded Jeremiah to go and tell the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem of their [illegible] fidelity to the injunctions of [illegible]. The message that [illegible] "Thus saith the Lord of [illegible] of Israel." Both expressions are strong, and are joined in this way to give double weight to what follows.

Obeying the Heavenly Father (18).—From the "also" that appears in the first line of this verse, it would seem that some more direct communication was referred to in [illegible] than through [illegible] of the prophets. Per- [illegible] to these inti- [illegible] the [illegible] Faith- [illegible] which are God's [illegible] to their [illegible] He [illegible] as they [illegible] been [illegible] additions [illegible] these [illegible] and [illegible] in [illegible] to his [illegible] himself [illegible] put into ple of God. For it contains nothing unreasonable, whereas the injunctions of Jonadab were most severe and arbitrary. There is none whose yoke is so easy and whose burden is so light as Christ's. The one whose own yoke was galling and whose burden was heavy best knows how to spare his followers. And, next, it included a promise which Jonadab could not have given—that of always living in the land which God had promised them. "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

The Reward of Disobedience (16–17).—The judgments which God threatens to bring upon Judah and Jerusalem are, of course, not spoken because the Rechabites were obedient to their ancestors, but because "this people hath not hearkened unto me,"—not because the Rechabites had done well, but because the people had done evil. The announcement of the terrible punishments in store for them is preceded again, by the words: "Thus saith the Lord God of hosts, the God of Israel." In them is expressed both power and fidelity in the keeping of the words spoken. The threat was that he would bring upon them all the evil he had pronounced against them. Turn back the pages of the Bible until you come to Lev. 26: 14–39, and to Deut. 28: 15–68, and see what a terrible cloud was hanging over the devoted nation. It was surcharged with calamities the most dreadful. Some of its thunderbolts had already been discharged, and others still were just ready to be launched. And yet it does not appear that the utterance of this had any effect upon the people. They seemed stolid and unreachable. Now turn forward the leaves of the sacred book until you come to that part in Revelations where the vials of wrath are poured out, and where the doom of the impenitent is spoken of. Men hear of those now with the same indifference that Judah manifested towards the warnings of Jeremiah. And yet, it may be, that for many who hear them, they are as near fulfillment as were the judgments that that prophet uttered in the ears of Judah and Jerusalem!

The Reward of Obedience (18–19).—That reward was a promise to the Rechabites, on account of their singular fidelity to the precepts of their father, that they should never want a man to stand before the Lord forever. The pledge was something more than that the family should never become extinct. It was that they should never want a man to stand before him as a priest. There is evidence that goes to show that the Rechabites were adopted into the tribe of Levi, and actually did so minister.

The thing which God commanded, and for which he pronounced so great a blessing upon the Rechabites, was not that they refused to build houses, and to plant vineyards and to sow seeds, and to dwell in fixed habitations, not even that they abstained from drinking wine—but in all these things, they had obeyed the voice of their father. They were as faithful to him as God desires that we should be to him, who is the greater Father. "A son honoreth his father, and a servant his master. If, then, I be a father, where is mine honor? and if I be a master, where is my fear? saith the Lord of hosts." Mal. 1 : 6.

The Lost Tribes in Ireland.

The question, "What became of the ten tribes of Israel carried away into Assyrian captivity," has for many centuries called out the most ingenious theories from authors and scholars. Josephus believed that the lost tribes lived in his day somewhere beyond the Euphrates. Christian writers believe that they have found traces of the lost tribes among the people at the foot of the Himalaya mountains, among the Affghans, among the Tartars, and among the North American Indians. History leaves the question in just the shape to be tantalizing and to allow free sweep for the imagination. It is not surprising, there fore, that the Rev. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, enters the field with a theory of his own. He believes that the ten tribes escaped to Ireland; that the Prophet Jeremiah, who fled from Palestine with the King's daughter, went [illegible] Ireland. He carried [illegible] Ark of the Covenant [illegible] Tephi [illegible] King of Tara, [illegible] Queen Victoria, [illegible] of the house of [illegible] fulfill- [illegible] brew word, only slightly modified; that there is an admitted similarity between the Irish and Hebrew languages; that the Irish language is, in fact, a compound of the Hebrew and Phœnician, and that historians agree that there were two settlements in Ireland—first by the Phœnicians, and second by the children of Dan; the Druid circles, altar stones, and cromlechs all find ready explanation on the hypothesis that they were corruptions of ancient Hebrew religious ceremonial.

Quoting from Jeremiah: "Who are these that fly as a cloud and as doves to their windows? Surely the isles shall wait for me and the ships of Tarshish first." Dr. Wild aims to prove that the isles referred to were Ireland and the adjacent islands, and rests his case. The futurs of Ireland, under the prophecies, he argues, is to be grand, but only for Israel and the Canaanitish proselytes. All else are to die or be scattered from the island.

Dr. Wild is pastor of the Elm Place Congregational Church of Brookly, and declares that he has spent fifteen years in studying Hebrew, Greek, and Irish history bearing on the question.—Inter-Ocean.

For any of these books address Nelson & Phillips, New Orleans.

Prince Bismark, relates the Strasburg Gazette, was once asked by Count Enzenburg, formerly Hessian envoy at Paris, to write something in his album. The page on which he had to write contained the autographs of Guizot and Theirs. The former had written: "I have learnt in my long life two rules of prudence The first is to forgive much; the second is never to forget." Under this Theirs had said: "A little forgetting would not detract from the sincerity of the forgiveness." Prince Bismarck added: "As for me, I have learnt to forget much, and ask to be forgiven much."

When one has been long and far away from his earthly home, what a happy sight to see brothers and sisters crowding to the door to bring us in. What is that but a dim image of what will be seen at the gates of glory?—Guthrie.

She professed faith in Christ in the year 1874, and united with the M. E. Church on the Mason and Pleasant Grove circuit, and lived a faithful member of the same until death. Her last words, addressed to her mother, were; "Do not grieve after me, for I shall soon be at rest with Jesus."

ERNEST QUEST.

Ernest Quest is a young man of wealth and fashion, but one who has been most thoroughly educated both in this country and Europe. At first inclined to a religious life, his head is thoroughly turned by studying the theories of modern scientific writers. Afterwards, the worship of Reason takes possession of him; then again, he finds a short [illegible] belief in Spiritualism; at [illegible] is in a sea of doubt and [illegible] without a rudder or a compass, [illegible] has given up his moth- [illegible] With all that we think [illegible] the narrative, he leads a [illegible] existence. His [illegible] doubts are strongly [illegible] Finally, by the influence of Christian friends and providential circumstances, after many struggles, he comes out triumphant to learn anew that peace that can be found alone through faith in God's revelation to men; that it and give what all his wealth, position, and culture denied him.

The book has many of the most charmingly drawn characters. As a mere story, it has great power, and will add greatly to Mrs. Ford's character as a writer. Sheldon & Co., New York. Price $1.50. For Sale at Eyrich's.

ECHOING AND RE-ECHOING.

Echoing and Re-echoing. By Faye Huntington. Price $1.50. Boston; D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers.

It shows great ignorance of the Sunday-school literature of our day, when one calls it weak and namby-stuff, with an equal mixture of love-stories, and impossible adventures. The censure is just for a certain class of books, but a large library may be gathered of first-class works admirable alike in moral tone and in literary execution, books which everybody can read with delight and profit. "Echoing and Re-echoing" is a book of this sort, a well-told story, abounding with practical lessons, and inciting to a noble Christian life. The most intelligent opponent of religious novels will find his prejudices giving way in reading it, and a fastidious literary reader will be thankful that children have such good books for moulding their literary tastes.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.
TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

A Wonderful Invention

From the N. Y. Daily Graphic.

An invention all frugal wives will appreciate—in fact, an article that even rivals the sewing machine in usefulness—is now on exhibition at the Broadway store of the Wilson Sewing Machine Company, in this city; yet it is so wonderfully simple that it can scarcely be classed as an invention, and a wonder to everybody that it was not discovered years ago. The invention consists in a very simple little attachment of the the Wilson shuttle sewing machine for darning all kinds of rips, tears, worn out places, etc., in clothing, table and bed linen, stockings, underwear, etc., in the same manner that it is done by hand, and leaves the repaired part scarcely discernable. The operator of the sewing machine can darn a large-sized hole in a bed sheet or table cloth, almost instantaneously. It is to be regretted, however, that this wonderful invention is patented and owned by the Wilson Sewing Machine Company, of Chicago, Ill., who will not permit its use except with one of its make of sewing machines, which the company's manager states, is furnished with each of the Wilson shuttle sewing machines without extra price. Truly, this is a golden nest-egg for the Wilson shuttle Sewing Machine Company, and, it is said, they are running their works day and night and making and selling 300 machines a day.

The Stockholm (Sweeden) Aftonbladet says; "His Majesty the King has to-day presented the Academy of Music, on occasion of its dedication, with an organ of superior quality, made by the Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., Boston, U. S. A. On the front of the organ is a plate thus engraved: 'King Oscar II, to the Royal Academy of Music, the 2d March, 1878.'" The Mason & Hamlin Co. also received an official appointment as Cabinet Organ Makers to the King of Sweeden and Norway. This is quite a compliment to those well-known American manufacturers, whose organs are almost as famous in Europe as in America.—N. Y. Philharmonic Journal.

Tortures that need not be Endured.

People suffer a great deal of pain unnecessarily. Among tortures that need not be endured are those inflicted by the rheumatism and the gout, since the acrid element in the blood which produces them by contact with the sensative coverings of the muscles and joints may be eliminated by the use of that matchless depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, before the inflamatory symptons are developed to any great extent. When it is considered what excruciating tortures rheumatism inflicts, and what a tendancy it has, when fully developed to attack the heart, the advisibility of an early use of such a reliable antidote becomes at once apparent. The rheumatic virus is expelled from the blood by the increased action of the kidneys—which act as strainers—produced by the Bitters, and the sufferer will find if he uses this supreme defensive agent, that he will be protected against a return of the agonizing complaint. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, liver and bowel complaints and other maladies, are also cured by this admirable remedy. apr.4 4t.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.—Read's Sore Throat and Catarrh Powder is one of the most wonderful articles of the present age for all affections of the throat, head, and lungs, including sore throats of any description, whether incipient, chronic, ulcerated, or consumptive. For catarrh, influenza, elongation of tonsils, quinsy, sore mouth, sore tongue, canker, sore lips, hoarseness, etc., and for clearing the voice it has no equal in the world. Ministers, lawyers, singers, and every one using the voice should use this wonderful powder, it can be sent by mail on receipt of 50 cents. W. H. Read, 179 W. Baltimore st., Baltimore, Md. The following gentlemen have used Read's Sore Throat and Catarrh Powder for years, and recommend it as the greatest remedy they ever knew: Rev. T. R. Slicer, N. Y. Conf: Rev. Drs. A. A. Reese, Jas. H. Brown, and Peck, Balt. Conf: Rev. Dr. E. J. Way, Phila. Conf: Rev. Dr. I. E. Gramme, P. E., Baltimore; Rev. Dr. Wm. S. Edwards, and thousands of others who consider it the greatest good of the age. Dec. 13-tf.

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty, that one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Color Restorer," the most delightful article ever introduced to the American people for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and at the same time a lovely hair dressing and beautifier. It is totally different from all others; not sticky and gummy, and free from all impure ingredients that render many articles obnoxious; in fact, it is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury. Sold by all dealers in fine toilet articles, at 75 cents a bottle, or six bottles for $4. E. Hart & Co., wholesale agents, New Orleans.

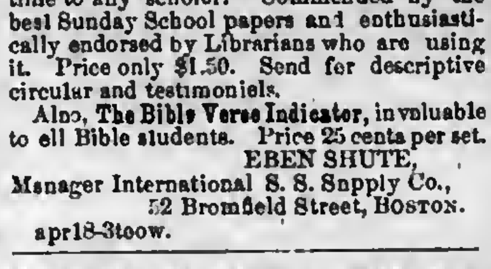
ELEVEN YEARS A DRUNKARD.

An unassuming narrative of the terrible and thrilling experience of THOMAS DONER, who lost both arms through drink, and has written this book with his teeth. (See cut.)



Thomas Writing his Book.

KIND FRIENDS:—Being deprived of both my arms by whisky, I take this method of earning my livelihood—by introducing to your [illegible] my past life. Although [illegible] by the suffering and loss I have borne through intemperance, I am thankful to that good Being through whose mercy I was saved from dropping into a drunkard's grave, to fight against this promoter of crime and misery, that has robbed me of my arms, until I am called away to that heavenly land, where trouble and sorrow never come, and where, as far as these statements are concerned, I am willing to be judged at last.

THOMAS DONER.

This book is neatly illustrated, and is worthy of the consideration of all temperance workers—IS JUST THE BOOK FOR THE TIMES.

It delineates the First Step, the Second Step, the [illegible] and remorse produced by them; the drunken revelings at houses of debauchery, Fights, stabbings, suicides of drunken comrades, and thrilling incidents in army and hospital life; the degradation and woe produced by drunkenness vividly set forth as a living picture.

A WORD TO AGENTS.—One agent assures us that he can clear [illegible] per month. He sold two hundred books in four days. Another agent tried it six weeks, and then refused a school at [illegible] per month, board and washing included, and is now selling. A lady in Battle Creek, Michigan, sold fifty-seven books in one afternoon, and sold [illegible] in a short time.

THIRTY THOUSAND copies have already been sold, and we have a new edition of Ten Thousand in the bindery, fully illustrated. They sell like hot cakes.

Prices are as follows: Single copy, [illegible] cents. Twelve copies, [illegible], sent post-paid. Twenty-five copies, [illegible] Fifty copies, [illegible] and One Hundred copies, [illegible] express charges added. We are willing to send books C. O. D., by express, but [illegible] will be saved by sending money order or registered letter. Now friends, if you send for 100 books, you will get [illegible] for selling them at [illegible] cents each. If you sell 200 in four days, you get [illegible] or [illegible] per day. But you will not often sell so many. Most agents will average from [illegible] to [illegible] per day, by giving their time to it. We make the above statement from practical experience, and feel assured that those who may engage in selling these books will not be deceived or disappointed.

To canvass, and then deliver, is not the most successful way to make sales. Take the books along with you, and sell as you go. Most people rather buy, than subscribe for a book. It takes too much time to canvass, and then deliver.

Write your name, POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE, plainly, and remember WHERE to send, and WHO to send to. Be sure to make no mistake.

Send [illegible] cents for sample copy.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,

12mo.......$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading et once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, Mass., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

UNSEEN.

At the spring of an arch in the great north tower,
High up on the wall, is an angel's head,
And beneath it is carven a lily flower,
With delicate wings at the side outspread.

They say that the sculptor wrought from the face
Of the youth's lost love, of his promised bride;
And when he had added the last sad grace
To the features, he dropped his chisel and died.

And the worshipers throng to the shrine below,
And the sight-seers come with their curious eyes;
But deep in the shadow, where none may know,
In beauty, the gem of its carving lies.

For at early noon, on a midsummer's day,
When the sun is far to the north, for the space
Of a few short minutes there falls a ray
Through an amber pane on the angel's face.

It was wrought for the eye of God, and it [illegible]

The different Methodist churches, with their constituency are the vanguard in this warfare upon the stronghold of Prince Beelzebub. Such "men of Israel" as Rev. Drs. Ridgaway, Walden, Rust, Hoyt, Hight, Hyper and Young. Revs. Cranston, Weeks, Runyan, Baker and case are the leaders in the thickest of the fray. The Methodist preachers' meeting always comes to the rescue in every contest. They largely direct public opinion, and are the conservators of morality and religion. Without their godly influence the political ship would wreck upon the rocks. There is a project upon foot, originating with the preachers' meeting, to have a grand missionary rally next month, to secure the missionary assessment of their Conference and to awaken increased interest in behalf of missions among the people at large. A plan has been agreed upon substantially as follows:

1st. The 19th of May the pastors shall preach to their respective congregations upon the subject of missions, giving all the available facts and figures calculated to arouse interest and secure large contributions.

2. Wednesday, the 22d, shall be devoted to missionary prayer meetings—laymen being invited to participate in the exercises with appropriate addresses.

3. Friday evening shall be the time for general mass meeting at Trinity Methodist Church, to be addressed by Bishop Wiley concerning his tour around the world.

4. Sunday, May 26th, shall be observed by all the churches for missionary services provided by the discipline, paragraph 270.

A number of distinguished dignitaries have been suggested to assist the pastors upon the 26th; the different churches indicating the help desired. The help will be distributed among the churches desiring it, also the expenses of these invited equitably divided among the churches served. The outlook is flattering for a glorious time. Some general, preconcerted movement is imperatively demanded, and the result will certainly vindicate the wisdom of its projection.

Rev. Dr. Rust, the Freedmen Secretary, has just lost a valuable assistant in Rev. T. J. Lansing, who has resigned the agency and accepted an appointment at Meriden Methodist Church, New York East Conference. In consequence of the change, Dr. Rust's labors have been greatly increased, but his grace and physical power will be fully equal to the emergency. He has visited nearly all the Eastern Conferences personally, spoken at the Freedmen Anniversaries and before the Conferences, privately solicited donations, and scattered broadcast all the facts, figures and statistics bearing upon the work. He has been upon the wing for a number of weeks, and for several weeks to come there will be no rest for the sole of his foot. While at New York he was quarted with Bishop Haven and Chancellor Haven at the Rossmore Hotel. His address at the New York Conference and Freedmen's Anniversary was well received by a large and highly cultured audience. The address for careful and discriminating statement and logical exactness won high encomiums from the secular press. Even the New York World (Democratic) bears testimony in unmeasured terms to its kind, conciliatory spirit and irresistable logic. We congratulate the Methodist Episcopal Church in having such an enthusiastic and efficient Secretary to conduct its Freedmen's Aid Society, and especially the freedmen themselves in having such an able champion of their rights.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE SOUTH.

We were preparing statistical tables setting forth the present numbers and condition of our Church in the Southern States, when the following came to hand in the Methodist Advocate. The editor of that paper deserves the thanks of the whole Church for this collation. We publish the statement entire. In an editorial this week we regroup the facts and add others.—[EDITOR SOUTHWESTERN.]

We give below, the most complete, tabulated view of the Methodist Episcopal Church on the territory south of Mason and Dixon's line, that has ever been presented. These tables show the strength of our Church in the States claimed exclusively by the M. E. Church, South, according to Dr. Boring's articles in the Southern Advocate, Macon, Ga. Rev. J. L. Gilbert, of the Baltimore Conference of the Southern Church, in the Nashville Advocate, the official organ of that denomination, insists that we shall vacate territory in Virginia and West Virginia which adhered to the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1844, and which it has occupied ever since Methodism was first established there; Dr. Hargrove, in the Nashville Advocate, Southern Advocate and New York Methodist, holds, but without reason, that the co-ordinate relations between the two Churches, as stated by the commissioners at Cape May, require the withdrawal from this territory of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

For the purpose of putting this matter in a clear light in its various aspects, so that the people can judge for themselves of the extraordinary and unrighteous demands of these brethren and many others in the M. E. Church, South, in asking such a price for their fraternal smiles, we arrange the conferences in the South into two groups, viz.: those composed of white people, numbering fourteen, and those of the colored, also fourteen. There are, however, three thousand white members in the North Carolina, a considerable number in the Arkansas, Louisiana, and Florida Conferences, aggregating six thousand or over, and two districts of colored members in the Holston Conference, and one in the St. Louis, and one in the Missouri Conference, aggregating a little over seven thousand members; so that the number of communicants on this territory is 205,000 whites and 191,000 colored; 396,000 in all. These tables embrace the membership, Sabbath Schools, collections for missionary purposes, Church property and educational institutions of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The Little Rock Conference is left blank because it was organized in January last, from a part of the Arkansas Conference, and the statistics are reported in that Conference, and we are not able to distinguish the charges which compose the new from those of the old organization.

Our German membership in the South is found in three groups in these tables, viz.: First, the Southern German Conference in Texas, which stands by itself and is reported in its proper order. Second, the German Churches in New Orleans which are connected with the Louisiana Conference and are included in the statistics of that body; and, third, those designated in the tables as "Germans," consisting of the St. Louis and St. Joseph districts in Missouri in the Southwest German Conference, and the Churches in Louisville and Nashville in the Central German Conference. Probably there are other societies which should be included with these, but if so we are not sufficiently familiar with that work to distinguish them.

In these twenty-eight Conferences there are 114 circuits and stations, from which no members, and 249 from which no probationers are reported in the Minutes of 1877. A considerable number of these are new works in a state of formation, but the larger part have both members and probationers which should be recorded in the Minutes. For example, Palmetto, Newman circuit, and Grantville, in the Savannah Conference, are good charges, but by some means, no reports were obtained from them at the last Conference. Jamestown, in Holston, had, in 1876, 53 probationers and 295 members. In 1877, there was no report from the charge. Loyd-street, Atlanta, is put down as having one Church, but without any value. It is worth $20,000. Ducktown, Tenn., and Lynchburg, Va., are represented as having no Church property. We have entered such cases as are manifest omissions in 1877, from the statistics of 1876 under the item, "Not Reported."

These statistics are manifestly reliable, from the fact that from year to year the reports correspond with assuring uniformity, showing a steady and reasonable increase. Any seeming decline of a marked character is certain of explanation as a clerical error by the examination of the statistics for a series of years. For example, Knoxville district in 1876 reported 4,355 members; while in 1877, the footing of the district shows only 2,496; an apparent loss of nearly two thousand on that district. But a careful addition of the statistics of the circuits, as found in the General Minutes, gives 4,432, a gain of 17. There is a decrease in the valuation of churches and parsonages, caused by the universal depreciation of property of all kinds, but the number of churches has increased, and the real value has thereby advanced, and in every respect the Church has made an encouraging growth during the past year; the increase of members, according to the Minutes, being 6,707, not including 8,355 from the circuits not reported. Every feature of these tables will bear the closest scrutiny.

We ask attention to the following points developed from these statistics, viz.:

1. In numerical strength, or the number of communicants the Methodist Episcopal Church stands third in the South, or on territory south of Mason and Dixon's line. In the same section, the Baptists, including white and colored, Primitive and Missionary, have, according to their Year Book, about a million and a quarter of members. These are nearly equally divided between the two races. The M. E. Church, South, numbers nearly three-fourths of a million in all, 715,000, or 720,000, in the South. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in the South 205,000 white members and 191,000 colored; a fraction less than 400,000 in all. The Southern Presbyterian Church has 112,000; the Cumberland Presbyterian 100,812, including the North; the Lutherans claim 100,000; the Protestant Episcopal Church has 69,000; and the Methodist Protestant Church has perhaps, 50,000 in the South. From these statements it is seen that, counting the white members alone, the Methodist Episcopal Church stands third in point of numbers in the South.

If we were to consider our colored membership only, the same would be true; they number more than any Protestant denomination in the South, white or colored, except the Baptists and Southern Methodists. The African M. E. Church only claims by its largest estimates, 182,000 in the South. The Zion Church has much less, and the Colored M. E. Church, South, of America, is too feeble to be reckoned as of any service in evangelizing the country. It cannot be denied that in numerical strength the Methodist Episcopal Church takes the third rank among the denominations of the South, the Baptists and Southern Methodists alone being more numerous.

2. In Sabbath-schools it stands second, the M. E. Church, South, alone being in advance of it on this territory. Taking the entire of these two Churches, the Methodist Episcopal has five times as many in the Sabbath-school as the Church South. The Church South, including its conferences in the North and West, has 49,797 officers and teachers, and 346,759 scholars; 369,556 in all, in its Sabbath-schools. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in the South 32,084 officers and teachers, and 240,671 scholars; total, 272,755, over two-thirds as many as the former body. Again, the Methodist Episcopal Church has 396,007 communicants in the South, which is only 549 less than all of the Sabbath-school officers, teachers and scholars in the whole Southern Church, and several thousand more than that denomination has enrolled in Sabbath-schools on the same territory. The schemes of that body to get us out of the South are not without reasons, but, it should be remembered, these causes are not faults of ours. The million and a quarter of Baptists in the South report in the Year Book only 120,000 scholars in Sabbath-school, twenty thousand less than those of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the same States. All other Churches number much less. Only the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, exceeds our own in the South in this particular; it stands second.

3. As an aggressive, evangelical force, the Methodist Episcopal Church occupies the first rank among all the denominations in the South. 1. That it is doing more home missionary work than any other, probably no one acquainted with the facts entertains a doubt. Our preachers are all home missionaries. 2. It is pre-eminently the revival element in the country. Union meeting are often desired by other Churches, because the spiritual workers are largely in the Methodist Episcopal Church. 3. We are building more churches than any other denomination in the South. 4. We are doing more for the education of the masses than any other Church in the South. 5. The Methodist Episcopal Church is doing more for the elevation and improvement of the condition of the poor and lowly, both white and black, than any other in the South.

4. We deem it every way right and proper, in this connection, to compare the contributions of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Church South for missionary purposes. For benevolence, outside of the support of the pastors, the Methodist Episcopal Church gives fourteen dollars where the Church, South, contributes one, and these conferences in the South are now giving more money for mission causes than the entire Church South. This year the M. E. Church, South, has appropriated for home and foreign missions and Church extension, $78,000; for China, $14,250; Mexico, $3,381; Brazil, $1,850; total for the foreign field, $19,481; for the home work, $58,519. But a considerable amount of the "appropriations" to home missions have to be raised on the circuits ~~to which the appropriations~~ ~~are made, for the~~ support of the pastor there—that is, the preacher takes missionary collections to pay his salary. If the amounts raised in that way were deducted from the $58,519, the sum would be greatly reduced. During the past year the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South (as may be seen by these tables) raised $57,383 41, for the Missionary Society; $5,573 59 for the Women's Foreign Missionary Society; $6,051 90 for the Board of Church Extension; and for the Tract Society, Sabbath-school Union and Freedmen's Aid Society, $5,947 15; making $74,056 05, cash, paid into the treasuries of the societies for missionary purposes during the year, and for all of which the M. E. Church, South, has but one collection, viz.: the missionary. Why [illegible] desire of the M. E. Church, South, to drive us across Mason and Dixon's line? Would it not be more Christ-like to bid us welcome to such a field for such work?

Popery and the Colored People.

Nashville Christian Advocate: A correspondent writes us that he is glad we called attention to the importance of educating the negroes. He says, in some parts of the South, Romish priests, of the new order [illegible] ed in England for the purpose, are fast getting the negroes under training, and it behooves Protestants to be on the alert. We [illegible] ed that in Baltimore, a few weeks ago, there was a large [illegible] colored people at St. Francis Xavier Church, with confirmation, [illegible] mon, and the papal benediction by Archbishop Gibbons. The [illegible] was closely packed with a congregation exclusively of colored people— a feature characterizing the missionary services for the past eleven days. The most striking feature of the mission, perhaps, was the congregational singing. Archbishop Gibbons made an address, congratulating the clergy and congregation on the result of the mission, and urging perseverance. He administered confirmation to 150 persons, of whom forty were women, thirty-four girls, thirty-three boys, and forty-three men. Dr. Gibbons gave the pontifical blessing, being the first by him under the dispensation of the new Pope, Leo XIII. The Archbishop said he would speak again to his hearers, but his desire was to listen to the preaching of the work of God as expressed in the sweet melody of Church-music and the emotional singing of the congregation. The Knights of St. Augustine, in uniform, received the Archbishop, and the congregational brass band played a march on his entry and departure. It is evident the Jesuit Fathers and the Archbishop are going to let their congregations sing the "emotional" hymns just as much as they desire. They want them in the Church. Of eighty-three adults confirmed, we are told sixty were converted from "the sects."

Backsliding.

Backsliding is receding, going back, falling away. Usually little by little. Often unconsciously. It may be practical or doctrinal. It is marked by all degrees from the slight, impreceptible chill of affection and faith to the paralysis of the whole spiritual nature. Multitudes of men who preach the Gospel are backslidden. Deacons, who bear to the flock the sacred emblems of the Savior's pangs and death are often backslidden. Hundreds, who talk religion "straight on," and often grow vehement in talking even unto tears, are backslidden. Satan has his hallelujah mountain. Peter's backsliding began at the communion; Adam's in Eden; Satan's in Heaven. Who is safe?

Backsliding is curable. Brought early to the Great Physician it is readily removed. Neglected it goes on to apostasy and ends in endless death. Cecil said, "None fall so deep into hell as they do who fall backwards."

What Smoking Does For Boys.

A certain doctor, struck with the large number of boys under fifteen years of age whom he observed smoking, was led to inquire into the effect the habit had upon the general health. He took for his purpose thirty-eight boys, aged from nine to fifteen, and carefully examined them; in twenty-seven of them he discovered injurious traces of the habit. In twenty-two there were various disorders of the circulation and digestion, palpitation of the heart, and a more or less marked taste for strong drink. In twelve there was frequent bleeding of the nose, ten had disturbed sleep, and twelve had slight ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth, which disappeared on ceasing from the use of tobacco for several days. The doctor treated them all for weakness, but with little effect until the smoking was discontinued, when health and strength were soon restored. Now, this is no "old woman's [illegible]" these facts are given under the authority of the British Medical [illegible]

The Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States.

We ask everybody to study the tabular statements on our first page, showing the numerical and financial strength of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. As we said last week we say again: the time is past for people to speak contemptuously of what some continue to call the "Northern Methodist Church." The Methodist Episcopal Church knows no North or South, East or West, and covers every foot of this nation with its conferences, from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf, to say nothing of its vast foreign missionary operations in many parts of the world.

It might be well just here to recall a few statistics of the whole Church:

Number of Annual Conferences.....	93
Number of Ministers.....	11,269
Number of Members.....	1,671,608
Total Membership.....	1,682,877

Number of Sunday-schools.....	19,868
Sunday-school scholars and officers	1,710,620
Cash benevolent collections for 1877.	$921,158.42

These are specimen facts showing the numbers and strength of the Methodist Episcopal Church. We could also give the figures showing the vast publishing interests of our church, her educational institutions, &c., but the above is enough for our purpose. Let it be understood we speak only of our own church, the Northern Methodist Church as it is sometimes called in this Southern country. Many apply this name through ignorance, or by habit, but many also use it as a term of contempt. Such are only themselves contemptible. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has a membership of 750,000 and is the next largest Methodist denomination.

But we now speak especially of our church in the Southern States, that is, in those States south of what was once known as Mason and Dixon's line; or what was once slave territory, and from which our church was almost wholly shut out until the close of the war. On this territory we now have twenty-four Annual Conferences. Of these fourteen are made up of white ministers and members, except about seven thousand colored members in Holston, (Tenn.,) St. Louis, and Missouri Conferences, which, up to this time prefer to remain in those practically white conferences. These fourteen white Conferences aggregate as follows:

[illegible] the same territory, except in Louisiana, Florida, and portions of other States, where the division into white and colored conferences has not yet been effected, [illegible] are fourteen colored conferences. These conferences are made up of colored people and churches except six thousand white members in the North Carolina, Arkansas, Louisiana and Florida Conferences. The fourteen conferences, all colored except the six thousand just mentioned, aggregate as follows:

MEMBERSHIP.
Members.....	166,076
Probationers.....	27,386
Traveling Preachers.....	947
Local Preachers.....	2,378
Total membership.....	189,802

Let us now put these twenty-four conferences together, and remember [illegible] that in their true relation, as [illegible] one forms a part and parcel of [illegible] great Methodist Episcopal [illegible]. Here then we have a full [illegible] of the strength of this [illegible] Southern States:

[illegible] Sunday-school Members, [illegible] and Church Property [illegible] Episcopal Church in the [illegible] 1877.

[illegible] kansas, Missouri, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Maryland, Virginia, and part of West Virginia. Here then is a church membership of nearly four hundred thousand in the fifteen Southern States, with church property worth $8,732,716. In point of members the Methodist Episcopal Church stands third in these States. The Baptists of all kinds aggregate a million and a quarter; the M. E. Church, South, has but a small membership in the North, so that nearly all its 750,000 members are in the South. The Southern Presbyterian Church numbers 112,000; the Cumberland Presbyterian—including the North—numbers 100,812; the Lutherans claim 100,000; the Protestant Episcopal has 69,000, and the Methodist Protestant may have 50,000. In white membership alone the Methodist Episcopal Church stands third in the Southern States.

The African M. E. Church claim 182,000 members in the South. The African Zion Church has less and the colored Church of America still less. It follows, therefore, that the colored membership alone of the M. E. Church exceeds the membership of every Protestant denomination in the South except the Baptists and Southern Methodists.

The Sunday-school work of the M. E. Church makes a still more favorable showing. Her Sunday-school work in the South is exceeded in numbers only by one church in the South, and that is the M. E. Church, South. This last named Church has in all her schools, including the North and West 49,797 officers and teachers, and 346,759 scholars; total, 369,556. The above tables show that the Methodist Episcopal Church has in the South two-thirds as many, or 272,755.

If we study the matter of benevolent collections we think there will be the most surprise to those who have not studied the subject. For example, the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are considered by many to include about all the Methodist wealth in the South. Let us see. The Southern Methodist Church appropriated this year for Home and Foreign Missions, $78,000. These general names include all her benevolent appropriations. $14,250 goes to China; $3,381 to Mexico; $1,850 to Brazil; total for foreign fields, $19,480, and total for home missions $58,519. Now quite a large proportion of these home "appropriations" have to be raised on the circuits where the aid is granted, that is the pastors take collections to pay their own missionary appropriations. In the Methodist Episcopal Church all missionary appropriations are made in cash, and only the cash received into the treasuries of the different societies is reported as benevolent money received. Above, it will be seen that the M. E. Church raised in cash for benevolent purposes $74,056.05 in the Southern States during 1877. (The whole church raised for benevolent purposes during 1877, $921,158 42.) The difference of about $4,000 between the amount "appropriated" by the whole Southern Methodist Church and the cash raised by the M. E. Church in the South more than likely will be offset by the amounts "appropriated" but which, throughout the Southern Church would not be raised, as assessments are never fully raised. We think it fair to conclude, therefore, that the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States alone raises each year more for benevolent purposes than the whole Southern Methodist Church.

There is another class of facts which must be taken into account in estimating the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. We refer to the assistance given year by year from the treasuries of the different benevolent societies. This assistance accounts largely for the great success of our Church in the South, and as it is not spasmodic, but continuous whenever and wherever needed, it will continue to help build up and fortify our church in every town and hamlet of the South as well as in the North. The Methodist Episcopal Church in the South is an organic part of the most powerful Protestant Church in the world, and whether the work in these Southern States be among the poor or the rich, the black or the white, foreigners or Americans, it matters not, the whole church, one and three-fourths millions strong, is pledged to stand by that work and foster and build it up. The weaker the congregation, and the poorer and more despised the people, the more certain will help be given. And this help is certain not simply one [illegible] but just as many years as it is [illegible] and there is an advance [illegible] growth among that people.

[illegible] financial aid given to our [illegible] the South comes from the [illegible] sources: 1. The Book [illegible]. 2. The Missionary Society. 3. The Board of Church Extension. 4. The Freedmen's Aid Society. 5. The Sunday School Union and Tract Societies. This aid has been continuous year by year as it has been needed in every Southern State, among all classes of people.

1. The Book Concerns publish the Methodist Advocate, at Atlanta, Georgia, and this paper.

2. The Missionary Society makes large annual contributions to aid in the support of the ministry, Wherever there is a congregation not able to support its pastor the conference in which that congregation is, can help it out of the funds placed to its credit by the General Society. As an example, the following appropriations in cash are made to our Southern Conferences for 1878. As these conferences meet they apportion this money as it is needed among their weak churches to help support the ministers:

Appropriations for Support of Ministers alone for 1878, in Southern States, given by Conferences:

During several past years the appropriations were larger because the work was more needy. In the future the amounts will be increased or diminished as the demands of the work require. The missionary appropriations for the whole church at home and in foreign fields are $676,907 for 1878.

3. The Board of Church Extension has for its specific work to aid in erecting church buildings wherever our people are poor and need help. This Board has been operating since 1864, twelve years, and in that time $1,161,519 06 have been received and disbursed, giving aid to 2,132 different churches of the connection. Of this aid $286,683.76 have been distributed throughout the Southern States. To illustrate just how this work is done, year by year, we give the following summary of aid granted during 1877 in our Southern territory. The donations are in cash and loans are held at a low rate of interest. The donations range from $50 upward, the large majority being one and two hundred dollars. For example, Arkansas received $775, granted to seven different churches:

These donations were given during 1877 to 169 different churches throughout the South. Some of the loans have been standing for several years, and are held by 176 different churches. This aid is continuous wherever needed.

4. The Freedmen's Aid Society devotes its work to establishing and maintaining schools for the colored people of the South. This Society has been in operation ten years, and during that time it has collected and disbursed $652,449.55. These schools and their localities are given elsewhere. There are now in these schools 3,170 students, 393 of whom are studying for the ministry. During 1877 this Society raised and expended $70,442 65. We do not know the amount of the real estate of all these schools, but it is very large, and increasing yearly. Who can estimate the influence of these schools upon the South? No thoughtful man can look at this work alone and not be impressed with the grandeur of the Church that thus plans and labors.

5. The Sunday School Union and Tract Societies. These Societies yearly distribute thousands of dollars worth of tracts and Sunday-day-school books and requisites throughout the South.

This hasty glance at the numbers and work of our church in the South must greatly impress the casual reader. But when we remember that under Methodist economy and filled with Methodist zeal and devotion to Christ, these numbers are every year marshalled in the work of lifting up and saving others in the South, every good citizen and christian must rejoice in the success of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

Jacksonville, Fla., has a population of 14,000.

A Well Deserved Tribute to a Pastor and his Wife.

At a meeting of the trustees of our Tabernacle Church, in Dallas, Texas, March 18th, after arranging their financial business with Rev. L. H. Carhart, the founder of that church, a vote of thanks was unanimously tendered to Bro. Carhart for his great success in building up the church in Dallas, and for the sake of insuring success, using his own means for several years until the church could carry its own debts. In 1874, with only $200 from the Board of Church Extension, he began operations. In two years the Tabernacle was dedicated, costing over $7,000, all of which was raised except $1,700. This latter debt Bro. Carhart carried as his own for two years longer, until the church could assume it. The trustees and the entire membership of the church heartily, by resolution, extended to Bro. Carhart "a tender and grateful recognition for his efficient services" while he was their pastor. Of sister Carhart the resolution says:

Resolved, That we would not overlook, in the least, the inestimable aid afforded by Mrs. Carhart, (which only a true woman can render,) to make this church enterprise a success, but rather would we, and do we hold in sweetest memory her ceaseless and self-sacrificing toil, her noble example, her christian spirit.

Bro. Carhart is now Presiding Elder of the Dallas District and pastor of our church at Sherman, where he and his wife have again been instrumental in erecting and dedicating another beautiful church, an account of which is given elsewhere.

Happy any denomination which has many such pastors and pastors' wives.

At the Seamen's Bethel.

A very delightful concert was given at the Seamen's Bethel on Esplenade street a few evenings since. The entertainment was given for the sailors, and the large room was crowded. The singers were Mrs. Roach, Mrs. Lara, Miss Sawtelle, Dr. C. B. White and Mr. C. D. Sturdevant, all well known amateurs of our city. The quartette, "Come Holy Spirit," was finely rendered, also the solo, "No Cross, No Crown," by Mrs. Roach; and "I'll be dar," by Dr. White. Miss Sawtelle gave, with good effect, a serio-comic solo. Mr. Sturdevant sang "Down in Alabam," to the great delight of all. In addition to these and other special pieces several Moody and Sankey hymns were sung, in which the sailors joined with hearty good will.

We heard the other day of an amusing case of somnambulism. A colored man dreamed of the olden time—that he was back in slavery, and that the overseer was at that moment waiting for him down in the field. He sprang from his bed and awakened his wife by his frantic cries of "O, day is breaking! Where are my shoes! Where are my shoes!" Finding them at last, he stopped only long enough to put one on, and taking the other in his hand and his coat on his arm he started from his house in a run. He had gone about three squares when some of his neighbors, on their way to market, saw him and judging from his looks that something was wrong, rushed up and seized him. This awakened him, and as he came to his senses he astonished them by shouting at the top of his voice, "O, bless God, I am free—I am free!".

Nelson & Phillips have published in pamphlet form a paper read by Dexter A. Hawkins, A. M., of New York, before the American Social Science Association, in Sept., 1877, on Education the Need of the South. The paper sets forth the fact of illiteracy in the Southern States and discusses in a liberal and charitable spirit the causes which have led to this, and then shows how there can be no full prosperity in the South until education is made popular and general. He argues rightly that this work must be taken in hand and consummated by the South itself, and that the General Government should render assistance by setting aside money from the sale of public lands to help all the States in educational work.

The National Repository for May is on our table. "Spring flowers" (by the editor, Dr. Curry) and "Ocean Grove" are the two leading and illustrated articles. The latter presents some very fine views of one of the most notable and most largely patronized of our Methodist summer resorts, The other standard articles are, "Victor Immanuel," (illustrated,) by Prof. Wells; "Post Christian Judaism," by W. D. Daniels; "Among the Thorns," by Mrs. Mary Low Dickinson; "Russia and the Russians," by Dr. J. P. Newman; "Robert Pollock and His Times;" and the "Assyrian Libraries," followed by a large amount of "Editorial Miscellany."

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. Emperor Williams, Presiding Elder of the North New Orleans District, returned the 16th inst., from an extended trip on his district, and gives an encouraging account of his work. We have already published accounts of the work at Houma, Franklin and several of the city churches in his district. After visiting Franklin he visited Le Tech, where is located our Orphan's Home. Here the church is giving signs of substantial improvement. The church building is being pushed to completion and will be a very comfortable house of worship. Rev. Mr. Beal, a talented young minister, educated in the Wesleyan Ministry in West Indias, and ordained, was received into the Methodist ministry by Bro. Williams and placed in charge of the Le Teche church. At Cypre Mort Rev. A. Jackson has a large Sunday-school, in charge of Bro. Thompson. This church and school gives great promise for the future. At Jeanuerrette the work prospers under Rev. H. A. Lewin, and at Little Pecan Bro. Richardson, an acceptable local preacher, has charge. At New Iberia Rev. Willis Carr, the pastor, reports an increase in membership and has a large, intelligent Sabbath-school. Bro. Williams preaches two or three times at each place, and looks carefully into all the work. At St. Martinsville Rev. John Sparks, the pastor, reports increase in membership and spirituality.

Dedication at Sherman, Texas.

We have before given an account of the success of our new church enterprise at Sherman, Texas, under the pastorate of Rev. L. H. Carhart. The church was dedicated April 7th. The following account we clip from the Sherman Daily Courier:

The services at St. Paul's M. E. Church passed off very successfully on Sunday. The morning service was crowdedly attended, four hundred persons being seated in the building. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Carhart, of Oshkosh, Wisconsin; but the dedication ceremony was postponed till night.

A financial statement was rendered, showing that the church building, lot, personage, equipments and everything complete, had cost $6,050, one thousand dollars of which had been received from the Methodist Church Extension Society. A subscription was started, and the handsome sum of $1,780 received in money and cash pledges; and the church starts out on a good solid financial basis.

The Sunday school met at 3 o'clock, and several speakers by short addresses added considerable interest to the proceedings.

Notwithstanding the rain, the building was well filled at the half-past seven service. Dr. Reed, of the Methodist church south, preached a long sermon, but one which critics, whose taste leads them to prefer carefully prepared and logical sermons to impulsive ones, pronounce to be the best they ever heard from him. The dedication ceremonies which followed were conducted by Rev. Dr. Brush, of Austin.

itself was very much admired; everything about it being handsome and complete, even to hymn books and little ornaments. It has three aisles and four rows of pews of sixteen pews each, each one of which will comfortably accommodate four persons. This gives the seating capacity as 256, but in a large space at the west end of the building is left open, and this space would afford space for one hundred chairs whenever there is a necessity for them, as was the case Sunday.

Great credit is due to S. S. Steele of Kansas, the architect, who has had charge of the construction, furnishing the plans and superintending everything in detail from first to last. A most unusual dispatch is shown, too, by the fact that ninety days is all the time that has been used in building this beautiful structure, and during the last sixty days of that time Mr. Steele has had much of his time taken up by other business, including the erecting and completing of the substantial brick store of E. Hernstadt on the west side of the square.

In a late issue we spoke of the "black man's Church" argument being popular in the mouths of African preachers in this region. Our reference was wholly to the ministers of the African Methodist Church, and we referred to them because of the manly protest against that argument by Dr. Tanner, one of their chief men whose words we had quoted. We made no reference to the colored brethren of our own church.

The American Bible Society received during March $69,579.14, and during the year ending March 31, $446,954.14. During March 49,333 volumes were issued, and during the year, not including those issued in foreign lands, 650,224 volumes were issued.

The Nashville Christian Advocate speaks very highly of Dr. J. H. Vincent's lectures on "That Boy," and "That Boy's Sister," delivered in Nashville, Tenn.. last week.

Webster and Benton.

One day after dinner, as Mr. Webster was seated in his library, the servant announced Mr. Wilson, of St. Louis, and John Wilson came into the library. Mr. Webster at once rose and greeted him. Narrating the visit to me, he said:

"Mr. Wilson was a gentleman whom I had known more or less for a quarter of a century; a lawyer o pretty extensive practice, with a good deal of talent; a man of very violent prejudices and temper, who had spent most of his public life after he had reached manhood, in violent opposition to Colonel Benton. It was not so much in opposition to Colonel Benton's Democracy as it was a personal feud, as bitter and malignant as any that ever existed between two men. It was notorious in St. Louis that when Colonel Benton went on the stump, John Wilson would always be there to meet him and to abuse him in the most virulent terms, and then Mr. Benton would return the fire. I had not seen Wilson for a good many years, and only met him occasionally in court. He came to me now a broken man, permaturely old, with a wrecked fortune, and after some conversation, he said:

"I am going to emigrate to California in my old age, Mr. Webster; I am poor; have a family; and although it matters but little to me, for the short time that remains to me, if I am poor, yet there are those who are dear to me, whose condition I might improve by going to a new country and trying to mend my fortunes. My object in calling on you is to trouble you for a letter to some one in California; merely to say that you know me to be a respectable person, worthy of confidence."

After expressing my regret that he should feel obliged to emigrate to such a distance—for then it looked like a formidable undertaking to go to California—I asked him if he was fully determined.

"Yes," said he, "I have made up my mind."

Then I set about thinking what I could do for him. I saw no way to give him assistance. I had no particular influence with the Government at that time, and finally I said:

"I am sorry, Mr. Wilson, to say that, so far as I am aware, there is not a human being in California that I know. If I were to undertake to give you a letter to any one in California, I should not know to whom to address it."

"That makes no difference," said he "everybody knows you, and a certificate that you know me, will be the most valued testimonial I could have."

"I will write one with great pleasure; although you probably overrate the influence of my name in California, I want to give you something that will be of benefit to you. Let me see, Mr. Wilson. Col. Benton almost owns California, and he could give you a letter to Fremont and others, that would be of first rate service to you."

He looked me in the face, half astonished and half inquiringly, as much as to say: "Can it be possible that you are ignorant of the relations between Colonel Benton and myself?"

"I understand what you mean; I am perfectly well aware of the past difficulties between you and Mr. Benton, and the bitter personal hostility that has existed. But I want to say to you that a great change has come over Colonel Benton since you knew him. His feelings and sentiments are softened. We are getting older. Our fiery, hot blood is getting cooled and changed. It is hardly worth while for men, while they are getting near the maximum of human life, to indulge in these feelings of enmity and ill will. It is a thing that we ought to rid ourselves of. Colonel Benton and I have been engaged in a war of words, and you and he have, and, up to two or three years ago, we went out of the same door for years without as much as saying 'good morning' to one another. Now I do not know a man in the Senate to whom I would go with more certainty of having a favor granted than to Colonel Benton. He feels that age is coming upon him, and he is reconciled to many of his bitterest opponents."

"Is thy servant a dog," replied Wilson, "that he should do this thing? I would not have a letter from him, I would not speak to him, I would not be beholden to him for a favor—not to save the life of every member of my family! No, sir! The thought of it makes me shudder. I feel indignant at the mention of it. I take a letter from Mr. Benton? I—"

"Stop, stop!" said I; "this is the old man speaking in you. That is not the spirit in which to indulge. I know how you feel."

And while he was raving and protesting and declaring, by all the saints in the calendar, his purpose to accept no favor from Colonel Benton, I turned round to my desk and addressed a note to Benton something like this:

"Dear Sir, I am aware of the disputes, personal and political, which have taken place between yourself and the bearer of this note, Mr. John Wilson. But the old gentleman is now old, and is going to California, and needs a recommendation. I know nobody in California to whom I could address a letter that would be of any service to him. You know everybody, and a letter from you would do him a great deal of good. I have assured Mr. Wilson that it will give you more pleasure to forgive and forget what has passed between you and him, and to give him a letter that would do him good, than it would him to receive it. I am going to persuade him to carry this note, and I know you will be glad to see him."

Wilson got through protesting, and I read him the note. Then I said:

"I want you to carry it to Benton."

"I won't!" he replied.

I coaxed and scolded, and reasoned, and brought every consideration—death, eternity, and everything else—to bear, but it seemed of no use. Said I:

"Wilson you will regret it!"

After a while he got a little softened, and some tears flowed, and at last I made him promise, rather reluctantly, that he would deliver the note at Colonel Benton's door, if he did not do any more. He told me afterward that it was the bitterest pill he ever swallowed. Colonel Benton's house was not far from mine. Wilson took the note, and as he afterwards told me, went up with trembling hand, put the note with his own card into the hand of the girl that came to the door, and ran away to his lodgings. He had been scarcely half an hour in his room trembling to think what he had done, when a note came from Colonel Benton saying that he had received the card and note, and that Mrs. Benton and himself would have much pleasure in receiving Mr. Wilson at breakfast at nine o'clock the next morning. They would wait breakfast for him, and no answer was expected.

"The idea!" said he to himself, "that I am going to breakfast with Tom Benton! John Wilson, what will people say, and what shall I say? The thing is not to be thought of. And yet I must; I have delivered my note and sent my card. If I don't go now, it will be rude. I wish I had not taken it. It doesn't seem to me as if I could go and sit there at that table. I lay awake," said he afterward to me, "that night thinking of it, and in the morning I felt as a man might feel who had sentence of death passed upon him, and was called by the turnkey to get up for his last breakfast. I rose, however, made my toilet, and after hesitating a great deal, went to Col. Benton's house. My hands trembled as I rang the bell. Instead of the servant, the Colonel himself came to the door. He took me by both hands and said: "Wilson I am delighted to see you; this is the happiest meeting I have had for twenty years. Give me your hand. Webster has done the kindest thing he ever did in his life." Leading me directly to the dining-room, he presented me to Mrs. Benton, and then we sat down to breakfast. After inquiring about my family, he said: "You and I, Wilson, have been quarrelling on the stump for twenty-five years. We have been calling each other hard names, but really with no want of mutual respect or confidence. It has been a mere foolish political fight, and let's wipe it out of mind. Everything that I have said about you I ask your pardon for." We both cried a little, and I asked his pardon, and we were good friends. We talked over old matters, and spent the morning till twelve o'clock in pleasant conversation. Nothing was said of the letter until I was departing. He turned to his desk and said: "I have prepared some letters for you to my son-in-law and other friends in California," and he handed me nine sheets of foolscap.

"It was not a letter, but a ukase—a command to 'every person to whom these presents shall come, greeting;' it was to the effect that whoever received them must give special attention to the wants of his particular friend, Colonel John Wilson of St. Louis. Everything was to give way to that. He put them into my hands and I thanked him and left."

Mr. Webster continued: "Colonel Benton afterwards came to me and said, 'Webster, that was the kindest thing you ever did. God bless you for sending John Wilson to me! That is one troublesome thing off my mind. That was kind, Webster. Let us get those things off our minds as fast as we can. We have not much longer to stay; we have got pretty near the end; we want to go into the presence of our Maker with as little enmity in our hearts as possible."—Webster's Reminiscences.

May 5, 1878—THE CAPTIVITY OF JUDAH.

SCRIPTURE.—Jer. 52 : 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Jerusalem hath grievously sinned; therefore she is removed.—Lam. 1: 18.

TOPIC—"The wicked shall not be unpunished."—Prov. 11: 21.

[Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.]

The Rebellion of Zedekiah (1-3.)—The doom which for so long a time had been impending over the city, and which, because he is full of compassion and of great mercy, God had delayed through years and years of irritating and increasing apostasy, at last broke with fearful power. The direful curses which had awakened the fear of Josiah were literally fulfilled. All the dreadful threats which had been uttered by Moses and reiterated by God's later prophets so often that they had ceased to alarm fully came to pass. The sad-eyed Jeremiah saw the conclusions that he himself had predicted. Ezekiel, also, looked with joyless eyes upon the accomplishment of the terrible prophecies, with which he had in vain warned the people. With an infinite patience God had borne with the nation, but it, at last, had reached the limits of his forbearance.

The Fall of the City (4:8).—"In the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month." "Tenth month" answers nearly to our January. That day was so fateful that its exact date was forever fixed in the memories of the people. Ezekiel in his captivity had a revelation of what was happening that day in Judah, and was charged to write down the date. Ezek. 24: 1, 2. Up to this time, that day is celebrated among the Jews by the fast of "Tebeth." There was some hesitation as to whether Nebuchadnezzar would come up against Jerusalem, or against Rabbath of Ammon. He stood at the parting of the two ways, and used divination to see which one he would take. Ezek. 21: 21, 22. In the result, for once, at least, he read the decree of God. It is plain from verse 5 that he did not come up [illegible] verse 4 would [illegible]. He re- [illegible] point [illegible] Tyre [illegible] lem; [illegible] at [illegible] the [illegible] Jere- [illegible] and [illegible] Ju- [illegible] in a [illegible] of [illegible] city, [illegible] of [illegible] for a [illegible] strong, [illegible] realize—but as an anguish which he should avoid.

The Fate of the King (8-11).—The alarm soon reached the palace. The king seeing that everything was lost, with muffled face, sought to escape, not through any regular gate, but "but by way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden," in the south-eastern portion of the city. Laden with a few things which he hoped to save (Ezek. 12:6, 12) he directed his flight toward Jericho with the intention of taking refuge in the wilderness across the Jordan. He was pursued, and overtaken, his followers routed, himself taken prisoner, and carried before Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, where "judgement" was pronounced upon him. That judgment was Orientally severe and cruel. His sons were slain before his face, and with that as the last sight which they ever beheld, his eyes were inhumanly put out, and he, bound with double fetters, was taken to Babylon and incarcerated in prison till the day of his death. This was the end of the regnancy of the royal house of David. For five hundred years, in an unbroken line of succession, it had occupied the throne, while upon the throne of Israel there had been ninety dynasties and nineteen kings within two hundred and fifty years. Up to this time, with singular fidelity God's promise to David had been kept that he should not want a man to sit upon the throne of Israel. So long as Judah could be permitted to govern itself, there was not wanting a man of the line of David to sit upon the throne. When, at last, the sins of the nation drove the people into captivity, still God kept this promise in view; for he said: "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." Ezek. 21: 27. The name of that new occupant was to be called "Wonderful, Counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgement and with justice, from henceforth, even forever." Is. 9: 6, 7. The promise has been more than redeemed in the greater David.

ERRORS OF PAPACY.

Errors of Papacy: A series of lectures on Transubstantiation, by E. M. Marvin, late a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Second edition. St. Louis: Logan D. Dameron, Agent, Advocate Publishing House; 592 pages. For sale at R. J. Harp's, 92 Camp street.

These lectures were delivered by Bishop Marvin in St. Louis, and in a very able and clear manner discuss the principal errors of Roman Catholicism. The author guards against everything like harshness, basing his views upon undisputed facts, respecting the beliefs of the Papacy. From a limited examination of the work we commend it heartily. The discussions are not lengthy, but go straight to the points in question, and give in a concise form substantial reasons for rejecting the accepted views among Romanists on the Eucharist, Tradition, Papal Infallibility, &c.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

The rheumatic virus is expelled from the blood by the increased action of the kidneys—which act as strainers—produced by the Bitters, and the sufferer will find if he uses this supreme defensive agent, that he will be protected against a return of the agonizing complaint. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, liver and bowel complaints and other maladies, are also cured by this admirable remedy. apr.4 4t.

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty, that one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Color Restorer," the most delightful article ever introduced to the American people for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and at the same time a lovely hair dressing and beautifier. It is totally different from all others; not sticky and gummy, and free from all impure ingredients that render many articles obnoxious; in fact, it is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury. Sold by all dealers in fine toilet articles, at 75 cents a bottle, or six bottles for $4. E. Hart & Co., wholesale agents, New Orleans.

HOW RUMOR GROWS.

Says Gossip One to Gossip Two,
While shopping in the town:
"Old Mrs. Fry to me remarked,
Smith bought his goods from Brown."
Says Gossip Two to Gossip Three,
When buying her a gown:
"I've heard it said to-day, my dear,
Smith got his goods of Brown."
Says Gossip Three to Gossip Four,
With something of a frown:
"I've heard strange news—what do you think?
Smith took his goods from Brown."
Then Gossip Four to Gossip Five,
Who blazed it round the town:
"I've heard to-day such shocking news—
Smith stole his goods from Brown."

A Child's Question.

A shade glided over the beaming [illegible] of my child.

"Mamma," she asked, "how is it possible that the Savior dwells in your heart, in papa's heart, and in the hearts of all the good at the same time? There is only one Savior."

We sat at the open window. The sun threw its beams upon wooded hills and fertile plains; the whole creation seemed to rejoice in its warmth and light.

"Look at the sun, my child; does [illegible] beam whole and full in your [illegible]? Selling Books.

The sales of books and periodicals of the Methodist Episcopal Church in our Eastern and Western Concerns during 1877 was $1,494,387.72. The total net capital of the Concerns is $1,403,666.64. The New York House alone published during 1877 not less than 47,669,892 copies of weekly, semi-monthly, monthly and quarterly periodical publications for adults and youth, and issued 25 new books, containing 5,212 pages, and 71 tracts, containing 1,018 pages. The Western House has printed and distributed not less than 34,411,974 weekly, semi-monthly, monthly and quarterly publications for adults and youth. It issued 24 new volumes, ten in English and fourteen in German.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South numbers about one-half as many members, and Dr. Haygood, of that church, after stating the above sales of the M. E. Church, thus reviews and comments upon the book and periodical sales of his own church:

These are large figures. Say now, we of the South are one-half so many, what should we show? Divide $1,494,387.72 by two, and we should have $747,193.86 as the total amount of "book and periodical sales by our Concern and its adjuncts and auxiliaries." "But they are far richer in money than we are," one will say. We answer, they, too, are passing through financial straitness all over the North and West. The trouble is, we were behind in these matters in 1860! We were not poor then.

But, making all of our present comparative poverty that we can, does it not seem that we should report at least a half, or a third, or a fourth, or a fifth, of $749,-387.72 of sales? What did we sell? The Agent's Exhibit has been read before each Annual Conference. We are not reviewing the Agent, or the House, or the Agent's facts, but our facts. His exhibit shows sales, for one year, to the amount of something over $50,000. Let us see how this amount is divided among Conferences. We have the figures, however, for only one Conference. Its membership numbers over 20,000. At its last session, its "Committee on Books and Periodicals" say in their published report:

"From the statistical reports of the various charges, we ascertain that books have been sold to the amount of $448.60."

And this is published without even an exclamation point of surprise! The committee indicate no "searchings of heart." In that Conference the investment in books, so far as sold by the preachers, was a little over two cents per member! There must be 5,000 families among these 20,000 members. If they had only averaged a book to the family, and the books had only averaged one dollar each, we should have had sales amounting to $5,000 instead of $448.60.

We pity the Methodist family that does not buy at least one new book each year. What is that we read in Hosea, iv.: 6?

The Mississippi Legislature, which recently adjourned, passed a resolution thanking the colored members "for their uniform courtesy and manly, dignified devotion to public duty during the session," and congratulated the people of the State upon the selection of representatives "so worthy from that race, and upon the arrival of that happy epoch when race prejudice and bitterness of feeling exist in our borders no longer."

A London firm has recently purchased one of the finest tracts of iron land in Tennessee, paying therefor $190,000 in cash. The property is known as "La Grange furnace," in Stewart county, and has been owned and operated by a Northern company. It embraces forty thousand acres, with three furnaces. The ore is very rich, and apparently inexhaustible, although it has been worked for some time past.

A new grove of giant trees has recently been discovered in California, about one hundred miles south of the famous grove of Yosemite, [illegible] feet above the level of the [illegible]. Instead of being a small cluster of thirty or forty trees, like the Yosemite grove, it contains over [illegible] trees, and covers a section of country six miles square.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."
12mo.......................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical bands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR;—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisburg, Va.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth st., Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the Ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully,

WM. P. GROVE.

To Consumptives AND Invalids.

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory. EDWARD H. HAMSON.

Engineer of Geo. Sweeney's Pottery, Ridge road below Wallace, Phila.

Rhoads, Boyertown, Berks co., Pa., writes, "Your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry I esteem very highly; have been selling and recommending it to my patients for many years, and it always proves efficacious. It has made some remarkable cures in this section, and I consider it the best remedy with which I am acquainted.

MY THEOLOGY AND MY COMFORT.

He holds the key of all unknown,
And I am glad.
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if he trusted it to me,
I might be sad.

What if to-morrow's cares were here
Without its rest?
I had rather he unlock the day,
And, as the hours swing open, say,
"My will is best."

The very dimness of my sight
Makes me secure;
For, groping in my misty way,
I feel his hand—I hear him say,
"My help is sure."

I can not read his future plan,
But this I know:
I have the smilings of his face,
And all the refuge of his grace,

Enough; this covers all my want,
And so I rest;
For what I can not, he can see,
And in his care I sure shall be Forever blest.

Covering the same territory, except in Louisiana, Florida, and portions of other States, where the division into white and colored conferences has not yet been effected, there are fourteen colored conferences. These conferences are made up of colored people and churches except six thousand white members in the North Carolina, Arkansas, Louisiana and Florida Conferences. The fourteen conferences, all colored except the six thousand just mentioned, aggregate as follows:

Let us now put these twenty-four conferences together, and remember that this is their true relation, as each one forms a part and parcel of the great Methodist Episcopal Church. Here then we have a full statement of the strength of this church in the Southern States:

The States covered by these conferences are Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Maryland, Virginia, and part of West Virginia. Here then is a church membership of nearly four hundred thousand in the fifteen Southern States, with church property worth $8,732,716. In point of members the Methodist Episcopal Church stands third in these States. The Baptists of all kinds aggregate a million and a quarter; the M. E. Church, South, has but a small membership in the North, so that nearly all its 750,000 members are in the South. The Southern Presbyterian Church numbers 112,000; the Cumberland Presbyterian—including the North—numbers 100,812; the Lutherans claim 100,000; the Protestant Episcopal has 69,000, and the Methodist Protestant may have 50,000. In white membership alone the Methodist Episcopal Church stands third in the Southern States.

The African M. E. Church claim 182,000 members in the South. The African Zion Church has less and the colored Church of America still less. It follows, therefore, that the colored membership alone of the M. E. Church exceeds the membership of every Protestant denomination in the South except the Baptists and Southern Methodists.

The Sunday-school work of the M. E. Church makes a still more favorable showing. Her Sunday-school work in the South is exceeded in numbers only by one church in the South, and that is the M. E. Church, South. This last named Church has in all her schools, including the North and West 49,-707 officers and teachers, and 346,759 scholars; total, 369,556. The above tables show that the Methodist Episcopal Church has in the South two-thirds as many, or 272,755.

If we study the matter of benevolent collections we think there will [illegible] surprise to those who [illegible] studied the subject. For [illegible] the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are [illegible] by many to include [illegible] Methodist wealth in [illegible] Let us see. The South[illegible] Church appropriated [illegible] Home and Foreign [illegible] general [illegible] benevolent [illegible] goes to portion of these home "appropriations" have to be raised on the circuits where the aid is granted, that is the pastors take collections to pay their own missionary appropriations. In the Methodist Episcopal Church all missionary appropriations are made in cash, and only the cash received into the treasuries of the different societies is reported as benevolent money received. Above, it will be seen that the M. E. Church raised in cash for benevolent purposes $74,056.05 in the Southern States during 1877. (The whole church raised for benevolent purposes during 1877, $921,158 42.) The difference of about $4,000 between the amount "appropriated" by the whole Southern Methodist Church and the cash raised by the M. E. Church in the South more than likely will be offset by the amounts "apprpriated" but which, throughout the Southern Church would not be raised, as assessments are never fully raised. We think it fair to conclude, therefore, that the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States alone raises each year more for benevolent purposes than the whole Southern Methodist Church.

There is another class of facts which must be taken into account in estimating the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. We refer to the assistance given year by year from the treasuries of the different benevolent societies. This assistance accounts largely for the great success of our Church in the South, and as it is not spasmodic, but continuous whenever and wherever needed, it will continue to help build up and fortify our church in every town and hamlet of the South as well as in the North. The Methodist Episcopal Church in the South is an organic part of the most powerful Protestant Church in the world, and whether the work in these Southern States be among the poor or the rich, the black or the white, foreigners or Americans, it matters not, the whole church, one and three-fourths millions strong, is pledged to stand by that work and foster and build it up. The weaker the congregation, and the poorer and more despised the people, the more certain will help be given. And this help is certain not simply one year but just as many years as it is needed, and there is an advance and growth among that people.

The financial aid given to our work in the South comes from the following sources: 1. The Book Concern. 2. The Missionary Society. 3. The Board of Church Extension. 4. The Freedmen's Aid Society. 5. The Sunday School Union and Tract Societies. This aid has been continuous year by year as it has been needed in every Southern State, among all classes of people.

1. The Book Concerns publish the Methodist Advocate, at Atlanta, Georgia, and this paper.

2. The Missionary Society makes large annual contributions to aid in the support of the ministry, Wherever there is a congregation not able to support its pastor the conference in which that congregation is, can help it out of the funds placed to its credit by the General Society. As an example, the following appropriations in cash are made to our Southern Conferences for 1878. As these conferences meet they apportion this money as it is needed among their weak churches to help support the ministers:

Appropriations for Support of Ministers alone for 1878, in Southern States, given by Conferences:

Alabama	$2,000	Lexington	$2,000
Arkansas	4,000	Louisiana	7,000
Austin	8,500	Mississippi	6,500
Cent. Alabama	2,500	Missouri	8,000
Delaware	1,000	St. Louis	4,000
Cent. Tennessee	2,500	North Carolina	5,500
Florida	3,200	Savannah	8,000
Georgia	3,000	South Carolina	7,000
Holston	5,000	Tennessee	2,500
Kentucky	5,000	Texas	4,500
Virginia	5,000	West Texas	3,000
Washington	2,500	West Virginia	2,500
To German about			5,000
Total			$95,200

During several past years the appropriations were larger because the work was more needy. In the future the amounts will be increased or diminished as the demands of the work require. The missionary appropriations for the whole church at home and in foreign fields are $676,907 for 1878.

3. The Board of Church Extension has for its specific work to aid in erecting church buildings wherever our people are poor and need help. This Board has been operating since 1864, twelve years, and in that time $1,161,519 06 have been received and disbursed, giving aid [illegible] different churches of the [illegible] Of this aid $380,633.76 have been distributed throughout the Southern States. To illustrate just how this work is done, year by year, we give the following summary of aid granted during 1877 in our Southern territory. The donations are in cash and loans are held at a low rate of interest. The donations range from $50 upward, the large majority being one and two hundred dollars. For example, Arkansas received $775, granted to seven different churches:

These donations were given during 1877 to 169 different churches throughout the South. Some of the loans have been standing for several years, and are held by 176 different churches. This aid is continuous wherever needed.

4. The Freedmen's Aid Society devotes its work to establishing and maintaining schools for the colored people of the South. This Society has been in operation ten years, and during that time it has collected and disbursed $652,440.55. These schools and their localities are given elsewhere. There are now in these schools 3,170 students, 393 of whom are studying for the ministry. During 1877 this Society raised and expended $70,442 65. We do not know the amount of the real estate of all these schools, but it is very large, and increasing yearly. Who can estimate the influence of these schools upon the South? No thoughtful man can look at this work alone and not be impressed with the grandeur of the Church that thus plans and labors.

5. The Sunday School Union and Tract Societies. These Societies yearly distribute thousands of dollars worth of tracts and Sunday-school books and requisites throughout the South.

This hasty glance at the numbers and work of our church in the South must greatly impress the casual reader. But when we remember that under Methodist economy and filled with Methodist zeal and devotion to Christ, these numbers are every year marshalled in the work of lifting up and saving others in the South, every good citizen and christian must rejoice in the success of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.

The International Sunday-School Convention.

The Convention met in Atlanta, Georgia, April 17. Four hundred and sixty delegates were present. Mayor Angier, of Atlanta, and Governor Colquitt made addresses of welcome. The Governor said many good things. We quote as follows:

"I as a patriot stand ready to accept for my beloved people such a fortune as the meek and lowly virtues of the religion of Christ will evoke. For our common country, sighing for an era of peace, I ask no stronger bonds of union, no fraternity more fervid or enduring than this gospel love will inspire.

"How is the world to feel the force and blessedness of this divine influence? Here is a problem worthy of the solution of angels. Who is to touch society with the sacred and healing wand? How shall we infuse into it more of virtue and of purity? We look into ourselves and see how much there is in us of evil, and how little of good. How our race is marred and scarred over with all manner of error. How fixed our prejudice, how unyielding our nature, we sink in despair at the prospect, and exclaim, it is too late, too late to begin with these. But God has given us a fresh revelation—a new opportunity. In our children a new humanity holds out its hand and appeals to us to begin once more.

"When the prophet of old came into the city of Jericho, they showed him the stream that ran by the walls, and they told him of those who died from thirst, and of those who died from drinking those poisonous waters. He did not attempt to heal the stream as it flowed, but made his way into the mountain where he found among the gorges the fountain head of the stream. Here, he said, must we heal it. He put the blessed salt into the spring head and declared in the name of the Lord, there shall no more be in them death or bitterness. The growing idea of the good men of this body is that wherever a child on the earth is who can be reached by your efforts you will fence him around with a thousand appliances, you will surround him with the holiest influences, you will fill him with the choicest graces, and save him from the infernal agencies that are busy at work for his destruction. Ah, here is wisdom above the mind of men. Here is diplomacy which no earthly covert or cable ever inspired. With a provident forecast which goes to the very foundation of the human character, you seek to pre-occupy the citadel with Christian graces and heavenly virtues."

Rev. John Potts, of Toronto, Canada, responded to the address of welcome. We give his closing words:

"Accept our heartfelt thanks, dear friends of Atlanta, for the welcome, which has greeted us from the lips of your esteemed Governor, and your honored mayor. In the days and years to come, as countries, we shall have pleasant Christian intercourse. You, under the flag of your great Republic, and we, devoted subjects of the British throne. I am sure it is the prayer and the earnest desire of all here, and of all right-thinking people in the United States and Great Britain, that however matters may go in Europe, England and the United States may never be other than friendly, or, rather, relations, as they really are. The Christian sentiment for both countries is for peace and good-will. Why not? We speak the same glorious language—a language which shall yet be the universal tongue, in which common philosophy, science and religion shall carry on the civilization and moral progress of the world. The great authors in poetry, history, philosophy and science are yours as well as ours. You rightfully claim a possession in Shakespeare, Milton, Chaucer and Macaulay. We study the same English Bible. We teach our children the same international scheme of Sunday-school lessons. We worship the same living and true God, and we are deeply interested in the same branches of Christian work.

"Henceforth let arbitration, and not the sword, settle all international difficulties. If you think we gained an advantage over you in the fishery award (although we do not think so), did you not get the better of us in everything in the past? Let Britian and America, the great commercial nations of the world, move forward in all the elements of a grand Christian civilization, and let them go hand in hand and shoulder to shoulder in the blessed work of the world's evangelization. Then shall angels sing again, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good-will to man.'"

General Clinton B. Fisk responded on behalf of the delegates from the States.

The Statistical Secretary reported. We quote the part showing the number of schools in the Southern States:

New York has the largest number of any State, viz.: 903,399; Pennsylvania has 782,025; Ohio, 621,702; and Illinois, the fourth State in this respect, has 529,829. In the South, Virginia stands first, Kentucky second, Georgia third, Maryland fourth, and Tennessee fifth.

At the night session the subject of the International Sessions was discussed by Rev. Randolph, of Indianapolis. Dr. John Hall, of New York, and Dr. J. H. Vincent. The last speaker said the International sessions were doing a great work in spreading the Word of God. More Bibles have been sold since these Lessons were introduced than ever before. The power of the secular and religious press has been wonderfully utilized by the system, until now the Lessons are published in newspapers on Saturdays in all parts of the country. The system also increased the intellectual power of the Church and the country. The address was spiced with humor and anecdote, which made it most acceptable. It was heartily received and carried many a practical and useful suggestion which will not soon be forgotten.

We will continue the report next week.

God's Great Book.

BY J. H. M'CARTY, D.D.

Not of the Bible do I speak now, though that is unquestionably a great book, but of the volume on which we walk and build our houses—the earth as one of God's great books.

I was rambling, some years ago, through that beautiful region known as the Connecticut valley, a locality famous for wonderful "bird tracks" which appear in the red sandstone which there crops out. And as I gazed upon some of the slabs which retain the impressions of these ancient footprints, I was deeply moved, not so much at the tracks themselves, as at their wonderful, shall I say miraculous, preservation. Think of it a moment! Thousands, possibly tens of thousands of years ago, a mammoth bird, belonging to an extinct species, walked along the sea-beach one day in quest of food, followed in her search as we see now among our fowls by her brood of birdlings. Right, left, right, left, the mother bird and the baby birds put their feet in the soft sand of the old sea-beach, left by the returning tide. The birds went away, no one knoweth whither, but by and by the tides came again upon the tracked beach; the new sand filled them up and covered them over forever; the days and years sped away; other tides ebbed and flowed; other birds lived and died, and walked there in search of food; the planet swept round in its orbit; the globe's great face changed, and the very sea on whose sandy beach the birds walked was no more; the continents were reconstructed, the seas reformed, and the beach rose to a higher level; the waters flowed to other depths; centuries by tens and hundreds rolled away into eternity; other geological eras succeeded that of the red sandstone; man comes, the lord of this lower world; he seeks the brown stone to build his great palace in the city; yonder, by screw and derrick, he lifts out of their old beds the rocky pages on which are inscribed these records of a former world. The huge block is cut out, raised up and turned upon its edge; the wedge of iron is driven in and it parts right where the birds walked, and the cast of their footprints is perfect, showing even the rings of the toes and the joints of the claw-nails as if they had been made yesterday. You say it is marvelous. Yes it is, and so is it marvelous that the words we speak, the deeds we perform are recorded in God's great book of memory. Ages will pass away and some day the steps we took will reappear. For in God's mind nothing shall ever be forgotten. Not only are we ourselves immortal, but our very thoughts, our words are immortal. When we are gone no one can tell whether some come careless word or deed may come up to darken our life record and confront us in the judgment, or some good word or deed will yield its hallowed fruit. Yes, and the affection of the old bird for her young is even characterized in the stone of the ages. Love lives on when seas have departed and the globe has changed its face. Surely the greatest of principles is love.—Lectures on Science.

God's Love.

Suppose a meadow in which a million daisies open their bosoms all at one time to the sun. On one of them, while it is yet a bud, a little stone has fallen. At once crushed and overshadowed, it still struggles bravely against all odds to expand its petals like the rest. For many days this effort is continued without success. The tiny stone (a mighty rock to the tiny flower) squats on its breast, and will not admit a single sunbeam. At length the flower-stalk having gathered strength by its constant exertion, acquires force enough to overbalance the weight and toss the intruder off. Up springs the daisy with a bound; and in an instant another floweret is added to the vast multitude which in that medow drink their fill of sunlight. The sun in the heaven is not incommoded by the additional demand. The new-comer receives into its open cup as many sunbeams as it would have received although no other flowers had grown in all the meadow—in all the earth. Thus the sun, finite though it be, helps us to understand the absolute infinitude of its Maker. When an immortal being, long crushed and turned away by a load of sin, at length through the power of a new spiritual life, throws off the burden, and opens with a bound to receive a Heavenly Father's long offered but rejected love, the giver is not impoverished by the new demand upon his kindness. Although a thousand millions should arise and go to the Father, each would receive as much of that Father's love as if he alone of all fallen creatures had come back reconciled to God.—William Arnot.

The Scrap-Book.

Every one who takes a newspaper which he in the least degree appreciates will often regret to see any one number which contains some interesting and important articles thrown aside for waste paper. A good way to preserve these is by the use of a scrap-book. One who has never been accustomed thus to preserve short articles can hardly realize the pleasure it affords to sit down and turn over the pleasant, familiar pages. Here a piece of poetry meets the eye, which you would long since have lost had it not been for your scrap-book; there is a witty anecdote—it does you good to laugh over it yet, although it may be for the twentieth time; next is a valuable recipe you had almost forgotten, and which you found just in time to save you much perplexity; there is a sweet little story, the memory of which has cheered and encouraged you when almost ready to despair under the pressure of life's cares. Indeed, you can hardly take up a single paper without reperusing. Then hoard with care the precious gems, and see at the end of the year what a rich treasure you will have accumulated.

The emigrant ship Azore was prevented from clearing on the day on which she was to have sailed from Charleston, by a large excess in the number of persons who had taken passage and stowed their effects on board. A law of Congress limits the number of passengers on emigrant ships by rules founded on the amount of their tonnage, and it was found when the Azore was ready to sail, and applied for a clearance, that she had one-fourth more passengers than could be legally carried on a vessel of her size. The time required for getting out the goods of such as could not go detained the vessel in port four days. The final arrangements were completed by April 20, and at about 8 A. M. the Azore was towed out to sea by the tug Wade Hampton, being accompanied to the bar by two harbor steamers, crowded with colored excursionists, while the whole Battery and the wharves were thronged with thousands of colored people, sh[illegible]ing and waving hats and handkerchiefs as the bark bore out to sea. The Southern General Conference and Fraternity.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, began its quadrennial session at Atlanta, Ga., yesterday. One of the most important questions that will come before that body is the question of fraternal relations between the great Church it represents, and the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our readers will recall the chief historical points in the controversy growing out of slavery and the war, between these two churches, ending happily in the appointment of commissioners by each church "to remove all hindrances to formal fraternity." Those Commissioners met at Cape May, New Jersey, in 1876, and did three things: 1. They made a declaration of the legitamacy and consequent relations of the two churches. 2. The way was opened for the peaceful settlement of the many disputed property cases, where, along the border, by the fortunes of war, and elsewhere in the South by the changed relations caused by the results of the war, properties were held by one church and claimed by the other. 3. An address was issued which breathed a truly fraternal spirit.

The results of the Cape May agreement have been good. Many property disputes have been settled, and there has been an increase of actual fraternity between the Conferences, ministers and people of the two churches throughout the South. The verdict, we think, of the majority of both churches is that the Commissioners did their work well.

Upon two points have we felt and expressed, however, fears, lest the cause of fraternity might be harmed. The first point, is a question of interpretation. Our fears are not yet allayed and will not be until the Southern General Conference receives and acts upon the work of their Commissioners. Should that body adopt the interpretation and its logical results, which have been quite generally accepted and insisted upon by the press of the Southern Church, then fraternity between the churches will receive a severe, if not a fatal blow.

Let us now look into this matter of interpretation and see just where the danger lies. The Cape May report declared that:

> Each of said Churches is a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States, having a common origin in the Methodist Episcopal Church organized in 1784, and since the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South was consummated in 1844 by the voluntary right of the Southern annual conferences, ministers and members to adhere to that communion, it has been an evangelical church, &c.

When this declaration was published we expressed the fear that it would lead to misunderstanding. The press of our church for months was ominously silent, with the single exception of the Northern Christian Advocate, which went further than we did, and held that there was but one interpretation and that unfavorably to us, granting all the Southern Church had ever claimed and falsifying our own church history. It soon became evident that our fears were not groundless. The Southern Methodist press said the declaration "granted all they had ever asked" and rejoiced that the conscience of our church had become sufficiently quickened to repudiate our past mistakes and false accusations. It was claimed that a "common origin" could only mean that both churches began in the single germ planted in 1784, and that if the South only exercised "the voluntary right" which it possessed, then all talk about "secession" and all unfavorable criticisms against the Southern delegates in 1844, and subsequently, must cease. The Tyro in American Methodist history could see an end of fraternity, should such an interpretation go uncontradicted. There came forth, notably in the columns of the New York Christian Advocate, a statement setting forth the views and position of our Commissioners. The chief point made was that the declaration does not touch the manner of the organization of the M. E. Church [illegible], but simply recognizes it as an accomplished fact, dating from [illegible], and being Episcopal in government, it is, therefore, a "legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism." This interpretation leaves [illegible] between the two [illegible] respecting the organization [illegible] Southern Church out, [illegible] be, and lays the only [illegible] of a lasting [illegible] the churches. [illegible] Episcopal Church [illegible] Confer[illegible] [illegible] shall await with interest the action of the Southern General Conference. We are glad to know that the documentary proof extant but unpublished, bears out the interpretation of our Commissioners.

Our second fear grew out of the outspoken determination of the Southern Church to force a withdrawal of our work from the Southern States. The SOUTHWESTERN was the first, and for some time the only paper of our church to state and call attention to this determination. In our issue of September 14, 1876, immediately after the publication of the Cape May report, we published the views of the entire Southern Methodist press, by quoting from the editorial columns of each, and asked, "Are we to understand that the Southern Church, having gained this much, that the next issue is to be the withdrawal of our work from the South by leaving it or parcelling it out to other churches to suit Southern views?" No one at all conversant with the tone of the Southern Methodist press the past year will deny but that we correctly interpreted the drift of Southern thought and purpose. In that same issue we quoted the Nashville Christian Advocate as follows:

> The plan of fraternity was not designed to supersede the plan of Separation. Indeed, it recognizes everything in that Plan, except the boundary line between the two connections, with which the Commissioners did not feel at liberty to meddle. But if all the rest is carried out in good faith the other may be recognized in due time.

Over against this at the next session of the Louisiana Conference, we wrote, and the Conference unanimously adopted, the following:

> Resolved, That the establishment of fraternity between the two great Methodisms of America removes all occasion of criticism from both churches, on account of the presence of the other in any part of the nation. Each church is now free, without let or hindrance, to push her work as in her judgment may be deemed best among people of all nationalities and language, and any other interpretation of the work of the Cape May Commission we regard as dangerous to the interest of both churches, and the cause of Christ.

Seeing the issue from the first we have steadily maintained that at this point lay the greatest danger to fraternity between our own and the Southern Methodist Church. Other papers of our church during the last twelve months, have spoken out grandly, and especially has the Atlanta Methodist Advocate done noble service in publishing facts and giving tone and directness to the thought of our church in guarding and fostering our Southern work.

The question now is, what will the Southern Methodist General Conference at Atlanta say upon this point? Will that body recognize our Southern work as legitimate, or are we yet to have talk about "boundary lines" between the connections? The answer to this question we consider of vital importance to the question of Methodist fraternity.

Of course all talk about the Methodist Episcopal Church withdrawing from the South is foolishness. On the first page of this issue we give official figures showing our numerical and financial strength in the South. Our church will no more forsake her 400,000 people in the South than she will a like number in the North. All talk about ecunemical schemes which include the dividing up of the Methodist Episcopal Church can be put down as so much ecunemical nonsense. That Church, will never commit hari-kari to satisfy the whims or appease the prejudices, or to make practicable the schemes of the brethren of the Methodist Church, South, or any others, who may be so foolish as to request it.

A Word with our Baptist Friends.

When the Southern Baptist Convention met in this city last year we published an editorial, complimenting the convention upon its size, intelligence and general character. We were careful to commend the convention because the question of educational and mission work among the colored people, was discussed at length, and plans suggested for carrying on such work.

One thing we regretted, and said so. But that our words may be recalled, we quote a part of our editorial, as follows:

> One thing in connection with the late Baptist Convention we exceedingly regret. The work and workers of Leland University in this city received no recognition. Leland University is the Baptist School for colored people in New Orleans and is the work of Northern Christians and their money.
> Deacon Chamberlain and his saintly wife, eight years ago, left their circle of aristocratic and wealthy friends in Brooklyn, N. Y. and came to New Orleans to do something for the colored people. Up to this [illegible] have expended nearly [illegible],000 of [illegible] money, and given their time and [illegible]. Assistance has also [illegible] Northern Baptist Convention [illegible] a magnificent property [illegible] a three-story brick building, [illegible] finished and furnished [illegible] here, where [illegible] of colored young men [illegible] their studies [illegible] for the education of white youth would be the pride of any Southern city. During these years Deacon Chamberlain and wife and the teachers, many of them persons of rare culture, have never received, except from a very few, any encouragement or recognition whatever in their work. The Chamberlins, of singularly sweet Christian characters, and with faces wrinkled with age and yet beaming with benevolence, worshipped for years in the aristocratic Baptist Church of this city with scarcely a dozen who would speak to them. Their wealth and acknowledged personal worth were no offset to the fact that they were laboring among the colored people. So it has been with the Professors of Leland.
> What a splendid opportunity did the convention have of rebuking this unchristian spirit. But alas that was not done. The Convention itself followed the same path. No mention whatever was made of Leland University. Deacon Chamberlin with Dr. Stone, the President of the University, attended the Convention. The latter was present during nearly all the discussions of the work to be done among the colored people. He did not so much as receive a friendly grasp of the hand from a member of the Convention. No mention was made of him or his work, when ten minutes talk from him on the work he was doing, would have been worth more to the Convention than days of talk, limited to theory and rhetorical flourishes about the "ignorant sons of Ham." Not a single member of the Convention visited Leland University!

Our editorial was quoted in several leading Baptist papers of the country, and called forth considerable comment. We afterwards understood, although at the time the matter escaped our attention, that three brethren had published over their signatures that they had visited Leland University, while our statement was that "not a single member of the Convention visited Leland University." At the time this denial came to us, the parties from we derived our information were out of the city for the summer, and in view of the fact that only in this single statement were our words questioned, we let the matter pass. But of late we have learned, that among our Baptist friends in New Orleans, that editorial is still referred to as being a slander. And it has also come to us, within a few days, that some of our personal friends among New Orleans Baptists, have been subjected to slights bordering on insult by the pastor of the leading Baptist Church of this city because of that editorial; and, also, that our statements are made the excuse for unfavorable remarks in social circles concerning us personally.

For these reasons we now refer to and quote what we said, and ask,

1. Did we tell the truth? Our reply is that we are authorized to use the name of Rev. Dr. Stone, President of Leland University, as authority in stating that our remarks were true, and did not include the whole truth, with some unimportant exceptions. Deacon Chamberlin did not attend the Convention as we stated, and not until the week following the Convention did three brethren visit the Institution. We were at the Institution after the Convention had adjourned with Gen. Barry, a prominet citizen of Chicago, and up to that time no member of the Convention had been there. This explains the single important discrepancy. As to the important parts of our statement they are strictly true. "the work and workers of Leland University in this city received no recognition." If other testimony was needed we might state this: Gen. Barry, of Chicago, a personal friend, visited the Convention as a Northern Baptist, and talked with many and was present until the close, and he never heard that there was such an Institution as Leland University, and remained in ignorance of the fact until by accident we mentioned it to him after the Convention adjourned, and at his request took him to visit it. Another fact which indicates much. Dr. Stone, who is a man of age and experience, and who stands high in esteem in his denomination, and who is still President of the University, worshipped for a year at the Baptist Church where this Convention was held, and during that time was never spoken to in the church by the pastor, and never received the slightest ministerial recognition. His attendance was as regular as his duties would permit, usually being present at the morning services.

2. Is it not about time that our Christian friends in this city of extreme Southern sentiment, should cease ostracising the noble companies of men and women in our midst who, in the name and spirit of Christ labor among colored people?

3. We must not be misunderstood. Not all, perhaps not half of of our Baptist friends in New Orleans have any sympathy with any of these unchristian things we have mentioned. We make no general charge. But these things have been done, and the same spirit that prompted them still prompts other equally mean and unchristian remarks and acts. We trust that the better and nobler elements of this denomination in our city will see to it that such things cease.

Governor Nicholls has signed the Moffett Register bill. It is estimated that it will bring a revenue of [illegible],000 a year to the State. The liquor dealers will try to defeat the purposes of the bill.

The Sin of a Dark Skin.

We publish this week altogether the fullest report of the International Sunday School Convention just held in Atlanta, Ga., to be found in any of the city papers, secular or religious. The Convention was a success in attendance and enthusiastic words, and in wise provisions for continued efficiency in the great work of promoting the systematic study of the Bible among all denominations.

One event, however, occurred that must bring the blush to the cheek of true men in every section of this country, both North and South. The event was this: Rev. B. W. Arnett, pastor of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Urbana, Ohio, was elected one of the forty-four delegates to which Ohio was entitled. As soon as his election became known at Atlanta, the Committee of Entertainment at once notified the Ohio delegation that Mr. Arnett's presence would "materially injure the cause in Atlanta and the South." The President and Secretary of the Ohio delegation were perplexed over the matter, and expressed a willingness to sustain Mr. Arnett if he went. But Mr. Arnett decided to remain away, rather than force himself upon the Convention and embarrass his friends.

It is to be regretted that the Ohio delegation did not take the responsibility and have Mr. Arnett go; or, if this was not done, that the Convention itself did not give its disapproval of so un-Christian an act by its Reception Committee. We know all that will be said in palliation; it was a Southern city; men of Southern sentiment were in the Convention, whose feelings and prejudices must not be touched, etc. etc. But such sentiments we believe would have been repudiated by three-fourths of the Southern gentlemen in that Convention, had Mr. Arnett taken his seat. There cannot be called a political Convention of any party in a Southern State to-day, that would not welcome a black man as a delegate. United States Senator Bruce, a pure-blooded African, presides over the Mississippi Levee Committee, one of the most important to consider Southern interests, and by all he is treated with every consideration.

All over the nation, black men are welcomed to every kind of Convention where political interests are at issue. But here is a Convention of nearly 500 Christian gentlemen from all the States and from Canada, who practically endorse, by refusing to condemn, the turning away of the single colored delegate who was elected. We have no doubt that if the Ohio delegation had brought Mr. Arnett with them, and his name had been called and he given his seat, the Southern men would have said Amen, this is right. But suppose they had not said this, then the question is: Can two or three hundred delegates from the North afford to come to a Southern city, and with the words of Jesus on their lips, permit themselves to be forced into the attitude of stultifying every sentiment of brotherly kindness and love, by refusing admission to a representative of five millions of American people, simply because his and their skins are dark?

Whatever of good the Convention has done, and provided for doing, God will bless, because he uses human instrumentality in spite of its imperfections. But in this one important matter, important because of its relations to the fundamental principles of the gospel of Christ, in whose name this Convention met, we can but say, shame on the Atlanta International Sunday School Convention! In spite of the holy enthusiasm that inspired its sessions; in spite of the genius and eloquence of Governors and Mayors, of Hall, and Fisk, and Vincent, and a host of others, that Convention will go down to history with this condemnation: Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it not to Me.

Since the above was handed to the printer, we have had an interview with L. H. Gardner, Esq., who attended the Convention at Atlanta as a delegate from this city, and from him we learn that we were correct in saying that, had Mr. Arnett attended the Convention, he would have been well received. The Texas delegation had a colored man among its members, who attended and sat with his associates.

All honor to the Texas delegation. These Southern men set a most wholesome example to the North. These Texas gentlemen believed (at least some of them) in slavery, fought for the Confederacy, but now that all is past, they take their colored delegate with them to Atlanta, while the Ohio delegation, forty-four strong, quail before the pusillanimous words of a member of the Committee of Reception, and leave their colored brother at home.

We now recall with pleasure all censure upon the Convention, except that it should have rebuked the Ohio delegation for its lack of Christian manliness. It was Ohio, not the South, that was ashamed of that Ohio colored delegate. Shame on Ohio!

That Southern Methodist Claim.

We have already expressed our views upon this now very prominent matter before Congress, and have received our share of censure from the editorial brethren of the Southern Methodist press.

Since our former article we have gained further information from the Majority and Minority Reports of the Senate Committee, the former recommending $150,000, and the latter rejecting the claim. This information confirms us in our former view that the whole claim is unjust. The Majority Report says, "it is a question whether the majority of the whole body (M. E. Church South) were not loyal to the United States Government." We pity the soul responsible for that tremendous falsehood.

Besides the Reports mentioned we have the figures of valuation placed upon the property by Rev. Dr. McFerrin, the agent, and reported to the General Conference in 1874 in his "Exhibit of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, March 1, 1862." This being official, is no doubt reliable, and represents the value of the property when Gen. Buel, of the Federal army took possession of Nashville, Feby. 26, 1862. The property was taken possession of less than two years afterwards, in 1864. It is not reasonable to suppose that in that time, when all business was suspended, the property grew in value, and yet Rev. Dr. Abbey, the representative now pushing the claim before Congress, swears that at the time the property was taken possession* of, the same property was worth $700,000, that Dr. McFerrin had reported to his General Conference was worth $210,608.85. Here are specimen statements made by Dr. McFerrin upon his honor as an agent for the Methodist Church, and Dr. Abbey's upon his sworn affidavit before Congress:

	Estimate of Dr. McFerrin.	Sworn statement of Dr. Abbey.
Real estate	$55,000	$150,000
Merchandise	43,450	180,000
Presses, type, &c.	52,480	312,000

The other valuations are on a par with these.

A Prophecy of the Day of Judgment.

In April, 1843, Henrietta Wood, a free-born mulatto woman, living at Cincinnati, Ohio, was inticed across the river to Kentucky by a slave driver and placed in the custody of one Ward, Sheriff of Campbell county, Ky. He kept her in duress for seven months and then sold her to a slave-trader, and Henrietta Wood was sold "down in Egypt," otherwise Mississippi, and became the slave of one Braudon, a cotton planter. The war came and with it Lincoln and emancipation. Ward had gone to Little Rock, Arkansas, but Henrietta Wood found him and sued him, and has just gained the case, and Ward has to pay her $2,500 for helping to kidnap and sell her.

How many free colored persons were kidnapped and sold under the accursed Fugitive Slave Law, none but God knows. But we may be sure He knows, and this one instance we put down as a prophecy of the day of Judgment, to which this nation has not yet fully come, to answer for the deeds done in her body politic, during the days of slavery.

Licensing Women.

Bishop Andrews decided at the late New York Conference that the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church does not provide for licensing women as local preachers. Exceptions were taken to his decision and an appeal was taken to the next General Conference to meet in 1880. This same point was decided in the same way by the last General Conference in Baltimore in 1876, upon an appeal from a similar decision given before. This does not hinder women exercising their gifts of speech in the church; in fact the Methodist Church has led all others in utilizing woman's talent in the work of the Church. The point of the decision is that in the organic law of the church no provision is made for the formal licensing of women. Whether this will be added to the law or not will be decided by the next General Conference.

John B. Gough, the venerable temperance lecturer, will leave the United States shortly for a prolonged stay in Europe.

The Ohio Republican Convention will be held at Cincinnati, June 12th.

Fraternal Delegates.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate suggests that the Southern General Conference, now in session at Atlanta, follow the example of the Southern Presbyterian Assembly, and conduct its correspondence with other religious bodies, for the future, by written communications instead of by personal messenger. The Advocate says:

> There would be a large saving in time and expense; and communications to other churches, prepared by a committee, would have the advantage of being reviewed and approved by the body from which they emanate. A personal messenger in his address may or may not accurately express the views and sentiments of the General Conference. A written communication, prepared by a committee, and adopted by the General Conference, would perfectly reflect the mind and opinions of all concerned. It would be a cheap, safe and expeditious way of conducting our fraternal correspondence.

We think the suggestion a good one and hope our own General Conference will adopt the same plan.

Starving Immigrants.

Two hundred and sixty-two immigrants landed in this port last Friday in a most deplorable condition. They were originally from Stettin, Prussia, and went to Venezuela, South America, in January, 1876. From thence they went to Caruckaro where they had land until it was taken from them by the government. Homeless and penniless, a ship was prevailed on to bring them here, where they arrived in a starving condition. They are mostly trades people, and want work. The Immigration Societies of the city have taken the matter in hand and providing them with food and are seeking to arrange a place for them to settle in Louisiana.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church South.

This important body met at Atlanta, Georgia, yesterday, May 1st, and will continue in session during most of the month of May. The body will represent a church membership of 750,000, mostly in the Southern States. Many questions of great importance will come before the Conference for discussion and action. Our hope is that everything done may tend to promote the prosperity of the church. A Daily Christian Advocate will be published during the session. Price $1.00. Address Rev. A. H. Redford, Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. Dr. Riley, Bishop elect to have jurisdiction over the Episcopal Church in Mexico, passed through this city a few days since. Dr. Riley reports great progress in his own church, and states that seventy-one Roman Catholic congregations have abandoned that church and put themselves abreast with the old Catholic movement in Europe. They use the old Spanish liturgy, known as the Mozarabic, which dates back to early Christian times, and harmonizes very nearly with the Prayer-book of the Church of England.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. J. R. Carns, Giddings, Tex.: "There have been six recent conversions in our meetings, and we have received thirteen members on probation and fifteen in full connection, and our Sunday-school has more than doubled in numbers. Our recent quarterly meeting was a very blessed time to us. Our presiding elder, Rev. S. Gates, comes to us like a father, and seems like a father to us, even when in the pulpit delivering his gospel message. Our people are all glad when he comes, and are sorry when he leaves us."

Rev. S. J. Harris, Gallatin, Tennessee: "We have just closed an interesting meeting in which eleven persons professed faith in Christ, and twenty-five united with the church. Our membreship were greatly revived and brought together in bonds of love and unity, and are thereby better prepared to work for the Master."

Rev. H. W. Key, Murfreesboro, Tenn.: "We have just closed a glorious revival, extending from March 10th to April 7th. During the meeting there were fifty-one conversions, and sixty accessions to the church. These numbers include all classes, from some of our most substantial to others who appeared outcasts, without hope in the world. But the grace of God was found sufficient for all alike. At our last administration of the Lord's Supper, there were two hundred and forty communicants, and the love-feast was one of the most delightful we ever attended. In addition to our presiding elder, Rev. C. Pickett, we had the kind assistance of several other of our ministerial brethren, of our own and other denominations. Color seemed lost sight of. Many of our white friends took active part in the services. Rev. Hill, the preacher in charge of the M. E. Church, South, preached for us and in other ways rendered us efficient service; also, Rev. Mr. Marsh, of the Presbyterian Church, and others of the Baptist Church: also, Revs. W. Lillard, B. James and H. Robertson. Our Sunday-school, under James Murfree, is in a flourishing condition. It is well supplied with all necessary requisites from our own Book Concern. We find them best and cheapest. Mrs. A. Miller, one of the missionaries that left Nashville a few weeks ago for Africa, was formerly a member of this Sunday-school, so we feel that we are represented in one of the first missionaries sent to that country from this State.

Notes from San Antonia.

We have been favored with a visit from Rev. L. H. Carhart and wife, of Sherman, Texas, and Rev. Mr. Carhart, of Appleton, Wisconsin. Saturday was spent in sight-seeing and Sunday in church-going. In the morning we all visited the M. E. Church South, where quarterly meeting was being held. In afternoon attended preaching at the colored M. E. Church, where a revival is in progress under Rev. L. Carper the pastor. In the evening Rev. L. H. Carhart preached for the colored people an eloquent sermon, while, by invitation, Rev. Mr. Carhart, of Wisconsin, preached in the M. E. Church South. His sermon was listened to with great interest, and the comments were often repeated what would our Church be if we had such eloquence in our pulpit. The progress of our city is greater than ever.

The bull and lion fight here was not countenanced or patronized by either American or German first-class people, and in real fact was a financial failure. The laws of Texas allow such exhibitions, but want of public interest will kill the usage.

May 12, 1878.—THE CAPTIVES IN ISRAEL.

SCRIPTURE.—Dan. 1: 8-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"A good understanding have all they that do His commandments."—Ps. 111: 10.

TOPIC.—"Touch no Unclean Thing."

[Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.]

The Good Resolution (8).—With a wise regard toward placating and even winning the loyalty of the people whom he had conquered, Nebuchadnezzar selected from them certain of their best and brightest youths for the purpose of being educated in the learning of the country and to stand before him. It would go far towards reconciling any people with the hard lot of captivity to know that their conqueror was thus magnanimous, and that in event of any peculiar hardship being forced upon them, they had those at court who could plead for them. The king seems to have realized the power, too, of intelligence and of education, both in the direction of controlling his captives and of helping himself.

Ashpenaz, the chief of the eunuchs, was directed to select from the Jewish captives "children in whom there was no blemish but, well favored," etc. How many were chosen by him we are not told. From the reading it would appear that there were quite a number. Under the circumstances, we should hardly have looked to those boys for a lesson in fidelity to God. In the first place, they were quite young, and, in the second, they were surrounded by the most seductive of temptations, such as few boys, or men either, for that matter, would have had the strength of mind and the firmness of purpose to have resisted. The estimates make the ages of the youths to have been somewhere from 12 to 16 years old. That is about the time when the palate is the most keenly sensitive to delicacies, and has the most craving for them. But their relish for good things was not the only element in the temptation. Their choice to such a position, with all the advantages which it conferred, was itself so seductive a compliment that it is a wonder that they did not yield unquestioningly to all of its customs. At such an appointment what boys heart would not flutter? What one would feel like arraigning the usages of the place? To question them was to endanger their situation. One must walk softly when he holds his place on the favor of a king.

There are some who think that there was a sympathetic attempt to heathenize these Jewish youths, of which the temptation of the table was only a part. For instance, the name of each one was changed from the Hebrew, which, in each case, had a beautiful signification with regard to Jehovah, to a name which connected them with some heathen diety as follows:

Daniel (Judgement of God), to Belteshazzar, "Whom Bel favors."

Hanniah (Grace of Jehovah), to Shadrach, "The circuit of the sun."

Mishael (Who is what God is), to Meshach, "The Ram."

Azariah (Whom God had helped), to Abednego, "The servant of Nego."

"But," in spite of all these things, "Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank." It was he who went to the prince of the eunuchs to request that he might not be compelled to defile himself. He tested the danger before he drew anyone else into it. He seems exactly to have stated the reason—"that he might not defile himself." That was pretty bold language for a boy to use to a man who was a devotee to the very gods who were thus derided. It is evident that that "purpose" was a purpose not to do so under any circumstances, and to take the consequences, whatever they might be. First, and most wisely, however, he tried persuasion. But Dan. 6:10 shows what he would have done had he not succeeded by less stubborn means. In this connection Rev. Perley B. Davis, of the Monday Club Sermons, uses in beautiful illustration the habits of the ermine. Its fur is snow white, and, so sensative is it to defilement of any kind, that its hunters, it is said, trap it by driving it into a circle of mud which they have laid for the purpose. Through that it will not go. It would rather be caught and killed than sully its perfect purity! If Christians feared death less than dishonor, the church would cease to be reproached by the world.

The Daring Request (9-18)—"Now God had brought Daniel into favor and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs." That was a reason why he did not hesitate to make his request and to speak his mind so plainly. But high as he was in favor, Ashpenez did not dare to grant his request. Not only one's position but one's life depended upon exact obedience to the king, who thought nothing of taking away life as a penalty for disobedience. But Daniel was not at his wit's end. If the prince would not do it, perhaps Melzar, which signifies "steward," would. To him he proposed a challenge. Let them be fed upon pulse and water for ten days; and, at the [illegible] that time, he was to do as the [illegible]

THAT BOY: WHO SHALL HAVE HIM.

That Boy: Who shall Have Him? By Rev. W. H. Daniels, A. M., Author of "D. L. Moody and his Work," etc. Cincinnati: Hitchcock & Walden. New York: Nelson & Phillips.

This story, which originally appeared in monthly installments in the National Repository, is now neatly published in book-form by the Western Book Concern. A work of fiction reared upon foundation of fact, it is designed, by mildly satirizing them, to counteract certain Theological tendencies, the outcome of too much Calvinism on one hand, and too much "Liberalism" on the other, and to emphasize a popular objection against the study of the classics in our universities. "That Boy" is a sturdy specimen of New England muscle and brain, who inherits from his mother a hatred of the "theological god" of the ultra Calvanists of early New England. His mother, however, gets a better view of the paternity of God from an early itinerant, and dedicates her boy, in return for his restoration from dangerous illness, to the ministry. He is transplanted to the West, and in due time finds himself a student at the "Grand Trunk University." where a Liberalist preacher has insinuated himself into an orthodox pulpit, and is perverting the minds of the students and his people with his very attennated views of human responsibility. The lad, now aware of his set-apartness, and warring against his own conviction, finds relief through this "faithful" pastor, who, in recognition of his ability in that direction, advises him to take to the stage and purify it, so that it may become respectable for Christians to connect it with the Church. This plan, however, is frustrated by unforseen causes. He is graduated at length, and, still under conviction against his will, he learns that he may be cured of his evident call to the ministry by attending a certain theological seminary, where the learned professors spend their time in dealing with abstractions, to the exclusion of all living questions. The experiment is entirely satisfactory, and he goes away before graduation. A business trip to the Rocky Mountains in search of Elder Hooper, the old itinerant, brings him in contact with the living gospel as exemplified by this saint, and he finally surrenders to God. And the contest between skepticism and the truth over "That Boy" is decided in favor of truth.

The above statement of what this book is we copy from the New York Christian Advocate. We add our estimate of the book. It is one that should be in the hands of our young people especially. It has also many most valuable hints for our older teachers and preachers, as well as for parents. The mother of "That Boy" is a real Christian heroine, and his salvation illustrates [illegible] character can be saved by Christ [illegible] the pure word of [illegible] theological [illegible]. Mr. Daniels [illegible].

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE for April (Republished by the LEONARD SCOTT PUBLISHING Co. 41 Barclay Street, New York), contains an unusual amount of light reading. The serial "Mine is Thine" is continued, and another, called "John Caldigate," is commenced, and there is, besides, a short story or sketch, showing how a lord of the 'wheel' of fashion revives an old style and makes it new again. Several pages are devoted to Metrical Translations from Heine, and there is also a little poem by Austin Dobson, "To Ethel, who wishes she had lived 'In the teacup-times of hood and hoop, or while the patch was worn.'" There is a long and interesting review, with numerous quotations, of "The Moor and the Loch," by John Colquhoun, which describes salmon-fishing, and the shooting of all sorts of game, even seals and eagles. Part XI. of "The storm in the East" is a discussion of the war, which were recapitulated last month. The closing article discusses the probability of the meeting of the Congress.

The periodicals printed by THE LEONARD SCOTT PUBLISHING CO. (41 Barclay Street, N. Price, $4 a year for any one, or only $15 for all, and the postage is prepaid by the Publishers.

The May number of that useful magazine, The National Sunday School Teacher, is a real encyclopedia of instruction in its line. Scribner, for May, fits the season. "Merry Days with Bow and Quiver," and "Bird Architecture," are finely illustrated articles. The brief editorial note on "Retribution" administers a well-deserved censure to newsmongers who have treated the tremendous subject of future Punishment with so much levity. Retribution is certain; but whether punishment will be endless the editor hesitates to say. But why should he?

Wide Awake, for May, will be sure to please the little folks. The picture of the Froggies going to sleep is funny. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. $3.

St. Nicholas, for May, will charm the little folks. The Story of May-day in old England and elsewhere is very entertaining.

The Sunday-school Times' Scholars' Quarterly, second quarter for 1878, has been received. It contains the lessons, with notes and maps, of the International series for the second quarter, ending June 33. A valuable publication. Published by the Sunday-school Times, Philadelphia.

The May-June number of the North American Review will contain a debate on the question, "Is Man a Depraved Creature?" by Rev. T. W. Chambers, D.D., and Rev. O. B. Frothingham.

Our Class Leaders.

We are often asked for the names of books suitable for class leaders. We recommend the following and ask the Presiding Elders and Pastors to do all they can to put these books in the hands of the leaders.

1. The Class-Leader: His Work, and How to do it. With illustrations of principles, needs, methods and results. By Rev. John Atkinson, A. M. 12mo., $1.50.
2. Address to Class-Leaders. By Bishop Janes. 12mo., 20c.
3. Seed-Thought; A Hand-Book of and Devotion. By Rev. Geo. C. Robinson. Price $1.00.
4. Father Reeves, Methodist Class-Leader. By Edward Corderoy. 18mo., 35c.
5. All for Christ: How the Christian may Obtain, by a renewed Consecration of His Heart, the fullness of Joy Referred to by the Savior just Previous to His Crucifixion, with illustrations from the lives of those who have make this consecration. By Thomas Carter, D.D. 16mo., 75c.

For any of these books address Nelson & Phillips, New Orleans.

COURSE OF STUDY
FOR
Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ 89, §6 of the Discipline of 1878, the following has been prescribed as a Course of Study for Local Preachers:

I.—Let candidates for license to preach be examined in the common branches of an English education, and on their general acquaintance with the Bible and the doctrines and usages of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

II. FIRST YEAR.—The Bible—History. Binney's Theological Compend. Steele's Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

TO BE READ.—Scripture History—Old Testament.—Smith's. Watson's Life of Wesley. A Hundred Years of Methodism.—Simpson.

III. SECOND YEAR.—The Bible—Doctrines. Wakefield's Theology—First Three Books. Christian Baptism.—Merrill.

TO BE READ.—Scripture History—New Testament.—Smith's. History of the [illegible]. Butler's [illegible], 8 vo.

IV. [illegible] Four [illegible] Wat- [illegible] Sermons.—Vol. [illegible] the Gospel Records.—Nast. D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation—In one vol., 8 vo.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.
2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.
3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

Tortures that need not be Endured.

People suffer a great deal of pain unnecessarily. Among tortures that need not be endured are those inflicted by the rheumatism and the gout, since the acrid element in the blood which produces them by contact with the sensative coverings of the muscles and joints may be eliminated by the use of that matchless depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, before the inflamatory symptoms are developed to any great extent. When it is considered what excruciating tortures rheumatism inflicts, and what a tendency it has, when fully developed to attack the heart, the advisibility of an early use of such a reliable antidote becomes at once apparent. The rheumatic virus is expelled from the blood by the increased action of the kidneys—which act as strainers—produced by the Bitters, and the sufferer will find if he uses this supreme defensive agent, that he will be protected against a return of the agonizing complaint. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, liver and bowel complaints and other maladies, are also cured by this admirable remedy. apr.4 4t.

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty, that one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Color Restorer," the most delightful article ever introduced to the American people for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and at the same time a lovely hair dressing and beautifier. It is totally different from all others; not sticky and gummy, and free from all impure ingredients that render many articles obnoxious; in fact, it is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury. Sold by all dealers in fine toilet articles, at 75 cents a bottle, or six bottles for $4. E. Hart & Co., wholesale agents, New Orleans.

Dr. J. M. Howe's
Inhaling Tube!
AND
COMMON AIR. WILL CURE
CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. BEERS, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. ADAMS, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schursman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. may2'78-tf

A Remarkable Conversion.

A correspondent of the Raleigh Christian Advocate gives this account of the conversion of the father of the late Chief Justice Ruffin:

He was reared in luxury, without religious instruction, and without God, and without hope in the world. Of course he sought pleasure in the ways of the world, and became eminently a man of the world, giving loose reign to his passions and appetite; following its follies, pastimes and fashions.

The Bible he had seen, but never read. Religion did not enter his thoughts. He was a gamester; fond of cards, dice, cock fighting and the turf.

A celebrated race was to come off in the city of Richmond. He had three fine horses in training. The set time came. He set out in his carriage for the city. On his way he became weary, felt lonely and greatly oppressed with ennui. Coming up to a country store he inquired for a novel. The honest merchant did not know what that was. When informed that it was a book, he replied that they had no books but spelling books and Bibles. Not wishing to read the spelling book, he purchased a Bible, opened it, and began to read to while away the time. It amazed him. He threw it down exclaiming: "Well that is the biggest lie ever put in a book." Riding along, and no one but his driver to talk to, in order to divert his mind, he picked it up, opened it, and began to read again. This time it interested him. He read on and on. Arriving at the city he called for a room and a light; went to his room to read; ate his supper and returned to his room, and read himself to sleep. Awoke in in the morning and read until breakfast. It changed his thoughts and he determined to change his life. Before the hour came for the race he had made up his mind not to engage in it.

He went to the race track and asked his comrades what was the amount of his forfeit. They objected to his withdrawal, and refused to name the amount. He was firm in his resolution. They thought he had gone crazy, and asked him what he meant. He told them that he meant what he said. Paid his forfeit, ordered the servants to take the horses home and hitch them to the plow; entered his carriage for home, reading the Bible nearly all the way. On reaching home, before entering his house or greeting his wife, he ordered the servants to build a fire in the yard, upon which he laid his cards, dice, backgammon board, etc.; had his game cocks killed for the servants' supper, entered his house, called his household together, read the Bible and held prayers with them. From that time forward the family altar was established.

Heirs to Twenty Millions.

For a long time past a tradition has been cherished in the families of three brothers named Wentforth, living in New Jersey, that their maternal grandfather, some time about the year 1815, pre-empted the land on which the city of Little Rock, Ark., stands. About twenty twenty years ago a suit was begun for this land by an heir belonging to another branch of the family, but the three brothers were not sanguine as to its success, and refused to allow themselves to be taxed heavily to carry it on. When however, last year Elias Wentforth of Elizabethport, one of the brothers, was offered $500 for his claim, he refused, saying that if it was worth anything it was worth more than that. Last week two days were spent by the heir who has been carrying on the suit, in informing the Wentforths that the [illegible] of Little Rock was theirs, the United States Courts having at last rendered a decision in their favor. The property thus acquired is variously valued at from $10,000,[illegible] to $20,000,000. TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Class-Leader,

His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo.............................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make for the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR;—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

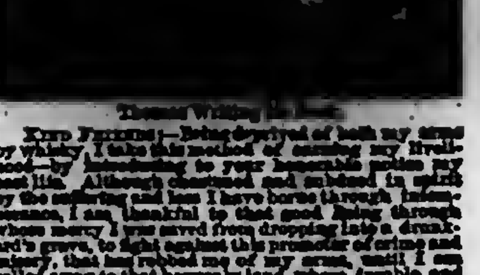
ELEVEN YEARS A DRUNKARD.

An unassuming narrative of the terrible and thrilling experience of THOMAS DONER, who lost both arms through drink, and has written this book with his teeth. (See cut.)



Thomas Doner [illegible]

KIND FRIENDS:—Being deprived of both my arms by whisky, I take this method of earning my livelihood—by introducing to your honorable notice my past life. Although chastened and subdued in spirit by the suffering and loss I have borne through intemperance, I am thankful to that good Being through whose mercy I was saved from dropping into a drunkard's grave, to fight against this promoter of crime and misery, that has robbed me of my arms, until I am called away to that heavenly land, where trouble and sorrow never come, and where, as far as these statements are concerned, I am willing to be judged at last.

THOMAS DONER.

This book is neatly illustrated, and is worthy of the consideration of all temperance workers—IS JUST THE BOOK FOR THE TIMES.

It delineates the First Step, the Second Step; the allurements and remorse produced by them; the drunken revels at houses of debauchery; fights, stabbings, suicides of drunken comrades, and thrilling incidents in army and hospital life; the degradation and woe produced by drunkenness vividly set forth as a living picture.

A WORD TO AGENTS.—One agent assures us that he can clear $50 per month. He sold two hundred books in four days. Another agent tried it six weeks, and then refused a school at $45 per month, board and washing included, and is now selling. A lady in Battle Creek, Michigan, sold fifty-seven books in one afternoon, and sold three hundred in a short time.

THIRTY THOUSAND copies have already been sold, and we have a new edition of Ten Thousand in the bindery, fully illustrated. They sell like hot cakes.

Prices are as follows: Single copy, 25 cents. Twelve copies, $2.00, sent post-paid. Twenty-five copies, $3.25. Fifty copies, $5.00, and One Hundred copies, $9.00, express charges added. We are willing to send books C. O. D., by express, but 25 to 50 cents will be saved by sending money order or registered letter. Now friends, if you send for 100 books, you will get $17 for selling them at 25 cents each. If you sell 300 in four days, you get $54.00 [illegible]. But you will not often sell so many. Most agents will average from $2.50 to $4.00 per day, by giving their time to it. We make the above statements from practical experience, and feel assured that those who may engage in selling these books will not be deceived or disappointed.

To canvass, and then deliver, is not the most successful way to make sales. Take the books along with you, and sell as you go. Most people rather buy, than subscribe for a book. It takes too much time to canvass, and then deliver.

Write your name, POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE plainly, and remember WHERE to send, and WHO to send to. Be sure to make no mistake.

Send 25 cents for sample copy.

and meet the wishes of our Southern friends. We trust he will soon visit us again.

I am sorry that indisposition deprived me of the privilege of attending the Convention, though I traveled sixty miles over a rough road to secure the privilege, but hard travel and constant exposures to all weathers begin to tell on me. I reached Atlanta to be confined most of the time to my room. But through the blessing of Heaven, I was permitted to attend the several denominational meetings of our ministers and church, among these an interview et our Southern workers with Dr. Vincent on the subject of our Sabbath-school interest in the South. In this conference with our preachers he brought out the lights and shades of the Southern field, by pointed questions, which were freely answered. He apologised for his union and catholic proclivities, in a few well chosen words; a needless work, for broad and liberal views need no apology amongst Methodist ministers of the Northern school; we are too glad to know that Dr. Vincent is accepted amongst all Christian people. But we are sorry to learn that the Sunday-school Union is "poor," with a declining income of from twenty to twenty-five per cent. per annum for the last two years. This should not be. Money is needed to sustain this noble enterprise, and the Church should furnish it. We trust the decline of the collections will now stop and that the tide will rise to the full.

Let us of the South do our part of the work and sustain our noble general agent, Rev. J. B. Ford, to the extent of our ability. No section of our land is so much interested in the success of our Sunday-school Union and Tract Society as the South, for we now receive thirty per cent. of the grant made, and many of the grants go to our colored work.

[illegible] important matter was discussed in that meeting: The necessity of a course of theological [illegible] and series of "hand-books" [illegible] purpose, as plain and clear [illegible] English words in every [illegible] South can make [illegible] to our church we had placed full [illegible] hundred fresh men in the [illegible] field, some of whom were [illegible], so that the necessities of the situation, not for America alone, but for other lands, demanded a series of just such books—not for the Dutch, the Spanish, the white or the black, but for Methodist beginners in all climes. We trust Dr. Vincent will carry that thought through.

But the money, where will it come from? I will venture a suggestion in answer to that question. [illegible] Dr. Vincent, if not required [illegible] a higher place, ask the next General Conference to transfer the location of the Sunday-school Union and Tract Society from New York City, where they are overshadowed by larger denominational [illegible] points in the Ohio valley or Mississippi valley, where these institutions will stand out in [illegible], and appeal to the [illegible] Conferences of those rich [illegible] our Northern conferences [illegible] this south field—say Louisville or St. Louis. Dr. Vincent is a [illegible] the South, and should be [illegible] travel toward the land [illegible]. I am sure if we [illegible] wealth in our young [illegible] conferences we would advocate the transfer to Nashville, [illegible], or Atlanta—but Louisville or St. Louis will do. This is [illegible] just with me. I am serious. [illegible] demands recognition in [illegible] ways, and an equitable pro[illegible] of these institutions. Our [illegible] is in the South to stay—in [illegible] or calm. For one I have [illegible] years of ministe[illegible] the mountains, in [illegible] for Christ and right. [illegible] in the South will yet be [illegible] not now, after we [illegible]. I am in good earnest [illegible] I ask one of these institu[illegible] the chief Book [illegible], the Mis[illegible] Phil[illegible] Extension [illegible] the Freedmen's [illegible] and Western [illegible] other [illegible] are [illegible] the [illegible] Tract [illegible] army in the field. That man must be blind, indeed, who cannot see that our embattled lines face South and Southwestward; he must be slow to hear who can not note the thunder of the bursting shells along that line. Whilst the sound recedes from northeastern ears, it is found stretching away towards Spanish America, with our left wing making tentative efforts towards Africa.

Again, political power ever reflects its shadow on the cause and church of God, for good or evil, according to the complexion of that political power. It is hardly possible to have a free church in a despotic State or city for any length of time. We feel this keenly in the South. The Southern wing of our own church feels it in such places as Atlanta and Baltimore, where there is a constant tendency to conform to existing opinion. But the city of New York is the most marked case of this kind in the North. It is in the hand of, and has been in the hands of my deluded countrymen and their European associates, ruled by a Prince of the "Holy Roman Empire"—to use the the blasphemous name they give it—this influence enforces a decayed conservative on all business circles, which again reflect its rays, despite our efforts, into the holes of our ecclesiastical bodies. I have seen this a long time, and as a Southern toiler fearfully felt its dangerous and damaging influence.

I think it would be well to remove the Sunday-school Union and Tract Society, two of the most sensitive institutions of our Protestant body, and transplant them beyond the deadly shade of a city not quite half American.

I have no ill-will to New York city, but I love the cause of God, and seeing an evil I venture to propose a remedy.

J. MITCHELL.

Atlanta, April 26, 1878.

Dr. Godman's Work in New York.

Mr. Editor:

We came to New York March 16, and on the 16th the New York Preachers' Meeting gave us opportunity [illegible] and afterward adopted the following emphatic preamble and resolution, viz:

"Whereas, Rev. Wm. D. GODMAN, D. D., of New Orleans, is now visiting the North with a band of Singers in behalf of the Home for the Orphans of Deceased Union Soldiers, which belongs to the Louisiana Conference of the M. E. Church, an important interest, dear to our hearts and sorely imperilled, therefore;

Resolved, That this New York Preachers' Meeting welcomes Dr. GODMAN and his cause, and commends him to the sympathies of our churches and of our general public."

This is a hearty resolution with a good ringing sound of approbation and sympathy. We are very thankful for it, and shall not cease to remember gratefully the entire body of men of God, who so promptly adopted it, and especially Drs. TAYLOR and CURRY, who at once espoused our cause and brought forward the resolution.

Your critical eye will observe the inaccuracy of calling our beloved Home (now) a home for the orphans of deceased Union Soldiers, although it is not unpleasant to be reminded that it once was such. I called the attention of the maker of the resolution to that historical inaccuracy, but he thought it not of sufficient moment to correct it.

We came hither at the auspicious time of the sessions of the two Conferences, the New York, and the New York East, Bishop FOSTER presiding in the latter, and Bishop BOWMAN in the former. We were cordially received and introduced.

At St. Luke's Church, where the New York Conference held its sessions, through the courteous co-operation of the pastor, Rev. W. P. ABBOTT, the University Singers were put in charge of the singing at divine service, the first night of the Conference session, April 3, at the time of the Annual Conference Sermon by Rev. Dr. JOHN MILEY, of Drew Seminary. After the sermon, which was one of rare excellence, the Rev. Dr. NEWMAN, the leader of the Lord's host in New Orleans, in the near post-bellum times, and the projector and initiator of the grand schemes of beneficence towards the colored race in Louisiana, which still go forward in their career of usefulness, made a telling speech, which was followed by our own brief statement, and then by a spontaneous collection, which was announced as [illegible] $55, but was promptly [illegible] by the liberality of [illegible], Esq., an active layman in St. Luke's Church. We thanked God and took courage.

At First Place Church, Brooklyn, the seat of the sessions of the New York East Conference, we sang on Friday evening, April 5, at the Freedmen's Aid Anniversary, in connection with Dr. LANSING'S eloquent address, and received a liberal collection. On Monday, April 8, we were present at the hour of the Conference adjournment and were invited to sing by vote, the entire Conference, including Bishop FOSTER, remaining, and a vast assembly of visitors crowding the house above and below. We were most enthusiastically received and were endorsed by a hearty and earnest resolution unanimously sustained. Rev. Dr. BUCKLEY, whose visit to the University in New Orleans will be long remembered by both the Faculty and the Students, has given us the aid of his powerful influence and cordial co-operation. We thank God for many devoted friends and efficient helpers. We are much encouraged by our reception here, and we hope that we shall soon be able to make reports that will establish the strongest confidence in the minds of all our friends that the Orphans' Home will stand secure.

We yesterday attended the Tuesday prayer meeting at Dr. PALMER'S and were blessed with the Master's gracious presence, and delighted with much that we heard. We wish we had time to report the meeting in full. But we have such a crowd of our own work that we can scarcely get the time to make an occasional note of it for the public print. Pray for us. We'll write as soon as we can.

Rev. Dr. RUST, our efficient and faithful corresponding secretary, was here over the Sabbath and held the anniversary at 43d street Church. On Monday we had a delightful interview of hours with him and anticipate that much good to our work will flow from it.

Yours, truly,
W. D. GODMAN.

Gulf District, Mississippi Conference.

Having completed my first round on the District, allow me [illegible] few words in regard to the spiritual condition of the work. Everywhere the salutary effects of the decisive action of the last annual Conference, in regard to the enforcing the Discipline, are to be seen My last appointment was about fifty miles from the railway, through the piney woods, nearly an unbroken wilderness. Night overtook me nine miles from my destination, and unable to find my way in the dark, I tethered my horse and with my saddle for a pillow, slept in the woods. Starting early the next morning I soon reached the church, where I found the pastor, Bro. Lindsey, and a little band of Christians engaged in an early prayer-meeting. Nor was it Sunday.

On the Handsboro and Ocean Springs Circuit, J. Gaston, pastor, a gracious revival was in progress. Bro. Gaston has won the hearts of the people, and is doing a noble work. Many have been added to the church.

At Bay St. Louis and Pass Christian, also, Bro. Penny, pastor, the church has been quickened, several reclaimed, and a number converted.

Our work at Summit and Magnolia was almost extinct. Bro. Ellis on reaching this, his new appointment, wrote for Sunday-school books. We sent him ten dollars worth from the SOUTHWESTERN office, and he told me that they did him fifty dollars worth of good. He immediately organized a Sabbath school, and I am satisfied that under God's guidance it will be the means of building up the Church on that work.

Bro. P. E. Bardwell, on the Fayette and Natchez Circuit, had organized a new Society of about forty members since conference. That circuit will have to be divided into two, perhaps three, circuits at the next Conference, if Brother Bardwell continues as he has begun.

I reached the other parts of the District so soon after Conference that the brethren had only nicely reached their appointments, but found them all faithfully at work, and I am greatly encouraged with the prospect of a glorious revival all over the District during the year.

Our District Steward's Meeting was held at Brookhaven Feb. 28th. A resolution was passed that each charge pay to the Episcopal Fund one dollar, immediately. This has been done. The Presiding Elder promised one dollar, so the Gulf District has already sent to Nelson & Phillips eighteen dollars, and has their receipt for the same. Hope the other Districts will go and do likewise.

L. BRADFORD, P. E.

Holston Seminary, New Market, Tennessee.

Mr. Editor:

Holston Seminary, as you state in your notice, is the old Holston College. It was chartered in 1838. It remained with us after the war, and under the Cape May decision the question of title is settled beyond a doubt. Some $4000 have been added to the value of the real estate since the war—mainly by our church.

Wm. J. Sibley, of the Foundry Church, Washington, D. C., donated a tract of land in Carter county, Tenn., which cost him over $1600. Abner Cornwell, of Renfield, near Rochester, N. Y., made a cash donation of $500 a year ago. Dr. Potter, of Canandaigua, N. Y., gave cash, $100. Mrs. J. M. Wood, of Gloversville, N. Y., is paying up ($25 yearly) a subscription of $100 for the purchase of books. Lyman Bennett, of Troy, paid $100. F. Gouldy, of Newburgh, and Samuel Carl, of Argyle, both of New York, gave each $50. Others gave smaller sums. The trustees of Public Schools, Washington, D. C., gave a set of 80 double-desks with chairs—these are cherry, made in Boston, second-hand, but when dressed over as good as new, worth $500. These contributions, with local funds contributed have enabled the trustees of the Seminary to set and fit up the Institution, buildings and grounds neatly, placing the whole in a pleasant and attractive condition and adding, as stated, $4000 to the value of the property, now worth $10,000.

The enrollment this year will reach 140 in the three departments. There are three teachers with two student assistants.

Ministers and people are turning their attention to this school. The patronizing territory extends from Knoxville to Bristol, covering a territory where there are 10,000 members in the M. E. Church. This is an Academic school. Students are fitting for college, preparing for the ministry, for teaching or for business.

A united and vigorous effort on the part of the ministry and church in this territory would fill this school to its utmost capacity.

A number of the students have been converted the present session. The aim of the Institution is to develop a decided religious influence. The teaching is thorough and the school is growing. The wants of the Institution are additional buildings, a library, apparatus and funds for endowment purposes like all such schools.

Another Veteran Entered Into Rest!

REV. BRODUS HOFFMAN, of West Texas Conference M. E. Church, departed this life at his home, in Eagle Lake, Texas, March 31, 1878. Bro. Hoffman had served two years at Eagle Lake, having been sent by conference to Egypt, and finding he could do nothing there, he went to Eagle Lake and at once entered upon the work of the Lord. Being successful, he was returned the second year. On account of failing health he could not reach his conference at Waco, and for that reason was granted a superannuated relation. I first met Bro. Hoffman in San Antonio, I think it was in 1872. Had just returned from the frontier, where he had been in the United States army and from which he had received his discharge, having served out his term of enlistment. He remained in San Antonio until he joined the West-Texas Conference in 1874. In all my intercourse with him I found him to be a truly devoted Christian, always abounding in the works of the Lord, visiting the sick, relieving the poor and needy, and cheering the despondent. Receiving a summons to visit him, and there being no other minister of our church there, I went to see him and spent a half a day in reading the Bible to him and talking with him. He was perfectly resigned and was "only waiting for the boatman" to come and bear him over the stream.

He expressed great satisfaction at having a brother minister as an eye witness and whom he could entrust with the duty of conveying to his brethren the fact that he died at his post, in faith of a glorious immortality beyond the grave. I was not present when he died, but I am informed that he remained sensible to the last, and in his death struggle waved his hands in triumph, and pointing towards heaven, he passed away to his reward! May the widow's God keep and protect his devoted and afflicted wife, who is left to mourn his loss. He leaves no children, but a host of friends.

Holly Springs, Miss.

The Murphy Temperance movement reached us one week ago in the persons of Messrs. Leavenworth and Ennis. Meetings are held each evening in the public hall and about four hundred have already donned the blue, among whom are many who have been almost daily visitants at the bar. It is devoutly to be hoped that lasting good may be accomplished during the present effort. The protracted meeting at Asbury Chapel has closed and many new born souls have been gathered into the church.

The beautiful weather mentioned two weeks ago has given place to torrents of rain which come pouring down every day as if angry for not being allowed to come earlier. But we trust in "Him who doeth all things well."

Lexington Conference and Roberts' Park Church.

Bishop Peck says in the New York Christian Advocate:

Some eight years ago eight men of color were taken from the Kentucky Conference and constituted the Lexington Conference. I met this conference recently, and instead of eight constituent members I found, with probationers, about eighty men, many of them intelligent, and all full of zeal for God. They did their business well, and showed marked progress in everything. A most remarkable part deserves to be mentioned. Their church could not have accommodated the people, colored and white, who crowded around them with liveliest interest, and the pastor and trustees of our most splendid edifice, Roberts' Park Church, promptly, and of their own accord, placed their church entirely at the disposal of the conference. There we were [illegible] work of an annual conference. This privilege was not conceded to us grudgingly, but most heartily—the superb audience-room, and every other room, to be used entirely at our discretion; and pastor, Rev. Dr. Bayliss, trustees, and other splendid people with us, constantly witnessing our transactions and sharing our joy with loving smiles and tears.

Thus it went on through Sunday. All the seats required were occupied by colored preachers, members, and friends, their brethren and sisters of different color sitting wherever they could find a vacancy. We were really "one in Christ Jesus." And it continued to the last, the good white sexton keeping everything in perfect order, only being grieved that the conference insisted upon his taking a little money to show their gratitude, insisting that he was the one to render thanks, for he had enjoyed enough to more than compensate him for his labor.

Public thanks to our brethren of Roberts' Park Church! They have inaugurated a new era of fraternity, in which I heartily rejoice. My delightful home was with Colonel J. W. Ray and his excellent family, and my leisure time was all taken up with social enjoyments in the midst of devout and excellent people of all our Churches in Indianapolis, notwithstanding I was the president of a colored conference. A lady (stranger) said to a friend of mine with surprise, "The Bishop is almost white!"

We are deeply pained, says the Nashville Christian Advocate to note the execution of mob law in Huntsville, Ala., April 17, on a white man named White, and two negroes, who were confined in jail for the murder of Mr. Shoenberger. The authorities were powerless to prevent the execution, as it was effected by a large force of armed men. No doubt is entertained in regard to the guilt of the wretched men, and their unlawful "taking off" is sought to be justified by the law's delay and uncertainty. But two wrongs do not make one right. The supremacy of law must be maintained. The case is very sad and admonitory.

Despotism is an offence against justice; it is a degradation of the dignity of man, and ought not, on any occasion, to be either practiced or submitted to.

The International Sunday-School Convention.

SECOND DAY.

The second day's session was marked by an increased attendance of delegates and visitors, and by the most interesting proceedings. The morning was occupied with a discussion of the true basis of Sunday-school work and a report of the agencies. The afternoon was occupied with Bible reading and addresses by Rev. Dr. Gibson, of Chicago, and Dr. J. H. Vincent, of New York. A communication from the London Sunday-school Union was read. The following committee were appointed to select a committee to prepare a system of International Lessons covering the next seven years: Messrs. Smith Baker, Clinton B. Fisk, C. F. Coffin, J. A. Hayden, W. Hickey, S. C. Barnitz, Samuel Couples, T. H. Prichard and Dr. Frothingham. At night there was a large meeting at the First Baptist Church. Addresses on Sunday-school work were delivered by Rev. A. G. Haygood and Sylvanus Landem, of Memphis. Two large overflow meetings were held.

THIRD DAY.

The third day's session was occupied with a discussion of the general theme of the promotion of Sunday-school work. Addresses were made by Stephen Paxon, of Illinois, Dr. Baird, of Nashville, J. P. Landis, of Germantown, Ohio, and others. The following were reported by the special committee as the International Lesson Committee for the next seven years:

Rev. Dr. J. H. Vincent, Methodist.
Rev. Dr. John Hall, Presbyterian.
Mr. B. F. Jacobs, of Illinois, Baptist.
Rev. Dr. Randolph, of Indiana, Baptist.
Rev. Dr. P. G. Gillett, of Illinois, Methodist.
Rev. Dr. R. Newton, of Pennsylvania, Episcopal.
Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer, of New Orleans, Presbyterian.
Rev. Dr. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, of Tennessee, M. E. Church, South.
Prof. A. Phelps, of Massachusetts, Congregationalist.
Rev. Dr. J. A. Broadus, of Kentucky, Baptist.
Rev. Dr. L. Braugher, of Pennsylvania, Evangelical Lutheran.
Rev. J. A. Warden, of New Jersey, Presbyterian.
Rev. Dr. D. H. McVickar, of Quebec Presbyterian.
Rev. Dr. John Potts, Ontario, Methodist.

The Committee on a new Executive Committee for next three years, reported, making Franklin Hall, of New York, Chairman. At night, after lectures and voluntary addresses, the Convention adjourned.

The Grave of Dr. Martin Ruter.

Rev. T. B. Buckingham writes the Texas Advocate that on a late visit to Washington, Texas, he visited the grave of Rev. Martin Ruter, D.D., who died in that city. He says:

> The church near which he was buried, and which bore his name, has long since ceased to be, and around the sacred spot there is now no enclosure, and nothing remains to mark the place but a plain marble slab, resting upon a few brick. A wagon, or some other vehicle, in passing by, has broken off one corner of the slab and moved it two or three inches from its proper place. Near by is a depression in the earth along which water runs in time of heavy rains, and by slow degrees a gully is being formed which will in a few years reach the grave and undermine the brick on which the slab rests, and possibly may be deep enough to wash away the sacred dust of our departed missionary.

Certainly this grave should have a suitable monument over it. All Methodists in Texas should unite in this. Dr. Ruter was the first Methodist missionary to Texas, and his name is well known as the author of the Church History used in our ministerial course of study.

The Southwestern Presbyterian says in its account of the Presbytery of Central Mississippi:

> Mr. G. W. Brown (colored) applied to be received under the care of Presbytery as a candidate for the Gospel ministry.
> He was taken through a most rigid and close examination on experimental religion, and also as to his motives for seeking the ministry, and Presbytery being satisfied with his answers and of him being in the communion of the Presbyterian Church, received him under her care as a probationer for the ministry.

A devout woman took her baby to church. The voice of the preacher waked the child into screams. "Do not go," said the minister, "the baby does not disturb me." "That may be," said the mother still retreating, "but you disturb the baby."

The fruit and vegetable growers in the vicinity of Nashville held a meeting a few days ago to take measures for quick and cheap transportation of their products to Northern cities, and a committee was appointed to gather statistics and other facts bearing on the subject to be reported at a later meeting. This business of shipping Southern fruits and vegetables to Northern cities is becoming important.

Practical Christianity.

The inward condition of the soul is best seen in the outward life of a man. "By their fruits ye shall know them," said Jesus. The Scripture says that "If any man among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain." No matter what the profession one makes, if his words and his tempers do not comport every day with that profession it is vain. If a man indulges in anger, pride, self-will, avarice, and all kinds of unholy passions, his life puts a denial on his profession. Religion is a profession, but it is more than that, it is a life—a something by which God will renew the world. It was that which Jesus meant when he said, "Ye are the light of the world," "Ye are the salt of the earth."

It is a serious matter to make a profession of religion, for then, as never before, are we looked critically upon by all men. Nor do we wonder that men stand off and say they do not wish to declare themselves for Christ in view of the solemnity of the occasion, especially when they see how so many of those who profess so much are, in the judgment of the world, so far below that profession in their lives. The world often expects too much of Christians and quite frequently judges harshly—yea, wrongfully, but it will judge, and men who are the avowed followers of the Lord Jesus must be careful that men bring no reproach on the good cause that me[illegible] to honor.

It may not be amiss to add here that sometimes people become self-complacent, self-satisfied. Then there is one step more which comes naturally and that self-complacency breeds sourness and fault-finding—they become intolerant, morbid, and all others are wrong, they only are right. They see blemishes in those about them, none in themselves. True religion makes its possessor humble, willing to bear with the faults of others, willing even to endure persecution for Christ's sake. It makes its possessor stable, so that he is not wafted about by every wind of doctrine. It makes us charitable in our contributions and in our opinions concerning others. Whenever we find people uncharitable, penurious, hard to please, easily grieved when their pet plans are thwarted or their opinions are crossed, we conclude that the fruits of the [illegible] are not in them. The lesson [illegible] difficult to learn is to [illegible] good [illegible] and [illegible] a good life. A [illegible] Christianity which shuts itself up [illegible] a corner, puts its light under a bushel is not the pure kind. Jesus said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven." It is not [illegible] that we enjoy our prayer [illegible] and preaching services, [illegible] world is around us to be saved, [illegible] have a great outside work [illegible], go work to-day in my [illegible]."

are permanently in the South are continually told they are not wanted in the South?" We quote:

But it is said often (and, indeed, constantly) that the Methodist Episcopal Church is "not wanted in the South?" Why? That little word will get in the way as we write. Why are not such men as Vincent, Fisk, Pershing, Ford, Ray, Foster, Searls, and hosts like them, and Scott, Simpson, Ames, Bowman, Haven, Foster, all of our bishops, Rust, Dashiell, Kynett, and thousands of others not wanted in the South? Who growls out to such, "We don't want you"? The people? No. They hail them with brotherly sympathy, respect and love, when they learn what they are and what they are doing. The Methodist Episcopal Church, with its ideas on Sunday-schools, on general education, on temperance, on true manhood, on Christian fellowship and fraternal harmony among all churches, its methods, its preaching, its liberality, its earnestness, its aggressiveness, is precisely what the South needs more than any thing else in all the realms of nature, Providence and grace. If the South is ahead of the North in Sunday-schools, benevolence, missionary zeal and labor for the colored people, the Methodist Episcopal Church ought to be planted and widely dispersed in the South, so as to catch the same fire and measure up to the Southern brethren in these things. If behind, that Church certainly ought to be made strong here to help all evangelical forces at work for the common good. Wherever it is said that the Methodist Episcopal Church is "not wanted," it is clear that it is much needed. Why do any say that the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Education, and temperance, and our style of Sunday-school work are not wanted in the South? That "why" is greatly in our way.

A correspondent of the Western from Atlanta says: "The brethren of our Church feel that the International Sunday-school Convention has done more good to them and their cause than anything they have ever known in the South. Rev. J. B. Ford, our Sunday-school agent for the South, was present as a delegate and enjoyed the exercises very much. In fact the very same things our Church has been offering the people, they heard here from the great voice of the nation, and the South now stands committed to this Sunday-school work. Our preachers are not sold out, and the fling, 'You are not needed here,' must be recalled forever. Our church is needed down there and is doing a grand work. Every Church and school and college and university planted there, whether for the whites or the colored people, is a moral lever to raise the lowly to a higher and better life."

The Murphy Temperance Reform.

We are glad to record the fact that Rev. Dr. McCarty has inaugurated the Murphy Temperance Reform in this city. New Orleans may not be cursed above other cities with strong drink but it is smitten badly enough to call forth the most earnest and persistent efforts on the part of all Christian temperance workers. The first meeting was held in Ames Church on Sabbath evening, April 28th, at which Dr. McCarty delivered a discourse which struck right home to the conscience and heart of the large and interested congregation then present. We present in another column a few passages of that address in which the woes of the giant evil are set forth. At the discourse, while the temperance glee club rendered a number of songs, the people were invited to come to the front, sign the pledge and don the ribbon, which is white with the word, "Temperance" in black letters. About one hundred, many of them young men, signed the pledge that evening. On last Sabbath evening, May 5th, the doctor lectured again to a still larger congregation, on "Downward Tendencies and Upward Currents," in which he fully set forth the nature of the Murphy Reform move. He also gave a graphic picture of the crusade work in the West, where he was then residing, and in which he participated. At the close a large number came forward again and entered the temperance army, as on the previous Sabbath evening. The move is timely and must be looked upon by all good people as Providential. It should have the hearty support of all Christian people. In such a move there should be no North, no South, no East, no West. For this is a field in which all can work who have a mind and heart to do so. Dr. McCarty voluntarily champions the cause of temperance on the Murphy plan in New Orleans, and announces himself as willing to visit other sections of the South in the same good cause. The battle will be a hard one, a long one, a desperate one. Let every friend of reform buckle on the whole armor and make a [illegible] fight against this monster [illegible] [illegible] were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Our [illegible] [illegible] We are [illegible] that they are on hand at these meetings. All the temperance organizations are represented. That is right. Remember that "united we stand, divided we fall."

Our Perfection.

The perfection of human nature implies the proper understanding of all man's relations to God. It means the coming into harmony of the mind of man with the mind and will of God. It is the mission of the mind to grasp those laws which are operating all around us, and to make every force of nature man's willing servant. The progress of the mind is not to be arrested until the "boundless universe" is surveyed and understood.

God is in human history working out his great designs among the nations of earth. God is declaring His being and His attributes in the voices of nature. He speaks to us out of the clouds in the thunder roar, and flashes His beauty in the lightning's glare. He paints His very presence in the sky and writes His goodness over the flowers of the field. The stars beckon to us out of their shining vaults. Our course is onward and upward. O, what a grand future in wisdom and holiness has man! What perfection even in this life is ours to enjoy! But what greater perfection and glory in the world to come! Let us go on to perfection.

"Purity" and "Morning of Life."

These are two beautiful works of art from the office of George Stinson & Company, Portland, Maine. These are Artist's Proofs steel engravings. In Purity the artist represents the dream of an orphan child, of her angel mother, who hovers over the little one. The effect is very beautiful. "The Morning of Life" is represented by two sisters. In the face of the younger girl is a wonderfully natural look of love, joy and tenderness. Her sister has evidently been away all day, and the little pet has been lonesome, and now she is so glad to see her. Both pictures tell plainly their own story.

The engraving is a rare piece of art.

It will contain all the Scientific, Biblical and other lectures and sermons, with addresses delivered in the children's meetings, also, all that will be said in the "Colloquials," "Conversations, Eventide, Conferences, Hebrew and Greek Classes, Receptions, Reviews, etc., etc. Both the monthly and daily will be sent to any address for one year for $1.60. In clubs of five or more, $1.40 each. We know of no way a Sunday-school worker, or a minister can invest a little money to greater profit. Address, M. Railey, Jamestown, N. Y.

Simpson Methodist Episcopal Church, located on Valence street, this city, was burned last week. The congregation had just completed services, when a fire broke out in a building near by. The wind was blowing toward the church and in a little while it was reduced to ashes. There was an insurance of $1,800. The congregation is already at work raising money to add to the proceeds of the insurance policy, to make up a better building than the old one. The contract has already been let by a building committee. Pastor Forest and his trustees are exhibiting commendable zeal.

In the Supreme Court, on Monday last, Chief Justice Manning read an elaborate opinion in the case of the State ex rel. the New Orleans Pacific Railway Co. vs. Francis T. The decision of Judge Rogers was reversed and judgment was rendered in favor of the railroad and against the State, ordering the issuance of the bonds in accordance with said act.

Education—New Orleans University.

The subject of education is one which must not be overlooked. Education is not necessary to salvation but it is a great help. The school has claims which must not be passed by. We can easily see how great are the advantages of education by comparing those who have not had that advantage with those who have. The educated man or woman can think better than the one who is ignorant of that kind of knowledge we obtain from books. The man who has been drilled in the school room by a good teacher or teachers has an advantage over him who has never been there. Education is at the bottom of all our progress. Without it we should be left in the deepest darkness in every respect.

Education is of great value to the Christian layman as well as minister. Every preacher is a teacher, and how can any man teach properly who has himself not been taught? To rightly understand the word of God one needs to know much—the more the better. And then let us not forget that knowledge, education, science do not interfere with true spiritual religion. The more a man knows the humbler and holier he ought to be. Some of the brightest lights the world has ever had have been its holiest men and women. The Methodist Episcopal Church has made very great provision for the culture of her people. We have seminaries and colleges of all grades all over the land. Large sums of money have been freely given to support these schools so that all excuses are taken away. All, who will may come and receive.

Take as an example the New Orleans University. It is open to the young men and women of the State—it is for them—for all who will come. It ought to have double the number who do now attend it. There ought to be scores of young men and women there gaining an education for future usefulness. The school is under good management. Prof. J. H. Bean, who has been an instructor for fifteen years, is assisted by a corps of good teachers and the school was never managed better than it is now, in the judgment of the writer, who sees it every day.

The theological department, instead of having a dozen students, should have in it at least fifty.

Let every preacher in the Louisiana Conference take a new interest in this important school and make it in every sense worthy of the name it bears and mission it has undertaken.

Louisiana Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The first Convention of this Association in the State of Louisiana convened in Baton Rouge, Friday, April 26th. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mr. Cree, of New York, after which Mr. Alvan E. Read, of Baton Rouge, called the Convention to order. Mr. W. C. Shepard, of New Orleans, was elected temporary President, and J. M. Watkins, M. D., also of New Orleans, temporary Secretary. A committee on permanent organization, consisting of Hon. Alvan G. Read, of Baton Rouge; P. W. Diendorf, New Orleans, and N. B. Norwood, of Clinton, was appointed, and subsequently reported the following officers, who were elected: President, Rev. Christian Keener, Alexandria; Vice-President, W. C. Shepard, New Orleans, Secretaries, W. C. Goodale, Baton Rouge, and D. M. Rush, Clinton.

Thirty-eight regular delegates were in attendance, and most of them took an active part in the proceedings of the Convention. Mr. Thomas K. Cree, of New York, represented the International Executive Committee. The attendance upon all the sessions of the convention were large, especially the night meetings and those held on Sunday. Each day a large and interesting open air meeting was held. The topics discussed were practical, the discussions were spirited, and the result of the Convention will be a new interest in the work of the Young Men's Christian Association in all parts of the State.

The welcome meeting on Friday night was addressed by his Honor, Leon Jastremskie, Mayor of Baton Rouge, Rev. J. T. Sawyer, Prof. J. W. Nicholson, Rev. C. Keener, W. Shepard, and Thos. K. Cree. The addresses were all brief, hearty and interesting.

The following practical topics bearing on Christian Association work were discussed: "Our prayer meetings—how can we make them more interesting?" opened by Rev. Jno. T. Sawyer; "The work of the International and State Committees, and our duty to them," T. K. Cree; "How can we increase the number and efficiency of the Associations in our State?" W. H. Goodall; "Cottage, neighborhood and open air meetings," W. C. Shepard; "How to study the Bible"(a), "For our own growth," Rev. J. McLanran; (b) "For use with others," Alvan G. Read; "Our duties as church members to our churches," Rev. Ruffin Davis; "What duty do we owe to young men unreached by present appliances," J. W. Amiss; "What means have you found most useful in reaching young men," Rev. Patrick Lane and Chas. Widney; "Personal effort for souls," Thomas K. Cree; "What ought our Association to do for the spiritual welfare of the colored young men of our State," W. C. Shepard; "Temptations peculiar to young men," Alvan E. Read; "Local Association work, its needs and opportunities," T. K. Cree. Mr. Cree gave two interesting Bible readings, and on Sunday the consecration meeting, the young men's meeting, and the Gospel meeting were very interesting and profitable.

The closing scene of the Convention was very impressive. The delegates and friends, to the number of a hundred or more joined hands and sang, "Blest be the tie that binds," and "We shall gather at the river." Much religious interest was developed in the city by the Convention.

The following State Executive Committee was appointed: Baton Rouge, Jno. T. Sawyer, Chairman; H. N. Sherburn, W. H. Goodale, J. W. Amiss and Alvan E. Read; New Orleans, W. C. Shepard, W. C. Raymond, J. W. Watkins, C. H. Shute, F. M. Norman and R. H. Brown; Alexandria, Christian Keener; Monroe, J. T. Allison; Greensburg, James A. Godfrey, Leander Pitier.

The deepest spiritual interest was manifested at the sessions of the Convention. The number manifesting a desire to be prayed for by rising in the meetings gradually increased from twelve at first, to twenty-five, besides many verbal requests. On the last evening there were no less than twenty conversions.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. W. A. Primus, Stony Point, La.: "We can report two recent conversions, and two accessions to the church. Except for the scarcity of money all connected with this work is in good condition."

Rev. D. W. McLachlan: "The Lord is blessing Rev. James J. Shumpert, Aberdeen, Miss., with a glorious revival. Up to this time there have been twenty conversions and sixty-eight persons have united with the church on probation."

Rev. A. Martin, State Line, La.: "Our second quarterly services have just been held by our Presiding Elder, Rev. J. Gould. The pastor's report shows, for the quarter, twelve conversions, twenty-nine received on probation, and twenty-one in full connection. The Sunday-school numbers twenty-nine."

Rev. H. Primm, Memphis, Tenn.: "We have had fifteen accessions to the church in Centenary Chapel since Conference. The prospects of the old mother church of Methodism in this city are bright. We have cast out our four anchors, as mentioned in the beautiful poem published in the SOUTHWESTERN, April 18th, and await the coming of the great day of the Lord."

Rev. L. Carper, San Antonio, Texas: "In a protracted meeting of ten days duration, just closed, there were thirty-one conversions and thirty three accessions to the church. Many others who attended our meetings are under deep spiritual conviction, and we pray that the Spirit may continue to move upon their hearts until they are constrained to give up all for Christ. Our membership were greatly blessed and encouraged, and look to the future hopefully."

Rev. P. Harris, Columbia Circuit, Miss.: "We have no cheerful account to give of our work here. The people are very poor, do not own even churches in which to worship, and their crops last year were almost a failure. If our brethren of the Mississippi Conference can do nothing else for us we hope that they will pray for us. Sin does so abound in this region that the work must not be given up. We have received on probation this year forty-one, and our Sunday-schools number in all twenty-five scholars. We bless the Lord for his goodness."

Search will continue until morning. It is not known what disposal will be made of those captured. Legal measures will be adhered to until they fail, when desperate remedies will be applied. May 19, 1878.—NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM.

Scripture.—Dan. 2: 36-45.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets."—28

TOPIC.—A kingdom never to be destroyed.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

Preliminary.—The events of this lesson fall within the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. It is about four years subsequent to the time when Daniel made known his desire to live upon pulse and water rather than upon the defiled delicacies of the king's table. The Hebrew youths have passed through their prescribed three years of instruction and of training, and are now numbered among "the wise men," and have a recognized position at the court of the great Babylonian king.

Nebuchadnezzar dreams a dream, apparently so significant and of such dread import that his sleep for that night is broken up. The king commands the magicians, the astrologers, and the sorcerers to be summoned in order that they may tell him the dream and its interpretation. The young Hebrews, be it noticed, are not among those who are thus called to the help of the king; for he has not yet found out that they are "ten times better than all the magicians and the astrologers that were in all his realm." His experience with reference to the dream was one of the facts that lead him to find this out.

The dream had three distinct parts: 1. The image. 2. Its destruction. 3. The growth of the stone that destroyed it. The image had four remarkable characteristics. 1. The head of gold. 2. The breast and arms of silver. 3. The belly and thighs of brass. 4. The legs of iron, and the feet and toes, partly of iron and partly of clay. The image as a whole, represented world domination. No wonder that an image so bright, so curiously formed, and having such apparent significance and such a dreadful appearance, should trouble the thoughts of the king? We look, now, at the interpretation of its various parts.

The Kingdom of Gold (36-38).—That was the kingdom inaugurated by Nabopolassar, and which lasted from B. C. 625 to B. C. 538. The original Chaldean monarchy, which commenced about the same time as the founding of Babylon (B. C. 2234), was destroyed by an Arab invasion B. C. 500. The Chaldeans were superseded by the Assyrians, and, again, in B. C. 625, they were overthrown, and the territory was divided between Media and Babylon. Under Nebuchadnezzar, the latter kingdom became an immense power. It reached from Luristan to Egypt, and included the then historical nations—Palestine, Arabia, Phœnicia, Cyprus, and it is said, extended even unto Spain. Nebuchadnezzar, practically, ruled over the whole civilized world. In the parallel vision of Daniel, the Babylonian Empire is represented as a lion with the wings of an eagle 7: 4. In that the same superiority is claimed for it that is here asserted under the imagery of the head of gold, for the lion is the king of beasts, as the eagle is the king of birds. By the union of the two is signified the strength of the one co[illegible] ness of the [illegible] [illegible] both a comment and an illustration of the vision.

The Kingdom of Silver (39).—That [illegible] is the image by the breast and arms made of that metal. [illegible] is had to the Medo-Persian [illegible] which succeeded the Babylonian [illegible] to world supremacy. [illegible] Cyrus was the founder, and [illegible] permanent than its predecessor, [illegible] it lasted from B. C. [illegible] 333. This power was [illegible] as a belligerent ram, "pushing westward, and northward, and southward." 8:4. In this case, the ascendency of the Persian over the Median power was happily symbolized by the horn which came up last, but was higher than the other. Cyrus, after making himself master of Media, and welding those two kingdoms into one, started on a career of conquest. He overcame the triple alliance of Babylon, Egypt and Lydia that was formed to oppose his progress, reduced Asia Minor to subjugation, thus securing as one of its vassals the wealthy Croesus, [illegible] subdued Egypt, and pushed his conquests into Central [illegible]

The Kingdom of Brass (39).—The [illegible] kingdom of Alexander the [illegible] B. C. 333 to B. C. 30. The [illegible] the rapidity of its movements [illegible] represented in Dan. [illegible] with four wings. [illegible] energy, and in an [illegible] short time, did Alexander [illegible] the ruler of the [illegible] Dan. 8:5 [illegible] history [illegible] Persian power is [illegible] and in that it [illegible] the image of a [illegible] far exceeded [illegible] Asia [illegible] to the Hydaspes [illegible] great [illegible]

[illegible] the complete fulfillment of this prophecy with respect more particularly to the kingdom of Christ. But, so far, the steps of its fulfillment are plainly discernible. Hitherto it has been endowed with imperishable life. All the persecutions directed against it have signally failed of its extermination, and, indeed, have had so much just the opposite effect, that it has come to be a saying that "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." The dew of youth is still on its brow, though eighteen centuries have passed since it was cradled in the hills of Judea. Other religions bear evidence of age and decay, but this, plainly, is but in the freshness of its young strength. Whatever has opposed it, has become as the dust of the summer threshing floor. It has used no carnal weapons, but such as it has used have been mighty towards the pulling down of Satan's strongholds. Whosoever has fallen on this stone has been broken, but on whomsoever it has fallen it has ground him to powder. It has smitten the feet of many a gigantic and cruel wrong, and has crumbled it in the dust. Many a high towering evil yet shall it break into pieces and utterly destroy. We all should pray that His kingdom may speedily come, and work faithfully to that end. And, whenever the outlook from our human standpoint seems discouraging, let us remember that "the dream is certain and the interpretation thereof sure."

New Publications.

Berenice; by Mrs. E. M. Keplinger. Published by Miss S. M. Haight, New Orleans.

Our first thought on taking up this volume and reading the names of author and publisher, is that the "woman's sphere" problem is being solved by the ladies of the South in a very quiet but very practical manner. No Sorosis, no conventions, [illegible] not words, is their motto. [illegible] tion of the author appears [illegible] been [illegible] upon the [illegible] of truth [illegible] but [illegible] of [illegible] an old [illegible] on, [illegible] to us [illegible] histories; [illegible] manners and customs described are such as were known before the war. There is a full share of the extravagant and sensational, but such things seem to be [illegible] of the kind. When reference is made to Southern products, fruits, flowers, etc., the familiarity of the author with her subject is in very pleasing contrast with the ridiculous blunders made [illegible] of other climes in [illegible] descriptions.—We [illegible] breakfast station, in the Pan Handle depot at Cincinnati. In fact it is no change, as the new car takes the place of the old one while the passengers are breakfasting. The romantic scenery of the Pennsylvania route resembles the grandeur of Switzerland. Besides, this great thoroughfare passes through Louisville, Covington, Cincinnati, Columbus, Ohio, Steubenville, Birmingham, Pittsburg, Johnstown, Presson, Altoona, Harrisburg, Philadelphia, Bristol, Trenton, New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Princeton, Rahway, Newark, Jersey City, and many other important cities of beauty and celebrity. For families and tourists this double tracked route is the best in every respect, as it has so many agreeable advantages.

[illegible] people. Of the punishment [illegible] by the overseer in the case [illegible] says: "The boy, Tom, [illegible] the tragedy [illegible] about forty years of [illegible] light mulatto, and generally [illegible] the sequel proved. This boy was hung head downwards to a [illegible] by the wretch, who, miscalculating his powers of endurance, allowed him to remain until he died [illegible] the effects of his punishment." [illegible] of this Tom, be- [illegible] avenging Nemesis. "I [illegible]," she said, "from the [illegible] understand the meaning [illegible] hate the race that [illegible] ber. I was told how he died and how he looked when [illegible] cut him down from the tree [illegible] the overseer hung him." [illegible] book contains over 300 [illegible] elegantly bound in [illegible] Price [illegible] to be [illegible] principal book stores, or [illegible] to the publisher.

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

Tortures that need not be Endured.

People suffer a great deal of pain unnecessarily. Among tortures that need not be endured are those inflicted by the rheumatism and the gout, since the acrid element in the blood which produces them by contact with the sensitive coverings of the muscles and joints may be eliminated by the use of that matchless depurant, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, before the inflamatory symptoms are developed to any great extent. When it is considered what excruciating tortures rheumatism inflicts, and what a tendancy it has, when fully developed to attack the heart, the advisibility of an early use of such a reliable antidote becomes at once apparent. The rheumatic virus is expelled from the blood by the increased action of the kidneys—which act as strainers—produced by the Bitters, and the sufferer will find if he uses this supreme defensive agent, that he will be protected against a return of the agonizing complaint. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, liver and bowel complaints and other maladies, are also cured by this admirable remedy. apr.4 4t.

COMMON AIR WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

The Rev. N. N. BEERS, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. ADAMS, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. may2'78-tf

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuffs," "dust," "ashes," inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 138 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. O. REMICK.

Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

The Horse and his Rider.

In the history of Rome it is related that in 361 B. C. a great chasm opened in the middle of the Forum which it was found impossible to fill. The soothsayers said it would close [illegible] what Rome possessed of most value, and then the State would be perpetual. A noble youth named M. Curtius demanded if Rome had anything of more value than arms and valor. He mounted his horse, richly caparisoned, and, amid the silence of the people, spurred him over the brink of the tremendous precipice (vide Liv. 1, vii, 6.) I have seen a striking picture of this somewhere. It represented the horse and rider after they had passed the brink and were descending to the unknown depths. There was a remarkable contrast between the fright of the brute and the unruffled self-possession of the man. The limbs of the horse were tightened to his body, and the muscles of his neck drew his head to the chest, and a shuddering terror expressed itself in the [illegible] of his starting eyes. The rider was serene and calm, with a [illegible] expression of majesty on his face, as of one who lived with high thoughts. If I were set to spiritualize this picture, I should say that it was no mean representation of a ripe Christian departing this life. The horse is the body, and the rider is the spirit. Flesh shrinking, spirit steady and calm and solemn. Flesh dreading the [illegible] shock, and spirit wrapt in the glory of action, descending that it may ascend.—Cook.

Trial.

This is a world of trial. Everything here is put to the test. It is so in philosophy; it is so in mechanics. It is so in all the ordinary [illegible] of life, and it is so also in religion. Every philosophical theory is put to the severest test of logic, or practical experiment, before its correctness is admitted. [illegible] mechanical contrivance is examined by the laws of mechanics, and submitted to the severest practical test, to determine its capability [illegible] the end for which [illegible] intended. In every department of [illegible] men are examined, [illegible] or tried, to ascertain their ability to perform the duties which [illegible] propose to assume. It is so [illegible] the lawyer, the physician, the [illegible] the teacher. They are all [illegible] to ascertain what are their [illegible]. And [illegible] so also in [illegible] the providence of [illegible] Christian is tempted [illegible] tried. [illegible] are exempt. No [illegible] ever gets beyond the [illegible] of trial and temptation in [illegible] world. He should not expect [illegible] Even Christ himself was tempted, [illegible] only in the beginning, but [illegible] the very close of his ministry. [illegible] who has no temptation [illegible] very good terms with [illegible] world and Satan. Make up [illegible] mind, then, as a Christian, to [illegible] to de[illegible] graces [illegible] Spirit that you possess. The [illegible] of your faith is much more precious than of gold that perisheth. "Think it not strange, then, concerning the fiery trial that is to [illegible] you, as though some strange [illegible] happened unto you, but rejoice, inasmuch as you are a partaker of Christ's sufferings, that [illegible] glory is revealed, ye may [illegible] with exceeding joy."

Be Kind.

[illegible] our Father cause flowers [illegible] so large a portion [illegible]? They are not food, [illegible] they furnish [illegible] they are of no absolute [illegible] in the common meaning of [illegible] then, did [illegible] ever [illegible]. What flowers are to [illegible] kindness, of courtesy [illegible] are to men. How [illegible] touch, a kind look, an [illegible] politeness, a [illegible] hospitality, has filled a [illegible] with peace, a stricken [illegible] with joy, a sinking spirit [illegible]! "Be ye kind one [illegible], tender-hearted, forgiving [illegible], even as God for [illegible] hath forgiven you."

It delineates the First Step, the Second Step, the [illegible] and remorse produced by them; the drunken reveling at houses of debauchery, [illegible] suicides of drunken comrades, and thrilling incidents in army and hospital life; the degradation and woe produced by drunkenness vividly set forth as a living picture.

A WORD TO AGENTS.—One agent assures us that he can clear $30 per month. He sold two hundred books in four days. Another agent tried it six weeks, and then refused a school at $65 per month, board and washing included, and is now selling. A lady in Battle County, Michigan, sold fifty-seven books in one afternoon, and sold three hundred in a short time.

We make the above statements from practical experience, and feel assured that those who may engage in selling these books will not be deceived or disappointed.

To canvass, and then deliver, is not the most successful way to make sales. Take the Books along with you, and sell as you go. Most people rather buy, than subscribe for a book. It takes too much time to canvass, and then deliver.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo..........................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory.

GOD KNOWS.

God knows! Oh sweet assurance this,
Bid doubt and fear remove;
Accept, my soul, the thought of bliss,
Eternal goodness prove.
He knows what snares thy pathway throng,
Thy pathway daily new;
And His almighty arm is strong,
To bear the conqueror through.

God knows—thy sins are not concealed
From Him who reads the heart;
But Jesus hath His love revealed
And takes the sinner's part.
He knows—that there is all my hope,
No other plea I make—
And justice has withheld its stroke,
And spares me for His sake.

God knows—and here my soul shall rest,
Unburdened of its cares.
He knows what thoughts control my breast,
He hears unuttered prayers;
And while the storm-winds wildly rave,
From off the earth-shore driven,
My soul rides safe above the wave,
With anchor fixed in heaven.

The Curse of Strong Drink.

An Extract from the Lecture Delivered by Rev. J. H. McCarty, D.D., in the Ames M. E. Church in this city, on Sabbath Evening, April 28th, 1878, on the Occasion of Inaugurating the Murphy Temperance Reform.

I am startled when I think for a moment of the supreme indifference which so many people affect in relation to this stupendous curse, intemperance, which to-day is a gnawing worm at the very heart of the nation.

But you ask, How great is the evil? What is its length, breadth, depth? I do not know, but the desolation made by strong drink is frightful. I will say, however, that if you will give your imagination full play it will be difficult to draw a picture in which the ideal will sweep beyond the real. New Orleans has a population of over two hundred thousand souls. Here and there are a great many fine buildings, and there is much wealth in this city. Now, if a volcano should burst right out here at our feet to-night at midnight, in the heart of the city, and lay every [illegible] in ashes and waste all this [illegible], and destroy the life of every [illegible] and child in an hour, [illegible] a scene of blackened [illegible] that of Herculaneum [illegible], it would be a disaster [illegible] the whole world would [illegible] appalled I know, but it would [illegible] to the calamity which [illegible] the world every year through strong drink.

[illegible] hearer, suppose we take an imaginary stroll. Let us go up on the top of some lofty mountain [illegible] we can look down upon the [illegible] below us. What is that [illegible] we see yonder, which [illegible] sways about so much? That [illegible]gregation of all the drunk[illegible] the world, in one great com[illegible] with dethroned reason, rav[illegible] fighting, brawling, blasphem[illegible]. What awful scene is that! [illegible] of horrors! But this is [illegible] Look again. See there, [illegible] that plain all the women [illegible] doomed [illegible] this affliction by [illegible] of strong drink. Behold [illegible] poor, deserted, half [illegible]y, with the [illegible] woe pictured on [illegible] See them as[illegible] despairing eyes to [illegible] them sobbing in "How long, O Lord [illegible]"

[illegible] extends over [illegible] again, and there [illegible] and help[illegible] not to blame [illegible] See them cling[illegible] mothers, [illegible] of cloth[illegible] their very [illegible] of the [illegible] that [illegible], but [illegible] with [illegible]; we have seen enough. But no; look again upon that plain. See yonder those aged fathers and mothers tottering on the grave's verge. What do they here? They sorrow over the lost sons of their love. They bend earthward heart-broken. Nor is this all. Look at those men behind the great iron doors yonder in those massive stone buildings, guarded by men in arms. There are tens of thousands of them. Ask them why they are here and the answer is, "Whisky was to blame. I was drunk when I committed the crime that placed me here." But what are those frames of beams and timbers yonder? These are scaffolds on which are swinging at the noose ends innumerable murderers, meeting the awfully solemn judgment of the law, and as the drop falls the last words that fall from their lips is, "I was drunk when I committed the crime." The scene is heart-rending, but let us see it all. What long line of dead men do we behold yonder, in fifties and hundreds and thousands; some have their throats cut from ear to ear, some hanged themselves, some have been fished out of the water, others have crashed through their skulls with the fatal bullet? These are the suicides, nearly all of whom have come to this sad end from dissipation. They have been dragged down into moral and physical bankruptcy by this appetite, and, tired of living and morbid in soul and body, they have put an end to lives that might have been grand indeed. We would turn our eyes away, but what stream of water is that which goes coursing over that plain? It is a river made up of the tears which strong drink has wrung from the eyes of earth's weeping millions. What sound is that which comes up like the voice of many waters, or like the rumbling of an earthquake? It is the groans of the wretched millions of the earth. O, do not say this picture is over-drawn. If all the drunkards and all the drunkards' wives and children, the fathers and mothers of lost sons, all these murderers and suicides and wretched prisoners were brought together into one company it would present a scene that would wring tears from the eyes of the angels, and yet there are those who stand off and look on with indifference.

True Victory.

The victory of Christ is the victory of man over all that enslaves and degrades him. A world redeemed is a world of moral and intellectual beauty, a world of industry and thrift, a world of true benevolence, a world where man is not yoked with the beasts of the field, but where the heart and mind tower upward toward God and Heaven. The reign of Jesus is to be a reign of "peace on earth."

Just now there is a great battle going on between heavy rifled cannon and heavy iron plating on ships of war—rather it is a strife for the mastery between the angel of science on the one side and the demon of war on the other. The angel of science says, "Iron-clad ships can be made impervious to any weight of metal and any charge of powder." The demon of war says, "I will crash through the thickest plating with my steel pointed shot." Now the whole question of war will ultimately resolve itself into the question of who can make the best machine. Whichever nation can produce the mechanical works will bear away the palm. Thus science, by making war engines so very deadly, will virtually do away with war.

Prophecy says, "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad thereof and the desert shall bud and blossom as the rose." This is not all a mere figure. Science will make the earth more productive. It will drain the marshes and dry up the swamps; it will analyze the soil and supply its lack of essential ingredients and check its waste. It detects in that which is deemed useless a valuable commodity. It found the great value of cotton seed yielding oil, which, a few years ago was regarded as a worthless article. It opens the river channels and thus makes way for commerce. Under its hand the useless in nature is transformed into the valuable and the beautiful. Our most choice fruits and cereals have come from wild progenitors which would not be recognized by us. Man's power over nature is wonderful.—Dr. J. H. McCarty, Lecture on Science.

The cost of the recent war in Russia was 850,000,000 roubles or $607,142,860.

Unchanged.

Pope Leo XIII in his late encyclical letter plants himself squarely upon the platform occupied by his predecessor, approving all his acts. In the following the demand for the restoration of the Temporal power of the Pope is distinctly made. The Papacy of Leo XIII is the same as that of Pius IX, and is the enemy of liberty of conscience, of speech and of political action:

> The hopes of Italy and the world rest on the beneficent influence of the Holy See, and on the intimate union of all the faithful with the Roman Pontiff. It therefore stands to reason that we should, with all diligence, do all in our power to preserve intact the dignity of the Roman Cathedra, in order, before all things, to guard the rights and liberty of the Holy See. We shall never cease to insist that our authority be respected, that our ministry and our power be left fully free and independent, and that the position be restored to us in which Divine Wisdom long ago placed us. It is no vain desire of dominion which moves us to demand the reestablishment of our power. We demand it because our duties and our solemn oaths exact it, and because it is not only necessary to conserve fully the liberty of our spiritual power, but also because it is evident that then it is a question of the temporal dominion of the Apostolic See. It involves the well-being and safety of the whole human family.

Letter of J. S. Thomas, Pastor Baptist Church.

DR. FULLER:

Dear Sir and Brother.—Some of your ministers, not being posted, have been fighting our Church (Baptist) all over this country, on what they call "The Baptist Translation of the New Testament." The Baptists, as a Church have no such translation. The American Bible Union has given us a more literal translation; and I, as an individual, fully indorse it, but my Church, as such, does, or has not, indorsed it. We ought to live together as brothers, in any event, discarding all grounds of strife, but more particularly on this subject of translation; for the Methodist Church has a translation of the New Testament, in which the changes necessary to establish their doctrines are made. The book is published by the authorities of the Church. Your ministers, not knowing deny this. Will you apprise them of its existence, and stop the use of imaginary weapons?

JOHN S. THOMAS.

Jonesboro, Tenn., April 2, 1878.

For self satisfied ignorance and cool impudence, the above is ahead of anything received at this office for some months. Balaam's saddle beast must now take a back seat. When he spoke, he inquired, "Am I not thine ass?" thus indicating that he knew what he was and to whom he belonged. The writer of the above has not learned either lesson, else he would keep still. In a personal note, he says: "I hope you will publish the above. It's justice to your Church and ours. Will you please inform me where I can get a copy of the book referred to—Methodist translation? A copy is greatly desired, and will be liberally paid for. Answer on inclosed card," etc.

There has been numerous translators of, and commentators upon, the Scriptures among the Methodists, but no such book as this brother desires has ever been published by the Church or under its authority, or by any "Bible Union," or by any person or party. There is no such thing on earth, and never has been, as a "Methodist Bible," except the standard versions. These are sufficiently Methodistic to serve our purposes. Methodists have never found it necessary to change the Bible to "establish their doctrines," and any one who says they have done so indicates less sense than the creature which Balaam rode. Methodists accept the Bible as God gave it, in the languages in which it was written, and also in the authorized English version published by the American Bible Society and many other houses, and "establish their doctrines" from these Scriptures, without the help of a "Bible Union." The Baptists and the Roman Catholics are the only denominations which have been obliged to change the Bible in order to "establish their doctrines," and they had better correct their doctrines to suit the teachings of that Sacred Book than to pervert that. The Baptist Bible, printed by the Bible Union, is a corruption of the Word of God, but, if the pastor of the Baptist Church at Jonesboro, approves of it, as he says he does, what is he talking about? Evidently he wants us to tell our preachers to be quiet while he peddles his Baptist Union trash. We hope they will do no such thing, but manfully defend the truth as God has revealed it to men. We give the above, not for one locality alone, but for many places.—Methodist Advocate.

The Phonograph and Mr. Edison's Other Inventions.

The phonograph as Mr. Edison first made it, and as it has been so far introduced to the public, is thus constructed: There is a cylinder about twelve inches long and three inches in diameter, which forms the metal surface for the tin-foil to rest on. This cylinder has a spiral groove running around it, like the groove of a screw, so that the steel point has a long road to travel in following the groove from one end of the cylinder to the other. The steel point is stationary and the cylinder has a crank on one end, so that it may turn around while the point is following the groove. Above the steel point is the tintype plate—or "diaphragm" as it is called—which has a mouthpiece over it, for the purpose of converging the sound and giving it greater force. Now, when any one speaks in a loud tone of voice into the mouthpiece, the diaphragm receives the sound vibrations and causes the steel point under it to jump up and down and make indentations on the tin-foil which is passing around on the surface of the cylinder. The talking may be continued until all the tin-foil has been marked and the entire length of the cylinder has been traversed. To make the machine repeat the talking, all that is necessary is to bring the steel point back to where it started and let it run over the indentations that it has just made. In this way the indentations make the needle jump up and down, the needle makes the diaphragm vibrate, and thus the exact sound comes forth from the machine which was put into it. Every kind of sound can be reproduced—the rising and falling inflections and graduated emphasis of a good reciter, laughing, singing, whistling coughing, the mewing of a cat, barking of a dog, cawing of a crow, etc., etc. The marks on the tin-foil, of course, are permanent, and may be laid away and kept for a thousand years. What would not literatures give for a reading of Shakespeare by Shakespeare himself? What would not scholars give to know the pronunciation of Greek and Latin as it was pronounced by the Greeks and Romans themselves? We shall now be able to transmit to our latest posterity the pronunciation of English as it is current to-day, and to seal up the living voices of our greatest orators so that they may be heard thousands of years hence.

Many practical applications of the phonograph have been proposed for present use. A merchant may talk a letter into the instrument and send the tinfoil by mail, and his correspondent will place it in another phonograph and hear the communication. A phonograph with a flat disk instead of a cylinder is being prepared for such purposes. Celebrated preachers and singers can have their voice reproduced to audiences in towns and cities thousands of miles away from where they may happen to be in person. By electrotyping the tinfoil it can be so hardened that it will repeat the same speech or song a great many times. and thus Mr. Spurgeon or Miss Kellogg may be reproduced on demand anywhere in the world by simply turning a crank. By duplicating the tinfoil as stereotype plates for printing are duplicated, people will be enabled to buy the speeches or songs of celebrated persons at a cheap rate, and will be able to put them into their parlor phonographs as they now put photographs into a stereoscope. Lessons in French pronunciation may be sold in the same way, the tinfoil going along with the printed text-book. Clocks may be made to repeat moral admonitions at certain hours of the day. In fact, the applications that could be thought of are numberless, and human ingenuity will no doubt devise many that are not yet dreamed of.

The aerophone is another invention which Mr. Edison intends to perfect as soon as the phonograph excitement has subsided. The vibrations of a phonograph diaphragm will be enlarged and intensified in force by electro-magnets or other means, and communicated to a steam whistle, so that anything spoken will be converted into a voice loud enough to be heard for miles. Thus a light-house keeper will shout. "Keep off this coast!"—a locomotive engineer will shout, "Clear the track!"—ships at sea will converse with real voices instead of flag signals, and many other wonderful things will be done.

Mr. Edison has a telephone of his own invention which he claims is many times more distinct than the Bell telephone. He has discovered a property of carbon never before known to science, which enables him to produce a telephone much more powerful than any heretofore made. Conversation was carried on very distinctly with Philadelphia at the time of our visit. He has also a repeating machine, which is intended to take up the telephone current where it begins to grow faint, reinforce it and send it on as far again. With a series of repeating machines like this, the telephone may yet be used with success over distances as great as from New York to San Francisco.

The duplex and quadruplex telegraph now used by the Western Union, the Roman character printing telegraph, the electric pen, and many other very useful inventions are among the traits of Mr. Edison's genius; but he calls the phonograph his "baby" and all his energies are now directed to its improvement.—N. Y. Witness.

The Wonders of Electricity.

THE MAN WHO PROPOSES TO LIGHT STREETS AND DWELLINGS WITH A WIRE.

About two years ago Mr. J. B. Fuller invented and exhibited an electric machine for telegraphic purposes. It then occurred to him that the same apparatus might, with some changes, be made to produce an electric light, and, after considerable labor, he perfected his invention. It was in operation on Saturday evening in the rear of Maltby's oyster depot, at the Greenwich avenue. A small steam engine furnished the motive power for the machine, which is very simple, consisting of an armature revolving between the poles of a powerful electric magnet. A strong current of electricity is thus generated. Two electric wires are attached to the machine, and they convey the electricity to the various burners. Each of these burners consists of two sticks of carbon, separated by a piece of glass, which are attached in an upright position to the wires. The electricity is ignited by the application of an ordinary piece of metal to the burners. The light thus produced is dazzlingly brilliant and very beautiful, so far surpassing the ordinary gaslight that the latter looks yellow and dirty beside it. Any number of lights may be supplied by the same wire, and Mr. Fuller has succeeded in so subdividing the current of electricity that any of the lights can be extinguished without affecting in the slightest degree the other lights on the same circuit. This had not been accomplished before. Mr. Fuller says he can light buildings in any part of the city by extending his wires to them through the streets. He also says he can light the streets with electricity, and to prove this he has stretched his wire to a post on the sidewalk in front of the building, where he keeps a light burning every evening This light is far more brilliant than any calcium light, and illuminates the street for a whole block. One of these lights would illuminate a whole block, and far better, too, than a dozen or more street-lamps. In lighting up a house, porcelain or ground glass shades are used for softening the glare of the light. The cost of production is very slight, much less than that of the ordinary gas.—New York Sun.

Two Great Reformers.

LUTHER AND BISMARCK.

From Weimar we came to Wittenberg, where the sepulchre of Luther is unto this day. On the door of the church under which his body rests in hope, Luther nailed up the propositions which he defied the Romish doctors to dispute, and to this day they are unanswered. Long since they have mouldered, and his right hand has been still in death, but the truth he rescued from the rubbish of Roman error, and set in motion, has gone on from conquering to conquer, until its eventual triumph over all the world is sure. Luther's epitaph records that he was only sixty-three years, eleven months and ten days old—less than sixty-four—when he died. Yet what a life-work! And how his life lives, while his body reposes in this humble tomb.

Yesterday I was in the Garrison church at Potsdam, and the tomb beneath the pulpit, where, by the side of his father, sleeps, in a zinc coffin, the body of Frederick the Great. And what was he in all his glory, the great captain and king, with palaces, and giants and dogs; what was he, and what did he, worth speaking of, compared with Martin Luther? The work that Frederick the Great accomplished was as epemeral as his stupid poetry. That of Luther grows annually, and will endure forever.

But there was one reformation that Luther could not accomplish. Bismark was raised up, in Germany too, to finish the work that Luther began. Popery was a secular as well as a religious despotism; weilding temporal as well as priestly power. Only since coming to the continent this summer, have I had any adequate conception of the splendor of that conquest which Germany achieved when she extinguished the temporal power of the Pope, by overturning the throne of France which held it up. This was the death-blow to Popery as a power among the nations. And the world owes a debt of gratitude to Germany, and to Bismarck as her director, second only to the debt due to Luther. The priests, bishops, and other relics of Rome in Germany, feel the change, and die very hard, but their time has come, and in this Empire, as indeed in all parts of Europe except Spain, the Church of Rome has lost its prestige with its power to rule in the civil affairs of men.

Bismarck never said a wiser word than the epigrammatic sentence for which he has been severely criticised; "We are not going to Canossa again. The day has passed by when the Pope of Rome could make kings stand bare-footed and bare-headed, starving, in the cold at his gate, while 'His Holiness amused himself within."

It does one good to visit these shrines of Protestant liberty, to meditate even among the tombs of the Reformers, and to get fresh impulses for the eternal war by reviving the memories of the men who gave their lives for the Reformation. Within the last month I have been in churches whose walls have listened to the voices of Calvin and Zwingle and Luther, and I have prayed fervently that heaven may send others of like precious faith and power to uphold the work these men so well began.—Irenaeus, in N. Y. Observer.

Good Friday.

Every soul must have its "Good Friday" if it hopes for its Easter. There can be no Resurrection without a preceding Passion. Christ in His dying, as in His living, is an example to us all. He died for us, we are accustomed to say; but His dying for us is of small avail unless we learn from the story of his death how, like Him, to lay down our lives for others. The martyr spirit is always the achieving spirit, and he who does not possess the possibility of martyrdom possesses no possibility of heroic achievement. The world worships success; but diviner than success is a cheerful, willing, voluntary failure for the sake of others. "The great difference between men, the feeble and the powerful, the great and the insignificant, is energy and invincible determination—a purpose once fixed, and then death or victory," says Sir T. Fowell Buxton. We are willing to die for the sake of victory; but to die defeated, to calmly face disaster, scorn, failure, upborne by a calm assurance of eternal truth and right, demands of the soul a rare courage. Good Friday no longer seems mournful when we look back upon it from a victorious Easter; to measure the heroism of the true conquerors we must stand with them in their Gethsemane, unirradiated by the light from the Mount of Ascension.

All great men have possessed this secret of greatness—the willingness to fail, to die, leaving other generations to gather from their graves the flowers they saw only by faith and hope. Moses' life was one long Good Friday. He determined to make his people free; laid for them the foundations of a great commonwealth; then died and left them still wanderers. But from his legislation the nineteenth century has gathered the seeds of all its free institutions. David's earlier life was one long Good Friday; but the Psalms he wrote among the lime stone caves of southern Palestine have been the world's treasury of song nearly three thousand years, and their voice has lost nothing even now of its sweetness and its strength. The care of the churches which came on Paul daily made his missionary life Good Friday from his first setting out to his final martyrdom. Not one of the churches which he founded and to which he wrote have survived, except the wholly transformed Church of Rome; but his letters, born out of soul travail, have been the guide to ten thousand churches he never saw and to a multitude of Christian souls of whom he never dreamed. From Abel to Abraham Lincoln the greatest men have been those who were willing either to die or conquer as pleased God best; and the greatest, best, and most fruitful life of all, was that one which went out in seeming failure eighteen hundred and forty-five years ago, after three years' preaching to a rabble, and with but a room-full of Gallileans to show for all the service and all the suffering.

To be willing to do the work God has given us, and to fail in it if it so please Him, and leave other souls to pluck their victory from your defeat, is the lesson of Good Friday for us all. Blessed is he who takes heart from it, and goes out to his victory or his death, with cheerful confidence in a Master and a cause so grand that to die for them makes failure more than victory and the martyr more than conqueror.—Christian Union.

How Came He There?

One day a visitor to a prison saw a gang of convicts going from their day's work. They were walking "lock-step," each prisoner crowded close against another, their feet moving together, their arms pressed back, with each one's hand on the forward one's shoulder. Between two great rough men, with low, cruel faces, was a slender, refined young fellow.

"How came he there?" asked the visitor, and the prisoner overheard the question, if not the answer:

"Oh, a breach of trust—cheated his employers out of twenty thousand dollars."

A few minutes later, the young man sat alone in his miserable cell, out of which day-light had faded; cowering on his hard bed he pictured to himself the world outside, full of warmth and light and comfort. That question came to him again sharply: How came you here? Was it really for the stealing of that last great sum? Yes and no. Looking back twenty years, he saw himself a merry-hearted school-boy, ten years old. He remembered so well one lovely June day—why he could fairly see the roses in bloom over the porch, and the dress his mother wore at her work, could hear the laborers in the wheat fields. Freshest of all before him, stood his good old uncle John—such a queer, kind, forgetful old man! That very morning he had sent him to pay a bill at the country store, and there was seventy-two cents left, and uncle John did not ask for it. When they met that noon, this boy, now in prison, stood there under the beautiful blue sky, and a great temptation came. "Shall I give it back because I ought? or shall I wait until he asks? If he never does—that is his own lookout. If he does, why I can get it again together."

The birds sang as sweetly as if a soul was not in danger—as if a boy was not making his whole future. The boy listened not to the birds; but to the evil spirit, whispering, whispering, and he never gave back the money.

Yes, twenty thousand dollars brought the man to the prison-door, but the boy turned that way years before when he sold his honesty for seventy-two cents, and never redeemed it. That night as he sat in the chilly cell, uncle John was long ago dead, the old home desolate, his mother broken-hearted, and the prisoner knew what brought him there was not the man's deed alone, but the child's. Had the ten-year old boy been true to his honor, life now would have been all different. One little cheating was the first of many, until his character was eaten out, could bear no test, and he wrecked his hope and manliness.

Editorial Correspondence.

On Tuesday evening, May 8, we took a seat in the Pullman car at the depot of the Mobile Road in New Orleans, to leave for this city, where the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now in session. It was a real pleasure, when the train moved off, to find in the same car our friend General Cyrus Bussey, of New Orleans, who was starting for Washington. His trip to that city, we learned, to be in the interest of the measure now pending before Congress to grant a subsidy to the New Orleans and Rio Janeiro Steam Ship line. $150,000 are asked for that line and a like amount for a similar line to run from New York. There should be no doubt as to the establishment of these lines. They would go far to give America her rightful share of South American commerce. Europe has four South American lines, all liberally subsidised from national treasuries, and all carrying a large trade. With a railroad to Texas now assured, and with a line of steamships to South America established, a better day commercially would soon dawn upon New Orleans. So mote it be.

ATLANTA.

At 2:30 p.m., on Wednesday, 22 hours from New Orleans, we saw for the first time this city, which is indeed beautiful for location; and, in appearance and enterprise, reminds one of our best Northern cities. We shall say more of this city hereafter. At the depot we were greeted by Brothers Ford and Jones, our Sunday School Agent for the South and our Atlanta Book Depository Manager. In a little while we were in the pleasant home of Rev. Dr. Fuller, the Bishop of our Central South, that is when Bishop Haven is not at home.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Southern Methodist General Conference meets in the basement of the splendid new church just completed, under the pastorate and leadership of Rev. Dr. Harrison, who, a few months since, was transferred to Washington City. Of seven Bishops who sit on the platform Bishop Paine is senior. He is venerable in appearance and commands the attention of all when he speaks. The names of the other Bishops are Pierce, Kavanaugh, Wightman, Doggett, McTyeire and Keener.

The venerable Dr. Lovic Pierce, now ninety-four years old, moves about on the platform and watches with eager interest everything that transpires. He is greatly beloved and it is a beautiful sight to see him among the chief men of the church, watching the proceedings of Conference with a fatherly care and anxiety. How beautiful is a sweet old age. May we die young rather than live long and be sour and morose as the infirmities of age come on.

At the opening of the Conference there were 237 delegates present, and the number has increased until now nearly 275 are in daily attendance. Dr. T. O. Summers, of Nashville, is Secretary, and a very good one he is. The Doctor is a leader in the Southern Methodist Church, and for twelve years has done much to mould the sentiment of his church as editor of the Nashville Advocate. He is the type of a man we admire, if we can not always love. He speaks out clearly his sentiments. Rev. Dr. Haygood is assistant Secretary and is prompt and accurate, and reads with a good, clear voice. He is spoken of for the bishopric.

THE DAMERON CASE.

L. D. Dameron, of St. Louis, was expelled from the Church some four years ago, and took an appeal to the quarterly conference of the church that expelled him. For some cause he did not prosecute the appeal but united with another church before the time to try the appeal came. The question in St. Louis has been whether or not he was in the church. There have been three Episcopal decisions, some deciding him in the church and others deciding him out. He was elected delegate to this Conference and took his seat subject to contest. A committee on the case brought in two reports, one seating and one unseating him. Over these reports the Conference has spent three days, and there has been developed a great deal of hot, if not bad blood. The case stands just where it began. Dameron has his seat as a de facto member. The minority report of the committee seating him was rejected by a majority of two. Then the majority report declaring that he was not entitled to his seat was rejected by a majority of two or three. So he has his seat to which the Conference says he is not entitled and yet the Conference refuses to say he is entitled to it. There are evidently deep and strong contrary currents [illegible] this turbulent surface. One [illegible] currents is evidently some from [illegible] Episcopal decisions, another springs from the questions of laws about the six years membership required to be elegible to election to General Conference, whether or not it must include all those years immediately preceding the election. It seems strange that so much valuable time should be spent on so small a matter.

NO CHANGE OF NAME.

The name Methodist Episcopal Church South, is to remain unchanged. The vote on this was unanimous, and the vote of the annual conferences in 1866-7 refusing to make any change was declared to be final. One interesting point in this discussion was that the delegates from the Northern States and Territories were foremost in demanding that the name should remain unchanged. In Illinois Southern Methodism was organized under the name of "Episcopal Methodism." That name was on yesterday dropped and by a unanimous vote, Southern Methodism in Illinois is hereafter to go under its true name. The Illinois Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, is now a recognized ecclesiastical fact. The discussion on the name developed the affection of the church for its distinctive appelation—South. On that word the emphasis was always clear and strong; sometimes in stress of voice, but more often in modulation of voice expressive of tenderness and devotion. We are pleased with this devotion of Southern Methodists to their name. People of strong and positive conversion alone are of service in the salvation of the world. We differ radically with many of the ideas and sentiments which find shelter under the word "South" as used and understood by this Conference, and believe that many of those ideas and sentiments must be cast aside before the church can do her best for Christ. But without the strong convictions which now make these brethren love and cling to that word, their church would be valueless when clearer light and broader charity shall dispell the errors now sheltering under the word "South."

NEW CONFERENCES IN THE NORTHERN STATES.

The M. E. Church South has in all thirty-seven conferences, and of these, six are in the former free States and territories of the north. Three are on the Pacific coast and one is in Illinois. It is proposed to establish another conference in Indiana and one in Montana. This pushing of church work in the northern States and Territories by Southern Methodism is to be commended. If there are people in any State in the Union, or in any foreign land, who can be reached by Methodism, and if those people prefer to be saved by the Methodist Episcopal Church South, that church should go and save them, and every true Methodist in the world will say, Amen. These acts by the General Conference, giving its true name to its conference in Illinois, and in organizing new conferences in the North, indicate a true and vigorous policy. Of course in the presence of this policy, all adverse criticisms because of the presence of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States, will now cease among our Southern Methodist brethren.

IS IT THE PROBATIONARY SYSTEM?

The Bishops in their address say:

The law with respect to receiving members into the church is in many cases too losely administered. The door is not sufficiently guarded. Inasmuch as all who are received into the church enter into full statue as members, the reasons for the precautionary directions laid down in the discipline are augmented. Many of our preachers in charge are inexperienced, and others in the fullness of their zeal, are too anxious to secure the fruits of their labors by inconsiderate and unenitable accessions. By these and other means improper persons are sometimes taken into the church, the results of which are pregnant with evil.

We do not know whether this indicates any desire to return to the probationary system or not. But it does indicate that the present way of receiving members is doing harm to the church. This statement from the Bishops does not harmonize with the jubilant words of Dr. Haygood, lately in the Independant, on the great good that has come to Southern Methodism by the abolition of the probationary system. More anon. J. C. H.

Atlanta, Ga., May 11.

Virginia has substituted the whipping post for small offences instead of imprisonment and fine. Not more than thirty-nine stripes can be inflicted in one day and not more than seventy-eight for one offense. When a female is convicted of an offense punishable with the lash, she may, in the discretion of the court, be sentenced to confinement in jail for not more than twelve months. The professed object of the law is to relieve the penitentiaries of those confined for petty offenses, but we fear it will restore too much of the old plantation discipline to either be creditable to the State or good for the laborers.

Evil Speaking.

"Speak evil of no man" is a good maxim, and one which if carefully observed would make the world a great deal happier than it is. O, how much sorrow comes from our saying things which had better not be said—the saying of which can do no possible good. We need frankness in all our intercourse with the world. If people have done wrong and we know it, let us go to them in much kindness and Christian love, and tell them of their faults face to face, and pray with them. And even if persons have done wickedly, telling it to everybody we meet will not better the case. A story always gains, and thus a word may grow into a volume and something "as black as a crow" may grow in three days to be "three black crows," according to the old story. The story of one's good deeds creep along with the slow pace of the snail while the report of a wrong deed flies like an arrow. Slander goes stalking with seven mile boots over the earth, and when the old destroyer gets on his way, to overtake him is about impossible. The only way is to let him go on till he dies. It is a good rule always when speaking of any person to imagine them standing right at our backs hearing every thing we say, then say nothing but what we are willing to meet in the face of the person of whom we speak. We once knew a good old Methodist class-leader who, it was said, was never known to speak unkindly of any body. No matter how bad they were he always left the bad unsaid. He always tried to find out the good and talk of that only. It happened on one occasion that a notorious character in the town died, and this old friend went to the funeral. As was the custom in the town, after the religious service was over in the house the coffin was moved out into the front door yard and opened so that all could see the remains. One after another gazed on the still face and walked away in silence. At last our old friend took a look, and after a moment turned away saying, "Well, he could beat any man shooting in this county." It was provocative of a smile, even in the presence of death, but it was at the same time an example of good and not evil speaking.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South.

The eighth General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, opened in Atlanta, Ga., on Wednesday, May 1.

Bishop Pierce presided. The opening services were conducted by Bishops Pierce, Wightman, M'Tyeire, and Doggett, and C. K. Marshall.

On roll call 237 responded. Rev. Thomas O. Summers, D.D., the veteran editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, and General Book Editor, was re-elected Secretary, with Dr. A. G. Haygood, of North Georgia Conference, as Assistant Secretary.

It had been arranged that the address of welcome should be made by Governor Colquitt, of Georgia, who is a Methodist layman and local preacher, but in his unavoidable absence from Atlanta, the address was made by Hon. James Jackson, Judge of the Supreme Court of the State.

From Judge Jackson's address we make the following extract:

"It is not altogether inappropriate that the words of welcome, instead of coming from the Executive should be uttered by one of our Judiciary. If I understand your organism, this is not an executive, but is some sort of a judicial body—a high Court of Appeal in our ecclesiastical polity. In another and more important sense, the Bishops and the brethren—the judicial talent—is essential here, for you are under a constitution, and you must be judges of constitutional law. Unlike that constitution which overshadows the great American Republic, and by which we in Georgia are governed, your constitution is the fiat of the Almighty, and the limits within which your action is confined is the word of Jehovah. God Almighty has written with his own fingers upon the tablets of stone the chart by which you are governed. The construction of that chart—its judicial exposition and obligations—you are called to legislate upon, and to that you are confined. I am glad the founder of our church announced himself all through his life as homo unius libri—a man of one book.

"All the General Rules of the Methodist derive their sanctity and power from the one book of God Almighty. But why talk to you, venerable and reverend brethren, in this strain? You have that book, you study it year by year, and have it written upon the fleshy tables of your hearts by the Spirit of God, who long ago wrote this immortal law.

"As a Judge, I rejoice to speak to Judges in behalf of the Chief Magistrate of Georgia, a man whom the Christians of this State love—a meek, humble child of Jesus; in behalf of our officers, executive, judicial and legislative; in behalf of the Mayor and Aldermen of Atlanta; in behalf of the officials of this Capital city; in behalf of every grey-headed man, of every full-bearded man in this State; in behalf of our blessed matrons and all our bonnie lassos, I give you, one and all, a cordial welcome to our homes and hearts. [Applause.]

"It is true, Mr. President and brethren, we cannot receive you in a room so vast and extensive as that in which you were welcomed in Louisville four years ago. We receive you in this plain room, the basement of our old-fashioned Methodist Church, where the 'Amen' benches are on each side of the altar, and from many a heart an 'Amen' goes up to the great Savior of sinners. We receive you in a place much better adapted for the convenience of your business than that house where our fathers received Asbury and the few pioneers of Methodism in the first conference in Georgia, about 100 miles a little southeast of this spot. That first conference, as tradition informs us, was held at the residence of Thos. Grant. I do not know what sort of house it was—perhaps a log house. Anyhow Methodism rooted itself in the soil of Georgia. Thank God the tree has grown until it has extended its branches and covered the whole State! [Applause.] Thirteen clerical and thirteen lay representatives represent Georgia Methodism here, and to unite heart and hand in the welcome I give our brethren today." [Applause.]

From the reply by Bishop McTyeire we take the following:

"There could not be a better place for the session of a General Conference of Wesleyan Methodists, in the year of grace 1878, than Georgia. John Wesley preached in Georgia. In this State he labored and prayed, and was taught of the Spirit, and led in that marvelous manner history tells of. Could he, sir, have had the vision of one hundred and forty years when he left the soil of Georgia, disheartened—almost broken-hearted; could it have been revealed to him on leaving Georgia, sad and in tears, that, at the Capital of the State, there would be gathered 300 delegates of Wesleyan Methodism, representing its doctrinal purity, how he would have rejoiced! Nothing is impossible with God. The difference between that day and this ought to make us hope and labor for great things.

"Why did he not succeed at that time? It was because he was a ritualist, a formalist. He had not touched the spring he was feeling after—the spring and power of a heartfelt religion, a conscious experience of sins forgiven, and the witness of the Holy Spirit. God led him be the way of Georgia to find these things for us. I heard an old missionary far out in the West tell the story of a converted Shawnee, dying of consumption, whose last words were uttered in the Indian tongue. The preacher asked an interpreter what the dying man said. These were the words: 'Wesley is right—Wesley is right!' [Amens.] Could be, who came to convert the Indians and found himself unconverted, have dreamed it possible that an Indian, fifteen hundred miles in the interior of the country which he only skirted, led by the doctrine and saved by the gospel Wesley's sons had carried—dying with these words, how John Wesley's heart would have warmed. [A delegate, Hallelujah!]

"Surely no legislation can take place here that will lessen the spirituality of Methodism. And may all that we do in 1878 have reference to the spread of scriptural holiness over these lands!" [Amens.]

The Conference represents thirty-seven annual conferences. The ratio of representation is one clerical delegate for twenty-eight preachers in the annual conferences. Four of the conferences only are entitled to send eight clerical delegates, (namely, Baltimore, Virginia, North Georgia and Tennessee,) three conferences send seven each, two send six each, seven send five each, three send four each, five send three each, and thirteen send two each. Lay representation was introduced into the Conference in 1866.

Rev. J. Gould, Presiding Elder of Baton Rouge District, reports that in his recent round he found all the churches in good condition and doing well. except that of Clinton. The latter church at this time is much troubled, there being much dissension and want of harmony among the members.

Good News From Houston, Texas.

On our arrival here, under appointment of Bishop Foster, we entered on our labors with fear and trembling, hoping that God would hear our prayers and give us the victory. In this hope we have not been disappointed. A revival of peculiar power has visited the First M. E. Church, and has spread to all the colored churches of the city. In our First Church we have had one hundred and three conversions in the last month, of persons ranging from ten to fifty years of age; several of them heads of families. Of these one hundred and one have joined this charge. Several seekers in the church on probation have found peace to their souls. One hundred and thirty-five, as part of the fruits of this revival, have united with us on probation. Of seekers on probation, we have about twenty. To God be all the glory, now and forever.

Brethren pray for us, and that the work may continue to spread.

Waco, Texas, has shipped this season over fifty thousand bales of cotton. This is fifteen thousand more than has been shipped from there in any past year, and is largely more than any point in the State, except Galveston, has shipped this season.

Marion county, Texas, is becoming the seat of a large and industrious iron mining and manufacturing industry. The iron mines, foundries and mills are all sufficient to make this a popular and prosperous county.

The London Globe has a story to the effect that in the event of war between England and Russia, the Rusians will aim to destroy the English fleet near Constantinople by pouring some thousands of tons of petroleum on the water at the mouth of the Bosphorous, and allowing this to float with the current down the channel, set fire to it. The theory is that this would convert the Bosphorous into a stream of fire, and drive the seamen from their vessels. The experiment would cost about $30,000.

The Cleveland Herald says: The Edison telephone is soon to come into extensive use as an auxiliary to the telegraph. It will be used by the Western Union Company in small towns where it would not pay to employ an operator. The little village can be connected with a regular telegraph station, and some person engaged in other business can be engaged for a small compensation to attend to the telephone and collect the pay for dispatches. The time will undoubtedly come when every place big enough to have a post office will thus be brought into telegraphic communication with the world at large.

LONDON, May 11.—All British regiments in the Mediterranean are to be made up to 1000 men. Reinforcements are ready to leave England for this purpose.

LONDON, May 11.—A telegram from Rome says it is feared the Jesuitical and violent party has triumphed at the Vatican. The Pope's liver affection is not alarming, but he ought to go away, and desires to go to Perugia, but is unable to resist the pressure put upon him to remain at the Vatican. Negotiations between the Vatican and Berlin have terminated. Negotiations with other powers have also failed. The Vatican, it is believed, has resolved on a policy of resistance.

LONDON, May 11.—A dispatch from Berlin says an attempt to assassinate the Emperor William was made as he was returning from his accustomed drive in the Uter den Linden. His daughter, the Dutchess of Baden, was in the carriage with him at the time. The city of Berlin is fearfully excited, and all sorts of rumors as to the motive of the attempt upon the Emperor's life are afloat. It is said only three shots were fired, and that one person, a woman, was seriously injured. The would-be assassin and his accomplices have been arrested.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The amended Texas Pacific Railroad bill, introduced into the Senate by Senator Johnston of Virginia, is attracting the support of nearly the entire Southern representatives in both houses and it is believed the bill will pass at an early day. The railroads included in this bill, to which subsidies are to be paid, are as follows: The Texas and Pacific Railroad Company, from its terminus at Fort Worth to a point at or near El Paso, on the Rio Grande; The Galveston Harrisburg, and San Antonio Railroad Company, from its present terminus, at San Antonio, Texas, to a point at or near El Paso, on the Rio Grande; a blank company and the International and Great Northern Railroad Company, from Donaldsonville, La., to Orange, Texas, and from Austin to San Antonio, Texas—thus making through connection with New Orleans; the North Louisiana and Texas Railroad Company, from Shreveport to Monroe La.; thus forming a continuous railroad line into Vicksburg, Miss.; the Memphis and International Railroad Company, and the Lake City Railroad Company, from Jefferson, Texas, to Memphis Tenn. The above enumerated roads are to be assisted at the rate of $10,000 per mile, and the aggregate amount will be about $18,000,000, which will insure the completion of two lines of road to El Paso, on the Rio Grande, and the connection of the same with New Orleans, Vicksburg and Memphis; and to continue this system to the Pacific Ocean, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company agrees to meet these roads at El Paso, without aid by the government of a single dollar in subsidy, but simply receiving the old Texas and Pacific land grant from Yuma, Arizona, to El Paso.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Dispatches received here from the fruit region of Michigan, and from almost every section of Northern Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin, state that grapes, cherries, berries, and all small fruits, tender garden vegetables, and in some localities, corn and wheat were badly damaged, if not entirely destroyed, by the frosts of the past three nights. It is to be hoped that these reports are overdrawn.

BERLIN, May 13.—Among many dispatches congratulating the Emperor William upon his escape from assassination on Saturday, was one signed "The President of the French Republic, MacMahon," which has made an especially favorable impression.

Decoration Day at Pittsburg Landing, Tenn.

Our ministerial brethren and the people generally are earnestly invited to our annual gathering, at the Shiloh National Cemetery, May 30, 1878. Dr. E. Q. Fuller will attend and deliver the principal address.

The Shiloh Sabbath-school will give a concert after dinner.

If Sitting Bull and his warriors were to return to the great valley of the Yellowstone, from which they were expelled only a short year ago, they would scarcely know their old hunting grounds. Immigration has poured in from all sections. The wigwam of the Indian has given place to churches and schools and stores and newspaper offices. At Tongue River, where General Miles was encamped in 1876-7, there is a town with a population of nearly one thousand inhabitants. The battle-fields of the heroic Custer are farms, and cattle graze on the plains and hillsides where the saddest and bloodiest of of our Indian tragedies were so recently enacted. This generation is familiar with the rapid growth of towns and cities in what we love to call the Great West, but this settlement of the Yellowstone in so short a time is a marvel. It is only yesterday, as it were, that we printed the details of the battle and the massacre that plunged a whole country in mourning, and to-day our correspodent from the same point tells us of the opening of banks, the erection of theatres, of courts and judges and police. The Yellowstone Valley is forever lost to the Indian. The blood of Custer and his heroes was a terrible price to pay for it; but, after all, they died in a noble cause. Our Western country is the great monument of the heroes of our army, and their names will be forever cherished as the martyrs of our civilization.—Interior.

Secretary Sherman, in a recent interview on the Florida confessions, expresses himself very strongly on the subject of the Presidential election in the South. About Louisiana he said he knew. He saw matters there with his own eyes, and they were enough to make the blood boil. In Florida there had doubtless been trickery upon the Democratic side, but in Louisiana there had been downright repression and bloodshed and tyranny. He had no doubt but that there had been a deliberate plan, well matured and thoroughly carried out, to bull-doze the Cotton States for Tilden. In Mississippi the negroes were kept from the polls through terrorism. In Alabama it was the same, and elsewhere; and if either Louisiana, South Carolina, or Florida had been carried by the Democrats, he believ· it would have been a crying national crime and outrage. He for one believed that in all the cotton States there had really been a clear, large, and undoubted Republican majority.—Inter-Ocean.

The home of the tarantula is a curious structure. It is about four inches long and two inches wide, and made of clay and small pebbles. A hole three-quarters of an inch in diameter passes through it lengthwise, and is secured at one end by a trap door, beveled on the sides and top, and fitting perfectly. The door works on a hinge. The nest is round, as if bored with an auger, and is lined with a soft gossamer substance. It is asserted that the tarantula crawls into its nest when attacked, and secures the door by inserting one of its legs through a tiny staple which can hardly been seen by the naked eye.

It were better to have no opinion of God at all than such an opinion as is unworthy of Him; for the one is unbelief, and the other is contumely; and certainly superstition is the reproach of the Deity.—Bacon.

Some people would like to be atheists because that would be the easiest way to get rid of their sins. They are not only afraid of God, but they are also afraid that He will deal justly, in which case it would go hard with them.—N. Y. Herald.

May 26, 1878.—THE FIERY FURNACE.

SCRIPTURE.—Dan. 3:21-27.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace."—17.

TOPIC.—"We are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

[Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.]

Cast into the Fire (21-23).—The king had said: "Who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?" He had forgotten the tribute that had been forced from him when Daniel interpreted his dream. Then he had said: "Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings." How easy it is for man to forget the most remarkable providences that have happened unto him! He is moved by them only a little while, and, then, the old springs of action re-assume their sway. So it was with Nebuchadnezzar. His rage obscured all the remembrance of the past, and would brook no delay for its gratification. The men were bound in their garments, just as they were, and were cast into the furnace, heated to unusual intensity. The furnace was a primitive affair, with wide, open mouth, raised slightly above the earth, and with a door below for the purpose of taking out the slag, and through which one could see into the interior. Stimulated with materials more than usually combustible, it was very dangerous to approach near to the mouth of the pit. That danger was recognized, but the king's command was "urgent," and no one dared to disobey the will of one who held human life of so little value. Therefore, in spite of the danger to themselves the "mighty men" took up their burdens to the mouth of the furnace, and cast them in. But the outreaching flames grasped a prey that was not intended for them. They slew the men that were throwing them in. A single breath of that intense flame was enough to slay them. The preservation of the three Hebrews, therefore, was no sham miracle. There could have been no immunity in the pit when it was death to approach merely to its mouth. And the flame that slew their bearers did not release them; for they "fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace."

Unhurt by the Fire (24, 25).—Evidently the king, with all his highest officers, was present to witness the punishment. With true Oriental barbarity, he appears to have been looking through the lower door to see the bodies of his enemies shrivel under the caustic touch of the flames. But, instead of beholding that which would have gratified his malice, he saw a wonderful sight that made him doubt the correctness of his vision. He hastily rose up to assure himself that it was a reality that he was looking upon. He asked his counsellors whether they had not cast only three men into the fire—not because he doubted the fact, but because he felt, just then, the need of being corroborated in everything. There were five things that astonished him. 1. That there were four in the furnace, when they had only cast three into it. That was not so remarkable as either one of the other four things. But he was in such a maze that he grasps the least noteworthy fact first, just as men are apt to in astounding circumstances. 2. That they were "loose." They had been cast in bound—and probably not with hempen cords, or he would not have been so astonished at that. 3. That they were walking in the midst of the fire. Mortal man had never beheld such a sight before, and Nebuchadnezzar, conqueror of the whole world though he was, might well be astonished. 4. That they were unhurt. He could plainly [illegible] that they were not inconvenienced by the [illegible] flames whose tongues licked them upon every side. The glowing coals upon which they walked gave them no more pain than if they had been a bed of [illegible] roses. 5. The appearance of the fourth. The most important thing he was the last to see! He [illegible] the form of the fourth to [illegible] of God."

[illegible] out of the Fire (26, 27).—[illegible] seems to have [illegible] of the king. [illegible] presence of such [illegible] that set at [illegible] element [illegible] the punishment [illegible] the king par- [illegible] was circum- [illegible] he had so [illegible] all his de- [illegible] all his [illegible] Looking up- [illegible] reverence for the men whom God thus signally protected, and a genuine admiration for the heroism which they had shown. He could not do otherwise than tell them to come forth. He was yielding to a power stronger a great deal than himself.

In calling them forth he recognizes two things: 1. That their "God is the most high God." He does not say that he is the only God; for he was not yet converted from the belief in a plurality of deities. But he does rank him higher than all other gods—even than his own god Bel, whose image he had set up. And that shows that the king had made a long step in theology. 2. That they are his servants. Trial had proven them to be so. Before they went into the furnace, and stood the ordeal in it, and in the trial which preceded it, there may have been some doubt of the fact. Now there could be none. The way that Christians stand their most severe trials shows whether their professions amount to anything or not. If they are willing to submit to them, are heroic in enduring, and are comforted in them by one whose form is like the Son of God, when they come out the very greatest skeptic will be moved to speak of their God as the most High God, and will acknowledge them as His servants.

How did they come forth? As they went in—except their bonds. God strikes them off! Their bodies were unhurt—their skin not even blistered. Their hair was unsinged, their garments not scorched, and even the smell of fire had not passed upon them. And that is the way that Christians should come out of all furnace trials—liberated from their bonds, but untouched by the flames.

In consequence of the triumphant result of this ordeal, Nebuchadnezzar, first, "blessed God." Such has ever been the effect when the servants of God have nobly stood the test of trial. They have been blessed themselves, and have caused others to bless the Lord their God. 2. He lauded them for the very act for which he had thrown them into the fire. 3. He made a decree that any one who should say anything amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego should be cut in pieces and their houses be reduced to mere dunghills. That was good as far as it went—but it was not a command that any one should worship the God of Israel. Though he had recognized the fact that Jehovah was superior to his own gods, yet he did not decree that his people should worship him under penalty of death, as he had in the case of the image he had set up. He was touched, but he was not converted. 4. He promoted the three faithful servants of God. Those who are true to God, God will be true to them. No one, in the end, will lose anything by a strict adherence to his commands.

New Publications.

The story of "The Gin Shop" is after the style of "The House That Jack Built." It shows the ruin which drink brings, and how its victim was reclaimed, signing the pledge and regaining a happy home and church privileges. It is a strong temperance sermon in itself, illustrating the power of the "Gospel method" to rescue the drunkard, bring him under church influence and privileges, and to reunite his family around the family altar, "Whence prayer, like an incense ascends day and night, where joy and contentment sits smiling so bright." The story is told by the engravings themselves quite as much as by the reading matter which accompanies them. Mr. Cruikshank stands at the head of the school of artists, and the illustrations of "The Gin-Shop" are in themselves a powerful argument and appeal. It should have a wide circulation. It is illustrated with twelve striking engravings, and the phamphlet will be sent to any address for ten cents. $1.00 per dozen or $7.00 per hundred. Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Read St. New York.

Pan Handle Route.

Travelers are always anxious to secure the safest, speediest and most comfortable route, especially when contemplating a long journey. The Louisville route, via the Pan Handle, has but one change to New York, and that change is at the breakfast station, in the Pan Handle depot at Cincinnati. In fact it is no change, as the new car takes the place of the old one while the passengers are breakfasting. The romantic scenery of the Pennsylvania route resembles the grandeur of Switzerland. Besides, this great thoroughfare passes through Louisville, Covington, Cincinnati, Columbus, Ohio, Steubenville, Birmingham, Pittsburg, Johnstown, Presson, Altoona, Harrisburg, Philadelphia, Bristol, Trenton, New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Princeton, Rahway, Newark, Jersey City, and many other important cities of beauty and celebrity. For families and tourists this double tracked route is the best in every respect, as it has so many agreeable advantages.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1878, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.
2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.
3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

Tortures that need not be Endured.

People suffer a great deal of pain unnecessarily. Among tortures that need not be endured are those inflicted by the rheumatism and the gout, since the acrid element in the blood which produces them by contact with the sensative coverings of the muscles and joints may be eleminated by the use of that matchless depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, before the inflamatory symptons are developed to any great extent. When it is considered what excruciating tortures rheumatism inflicts, and what a tendency it has, when fully developed to attack the heart, the advisibility of an early use of such a reliable antidote becomes at once apparent. The rheumatic virus is expelled from the blood by the increased action of the kidneys—which act as strainers—produced by the Bitters, and the sufferer will find if he uses this supreme defensive agent, that he will be protected against a return of the agonizing complaint. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, liver and bowel complaints and other maladies, are also cured by this admirable remedy. apr.4 4t.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over eighteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY is Tonic

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

The Little Loaf.

Once when there was a famine throughout the land, a rich man sent for the twenty poorest children in the town to come to his house, and said to them, "In the basket there is a little loaf for each of you. Take it and come back to me every day at the same hour till the good God sends us better times."

Eagerly did the hungry children fall upon the basket, and quarrelled and struggled for the bread, because each wished to have the best and largest; at last they went away without having even thanked the good gentleman. But Gretchen, a poorly but neatly-dressed little maiden, remained standing modestly in the distance; then she took the smallest loaf, which alone was left in the basket, gratefully she kissed the rich gentleman's hand, and went quickly home.

Next day the children were just as ill behaved, and the poor timed Gretchen received this time a loaf which was scarcely half the size of the others. But when she came home, and her sick mother cut the loaf open, many new silver pieces of money fell rattling and shining out of it.

The mother was not a little alarmed, and said, "Take the money at once, back to the good gentleman, for it certainly got into the dough by accident. Be quick, Gretchen! be quick!"

But when the little girl came to the rich man, and gave him her mother's message, he said kindly, "No, no, my child, it was no mistake; I had the silver pieces put into the smallest loaf to reward you. Remain always as contented, peaceable, self-denying, and grateful. She who would rather take the smallest loaf rather than quarrel for the larger ones will obtain far richer blessings than even if money were baked into the loaf. Go home now, and greet your mother very kindly from me."—S. S. Times.

Josh Billings on Beer.

I hav finally cam to the conclusion that lager beer as a beverage is not intoxicating.

I have been told by a German who said he had drunk it all nite long, just to try the experiment, and was obliged to go home entirely sober in the morning. I have seen this same man drink eighteen glasses, and if he was drunk, it was in German, and nobody could understand it.

It is proper enuff to state that this man kept a lager beer saloon, could have no object in stating what was not strictly thus.

I believe him to the full extent of my ability. I never drank but three glasses of lager in my life, and that made my head ontwist as tho' it was hung on the end of a string, but I was tole that it was owing to my bile being out of place; and I guess that it was so, for I never biled over wus than I did when I got hom that nite. My wife thot I was goin to die and I was afraid that I shouldn't, for it seemed as tho every thing I had over eaten in my life was coming to the surface; and I believe that if my wife hadn't pulled off my boots just as she did, they would hav cum thundering up too.

O, how sick I wuz! 14 years ago, and I can tast it now.

I never had so much experience in so short a time.

If any man shud tell me that lager beer was not intoxicating, I shud believe him; but if he should tell me that I wasn't drunk that nite but that my stummick was out of order, I shud ask him to state over in a few words just how a man felt and acted when he was set up.

If I warn't drunk that nite, I had some of the most natural simtums that a man ever had and kept sober.

In the first place it was about 80 rods from where I drank the lager beer to mi house, and I was jest over two hours on the road, and a hole busted through each one of my pantaloon neez, and didn't hav any hat, and tried to open the door by the bell-pull and hiccuped awfully and saw everythin' in the room trying to get round on the back side of me, and, sitting down on a chair, I did not wait long enough for it to get exactly under me when I wuz going round, and I set down a little too soon and missed the chair about twelve inches, and couldn't get up soon enough to take the next one that come along; and that ain't awl my wife sed I wuz as drunk as a beest, and as I said before, I began to spin up things freely.

If lager beer is not intoxicating it used me most almighty mean, that I know.

Still I hardly think that lager beer iz intoxicating, for I have been told so; and I am probably the only man living who ever drunk eny when his liver was not plumb.

I do not want to say anything against a harmless temperance beverage, but if ever I drink eny more, it will be with mi hands tied behind and mi mouth pried open.

I don't think lager beer is intoxicating, but if I remember rite, I think it tasted to me like a glass of soap suds that a pickle had been put tew soak in.

The Christian Index (Georgia) says: "Two little children of Henry Perry, of Lumpkin County, were recently playing in the yard, when one of them struck the other on the head with the edge of a sharp hatchet, and ran to his mother, who at the time was drawing a bucket of water, telling her what he had done. The mother, alarmed at the news, let go the handle of the windlass, which struck the little child on the head killing him instantly. When she reached the other child it was dead also."

A man saw a ghost while walking along a lonely highway at midnight. The ghost stood exactly in the middle of the road, and the wayfarer, deciding to investigate, poked at it with his umbrella. The next instant he was knocked twenty feet, into a mud-hole. Moral.—Never poke an umbrella at a large white mule, when its back is turned.

The regular temperance societies of Washington rebuke the Mrs. R. B. Hayes Society for its recent action, and one of them has adopted resolutions declaring that the language used by Mrs. Hayes on the Philadelphia excursion was liberal, just and charitable, and among the most admirable extant.

An outbreak of the commune and tradesunion element is expected at Chicago by the last of May. They are drilling and the entire force of the society in the United States is said to be 280,000. The civil and military authorities of Illinois are, however wide awake.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

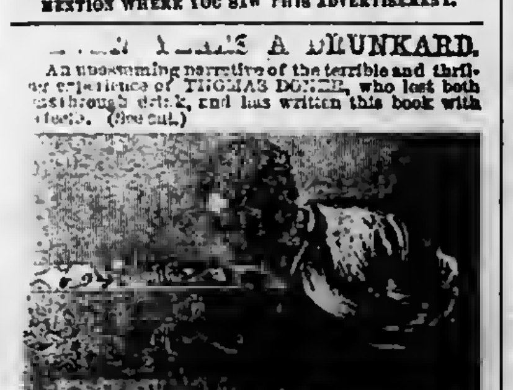
[illegible] YEARS A DRUNKARD.

An unassuming narrative of the terrible and thrilling experience of THOMAS DONER, who lost both arms through drink, and has written this book with stumps. (See cut.)



Thomas Writing his Book.

Kind Friends:—Being deprived of both my arms by whisky, I take this method of earning my livelihood—by introducing to your honorable notice my past life. Although chastened and subdued in spirit by the suffering and loss I have borne through intemperance, I am thankful to that good Being through whose mercy I was saved from dropping into a drunkard's grave, to fight against this promoter of crime and misery, that has robbed me of my arms, until I am called away to that heavenly land, where trouble and sorrow never come, and where, as far as these statements are concerned, I am willing to be judged at last.

THOMAS DONER.

This book is neatly illustrated, and is worthy of the consideration of all temperance workers—IS JUST THE BOOK FOR THE TIMES.

It delineates the First Step; the Second Step; the silliness and remorse produced by them; the drunken reveling at houses of debauchery. Fights, stabbings, suicides of drunken comrades, and thrilling incidents in army and hospital life; the degradation and woe produced by drunkenness vividly set forth as a living picture.

A WORD TO AGENTS:—One agent assures us that he can clear $80 per month. He sold two hundred books in four days. Another agent tried it six weeks, and then refused a school at $45 per month, board and washing included, and is now selling. A lady in Battle Creek, Michigan, sold fifty-seven books in one afternoon, and sold three hundred in a short time.

THIRTY THOUSAND copies have already been sold, and we have a new edition of Ten Thousand in the bindery, fully illustrated. They sell like hot cakes.

Prices are as follows: Single copy, 25 cents. Twelve copies, $2.00, sent post-paid. Twenty-five copies, $3.25. Fifty copies, $5.00, and One Hundred copies, $8.00, express charges added. We are willing to send books C. O. D., by express, but 25 to 50 cents will be saved by sending money order or registered letter. Now friends, if you send for 100 books, you will get $17 for selling them at 25 cents each. If you sell 200 in four days, you get $34.00, or $8½ per day. But you will not often sell so many. Most agents will average from $1.50 to $4.00 per day, by giving their time to it. We make the above statements from practical experience, and feel assured that those who may engage in selling these books will not be deceived or disappointed.

To canvass, and then deliver, is not the most successful way to make sales. Take the Books along with you, and sell as you go. Most people rather buy, than subscribe for a book. It takes too much time to canvass, and then deliver.

Write your name, POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE, plainly, and remember WHERE to send, and WHO to send to. Be sure to make no mistake.

Send 25 cents for sample copy.

The Class-Leader,
His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."
12mo........................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

HELP!
FOR THE WEAK, NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED!

The afflicted can now be restored to perfect health and bodily energy, at home, without the use of medicine of any kind.

PULVERMACHER'S
ELECTRIC BELTS
AND BANDS.

For self-application to any part of the body, meet every requirement.

The most learned physicians and scientific men of Europe and this country indorse them.

These noted Curative appliances have now stood the test for upward of thirty years, and are protected by Letters-Patent in all the principal countries of the world. They were decreed the only Award of Merit for Electric Appliances at the great World's Exhibitions—Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere—and have been found the most valuable, safe, simple, and efficient known treatment for the cure of disease.

READER, ARE YOU AFFLICTED?

and wish to recover the same degree of health, strength, and energy as experienced in former years? Do any of the following symptoms or class of symptoms meet your diseased condition? Are you suffering from ill-health in any of its many and multifarious forms, consequent upon a lingering, nervous, chronic or functional disease? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, fretful, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are you subject to loss of memory, have spells of fainting, fullness of blood in the head, feel listless, moping, unfit for business or pleasure, and subject to fits of melancholy? Are your kidneys, stomach, or blood, in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia or aches and pains? Have you been indiscreet in early years and find yourself harassed with a multitude of gloomy symptoms? Are you timid, nervous, and forgetful, and your mind continually dwelling on the subject? Have you lost confidence in yourself and energy for business pursuits? Are you subject to any of the following symptoms: Restless nights, broken sleep, nightmare, dreams, palpitation of the heart, bashfulness, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, pimples and blotches on the face and back, and other despondent symptoms? Thousands of young men, the middle aged, and even the old, suffer from nervous and physical debility. Thousands of females, too, are broken down in health and spirits from disorders peculiar to their sex, and who, from false modesty or neglect prolong their sufferings. Why, then, further neglect a subject so productive of health and happiness when there is at hand a means of restoration?

PULVERMACHER'S
ELECTRIC BELTS AND BANDS

Dr. J. M. Howe's Inhaling Tube!
AND
COMMON AIR. WILL CURE
CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $1.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. may2'78-tf

WHAT OF THAT?

Tired! Well, what of that
Didst fancy life was spent on beds of ease,
Fluttering the rose leaves scattered by the breeze?
Come, rouse thee, while it is called to-day!
Coward, arise! go forth upon thy way!

Lonely! And what of that?
Some must be lonely! 'tis not given to all
To feel a heart responsive rise and fall,
To blend another life into his own.
Work may be done in loneliness. Work on.

Dark, well what of that?
Didst fondly dream the sun would never set?
Dost fear to lose thy way? Take courage yet?
Learn thou to walk by faith and not by sight!
Thy steps will guided be, and guided right.

Hard! Well, what of that?
Didst fancy life one summer holiday?
With lessons none to learn and naught to play?
Go, get thee to thy task! Conquer or die!
It must be learned. Learn it, then, patiently.

No help! Nay, 'tis not so!
Though human help be far, thy God is nigh,
Who feeds the ravens, hears His children's cry.
He's near thee, wheresoe'er thy footsteps roam,
And he will guide thee, light thee, help thee home.

Ecumenical Methodism.

There are in the world not less than twenty-four ecclesiastical organizations of Methodism, numbering upwards of four millions of members, thirty thousand itinerant, and sixty thousand local preachers, all holding to the true Arminian doctrine, and maintaining more or less the same usages.

It is proposed that there shall be a convention of delegates from all these bodies to meet in an Ecumenical Methodist Conference. The proposition comes first from the Methodist Episcopal Church. The following is the document submitted by the committee appointed by our last General Conference, to the Southern Methodist [illegible] Conference now in session [illegible]. That body will no [illegible] the suggestion and [illegible] a committee on consultation [illegible] has nothing to do with [illegible] as will be seen by [illegible] which would [illegible] be discussed at such a [illegible]

[illegible] Conference of the M. E. [illegible]

[illegible] and Brethren—The [illegible] Conference of the Methodist [illegible] Church, in the United [illegible] in session in the city of [illegible] May, 31, 1876, [illegible] preamble and resolutions:

[illegible] a number of [illegible] in the [illegible] Dominion of [illegible], and in [illegible] Methodists [illegible] accept the Arminian [illegible] maintain [illegible] them to [illegible] denominations [illegible] in these [illegible] nearly thirty [illegible] twice [illegible] and [illegible] members [illegible] Methodist [illegible] interests in [illegible] is a common [illegible] a com- [illegible] Conference [illegible] in [illegible] a [illegible] co- [illegible] judged most advisable, to consider topics relating to the position, work, and responsibility of Methodism for the world's evangelization.

Resolved, 2. That such committee is hereby empowered to represent, and speak for and in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States in respect to said Ecumenical Conference, and is directed to make a full report of its proceedings to the General Conference of 1880.

Resolved, 3. That the necessary expenses of such committee of correspondence be met in the same manner as expenses of fraternal delegates to other religious bodies are met. (Journal, p. 367.)

In pursuance of this action, the Bishops, at a meeting held in New York city, Nov. 1876, appointed said committee of correspondence, as follows:

Bishops—The Rev. Matthew Simpson, D.D., L.L.D., of Philadelphia, Pa., and the Rev. Edward R. Ames, D.D., L.L.D., of Baltimore, Md.

Other Ministers—The Rev. Augustus C. George, D.D., of Central New York Conference; the Rev. Lorenzo D. Barrows, D.D., of New Hampshire Conference; the Rev. Park S. Donelson, D.D., of Central Ohio Conference; and the Rev. Isaac N. Baird, D.D., of Pittsburgh Conference.

Laymen—The Hon. J. W. Marshall, of Washington, D. C.; the Hon. Jas. Harlan, of Mount Pleasant, Iowa; and Francis H. Root, Esq., of Buffalo, N. Y.

The committee, as instructed by the General Conference, has taken this whole subject into consideration, made arrangements for correspondence with different Methodist bodies in this country and in other countries, and is ready to do whatever is needful and proper to secure an Ecumenical Conference of Methodism for the purpose of considering the position and work of the the people, so-called, and the extent of their responsibility for the world's evangelization.

The committee, "empowered to represent and speak for and in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States," would respectfully represent that such an Ecumenical Conference as proposed, might properly consider such topics as the following:

The doctrinal basis of Methodism;

The itinerant ministry, and other means of evangelization;

Home missions, including Sunday-school Unions, and all associations for Church extension, and for the culture and conversion of special classes;

Education, in Church and State, and especially theological seminaries and training schools for Christian workers;

Intemperance, pauperism, licentiousness and, generally, the evils and crimes of modern civilization;

Publishing houses, periodicals, and the use of the press for the world's conversion;

Foreign missions;

Perils from the Papacy, from infidelity, and from the desecration of the Sabbath;

The resources of the Methodist body, in numbers, wealth, culture, and spiritual life, for doing the work of Christ, and the corresponding accountability; and many other themes of a kindred character.

That such an Ecumenical Conference would be a great blessing to the church and the world can hardly be questioned. It would tend to harmonize and unify the different Methodist organizations, to break down caste and local prejudices, and to bind together in closest fellowships a people essentially one in doctrine, spirit and purpose. It would lead to such adjustments of the missionary work as to prevent friction and waste. It could not but be extremely suggestive in regard to modes and agencies for the most successful performance of the church's work of evangelization.

It would, doubtless, give a great impulse to the cause of Temperance and of Sabbath observance, to Sunday-schools, and to all the benevolent activities of the Church. The relations of Methodism, as a whole, to education, to civil government, to other Christian bodies, and to the world-wide mission work, would certainly come to be better understood. In a word, an increase of Christian intelligence, of conscious spiritual power, and of faith in the redemption of the race from bondage [illegible] degradation, of vice and [illegible] would without question [illegible] a more earnest [illegible] glow of [illegible] purpose [illegible] consequently, [illegible] stark [illegible] Church [illegible] of [illegible] Methodists would, moreover, attract the attention of scholars, thinkers and reformers, and would lead to a discussion of the movement, and of the whole Methodist History, work, and mission, in every leading newspaper and periodical in Christendom. Methodism has everything to gain and nothing to lose by this discussion.

Such an Ecumenical Conference ought, in our judgment, to include representatives from the following organizations:

United States—Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Methodist Protestant Church, Methodist Church, American Wesleyan Church, Free Methodist Church, African Methodist Episcopal Church, African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America, the Evangelical Association, and the Church of the United Brethren.

Dominion of Canada—The Methodist Church of Canada, Methodist Episcopal Church of Canada, Primitive Methodist Church, and British Methodist Church.

Great Britain—British Wesleyan Methodists, Irish Wesleyan Methodists, Primitive Methodist Church, Methodist New Connection, United Methodist Free Churches, the Bible Christian Church, and the Wesleyan Reform Union.

Other Countries—The French Wesleyan Methodists, and the Australian Wesleyan Methodists.

It would doubtless be wise to secure a special representation of the Foreign Mission work of the different bodies taking part in the Conference.

We respectfully suggest that the Conference be composed of clerical and lay members, in as nearly equal numbers as may be convenient, and that the basis of representation, and the time and place of meeting, be determined by the joint action, through correspondence, or otherwise, of the several committees appointed by the different ecclesiastical bodies to be therein represented.

It would seem to be desirable to have the members of the Conference selected by the highest executive authority available for that purpose, in the respective Methodist bodies, and that a sufficient number of alternate delegates be provided.

In conclusion, dear brethren, we submit this whole subject to your wise and godly judgment for such action as may appear to you promotive of the Redeemer's kingdom and the wider usefulness of that common Methodism which is so dear to all our hearts.

In the bonds of a fraternal gospel,
we are Truly yours,

Earthquakes.

1. Earthquake annals inform us that in the 1,700 years previous to the Christian era there were 58 earthquakes 4 of which only were disastrous.

2. During the next 900 years, to the end of the ninth century, 167 earthquakes occurred, and 15 only were disastrous.

3. During the next 600 years, to the end of the fifteenth century, 532 earthquakes occurred, 44 of which were disastrous.

4. During the next 300 years, to the end of the eighteenth century, 2,804 earthquakes occurred, and 100 were disastrous.

5. During the first 50 years, of this century, to 1850, there occurred 3,240 earthquakes, and 53 were disastrous.

The rapid and steady increase of earthquakes, in past ages, and especially since the Christian era, is a remarkable fact, and worthy of attention. Mr. Mallet records less than 7,000 down to the year 1850; but Mr. Ansted, the English geologist, and M. Perry, of France, have tabulated over 7,000 previous to that date. The recurrence of 3,240 in a period of only 50 years is truly remarkable. At this average number, in 16 years (from 1850 to 1866) we have over 1,000 more, thus swelling the number to more than 6,000. "Of destructive or great earthquakes," writes Ponton, "the number registered to the end of 1865 is 231, only 4 of which occurred before the birth of Christ." Our blessed Savior, who perfectly knew, said, "There shall be earthquakes in divers places," (Matt. 24: 7;) and the prediction has been wonderfully fulfilled ever since.

The next two years (1867 and 1868) surpassed all others in the number of destructive and other earthquakes. Mitylene was destroyed April 4, 1867, and 1000 lives were lost. We (the writer) saw it in ruins a few days after and the people living in tents. During the single year 1868 it has been estimated that "more than 100,000 souls perished by these unparalleled convulsions." In these two awful years (1867 and 1868) it was estimated that the total number of earthquake shocks felt in all parts of our globe were not less than 4,000. In the month of January 1869, 11 earthquakes were registered. In the single month of September, 1846, Prof. E. Merriam chronicled the occurrence of 20 earthquakes in all parts of the globe. "In California no earthquake of any note took place from 1812 to 1850. From 1850 to 1868 over 200 shocks were counted, or one for every month." Baron Humboldt, in his "Cosmos" of 1845, says: "If we could obtain daily intelligence of the condition of the whole surface of the earth, we should very probably arrive at the conviction that the surface is almost always shaking at some one point, and that it is incessantly affected by the reaction of the interior against the exterior."

Old Mother Earth has been in painful, convulsive throbs and shudderings ever since man lost Eden, and sin and rebellion against God entered the world; and though the evidence of the terrible guilt and trouble has been increasing for nearly 6,000 years, yet learned skeptics and infidels do not believe it. They would not, perhaps, if one rose from the dead! It would seem that Paul was a good geologist when he wrote (Romans 8: 22,) "We know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now."

We have seen the terrible ravages of earthquakes in distant lands, but received our deepest impressions of earthquake power by examining the locality at Lisbon years since, where 60,000 persons lost their lives in a few minutes, in November 1755, or 122 years ago. The morning was calm and serene. It being Saints' day, the Cathedral church was filled and candles lighted. Suddenly the earthquake came! Crowds rushed to the quay or wharf, lined with vessels and filled with people. In a moment all sank down out of sight into the yawning chasm. The edifice took fire and consumed many.

These few facts are not new, but they may refresh the minds of your readers. Earthquakes have a terrible history of disasters, with impressive lessons. They all point to the final convulsions of the last tremendous scene of earth.—New York Observer.

The Pyramids.

Among the three pyramids of Gheezeh the Pyramid of Cheops or the "Great Pyramid" is by far the most important, and worth all the rest. It is The Pyramid, as the mysterious sphynx at its base is The Sphynx. It is probably the oldest, and certainly the largest building in the world, though but a pygmy of yesterday as compared with God's own pyramids—the "eternal hills." It was one of the Seven Wonders of the old world, and it is a wonder and a puzzle today. Well might Napoleon fire his soldiers by pointing them to that hoary monarch of buildings, from which "forty centuries looked down upon them." It was erected by Chufu (or Cheops, as Herodotus calls him), more than two thousand, if not three thousand years before Christ. It was old when Rome was built, when Homer sang, when David reigned, when Moses led the children of Israel from the land of bondage; yea, when Abraham visited Pharaoh. Its base covers thirteen acres, or an area of 61,835 (formerly 65,437) square yards, and it rises to a perpendicular height of more than 450 feet. It is computed to have contained 6,848,000 tons of solid masonry. And yet we see it only in a mutilated state. The vandalism of the Greeks, Romans, and Saracens has robbed it of the polished red granite casing, to enrich their palaces and mosques. It was built in steps or successive stages, by means of machines formed of short wooden planks. The upper portion was finished first, the lowest last. Herodotus was informed that 100,000 workmen (360,000 according to Diodorus), changing every three months, were constantly employed for ten years in making the causeway for the conveyance of the stones, and another twenty years in building the Great Pyramid itself, at a cost of 1,600 talents of silver (about 1,700,000 dollars).—Extract from Article by Rev. William Schaff, D.D., in Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for June

Work for Christ.

There is no joy like that of winning souls for Christ, though when I was converted that to me was great joy, but oh, the bliss of saving others! There is no joy in the world like that. The luxury of winning a soul to Christ, the luxury of being used by God in building up His kingdom, the luxury of hearing the young convert testify of what God has done for him. And to think that God condescends to use us. What condescension that He gives us the privilege of leading men out of darkness into light. Some one has said he does not believe there is an angel in Heaven that would not leave his position and come into this world that he might have the privilege of working for Christ. Suppose there is one solitary child, shoeless and hatless, his mother may be dead, and his father, perhaps a drunkard; the poor boy, wandering in the streets, with no kind friend to lead him to Christ, and God called from his great white throne in Heaven, and God asked if there is an angel in Heaven that would be willing to leave his home and come down to this city and live for fifty years to save that soul, do you think there would be an angel left in Heaven in three minutes? Even Gabriel, from his high place, would say, "Let me leave this lofty position, and have the privilege of leading this child to Christ." And yet the Church is folding its arms, and Christians are saying, "Don't send me. Let the minister do it, or the stewards, or the deacons; but don't send us." May God give you courage. Go forward and consecrate yourselves to His service and He will stand by you.—D. L. Moody.

A little girl said to her mamma on going to bed, "I am not afraid of the dark." "No, of course you are not," replied mamma, "for it can't hurt you." "But mamma, I was a little afraid once when I went into the pantry in the dark to get a cooky." "What were you afraid of." "I was afraid I couldn't find the cookies."

About a Brick.

Correspondent of the Evening Post gives the following account of a personal experience:

One bright morning in the month of November, some years ago, I was preparing to go down town, when the servant informed me that a man was waiting at the front door to see me. "Tell him I'll be down in a moment," said I. On going to the door a man of tall stature and robust appearance, calling me by name, requested assistance, saying that he had a large family, a wife in delicate health, and no means to provide food for them.

"You appear to be strong and healthy, why don't you work?" asked I.

"Simply, sir, for the reason that I cannot procure work."

Not having any work to give him I thought I would test the sincerity of his intentions. "If I give you work, what pay do you want?"

"Anything, sir, you choose to give me, so long as I can obtain means for my suffering family."

"Very well," said I, "I will give you twenty-five cents an hour if you will carry a brick on your arm around the block for five hours without stopping."

"Thank you, sir, I will do it."

After hunting a while I found a brick, placed it on the man's arm, started him on his walk, and then went down town to my business.

Not having the least faith in the man's promise, I thought but little more of it, yet as I knew I should be back within the five hours, I determined to see if he performed his work. My business kept me away rather later than I expected, so I had to forego my usual walk home, and took a Fourth Avenue car to be back within the five hours.

As I approached the corner of the street where I reside, I found a great crowd of persons gathered, two fire engines, a hose cart, and a hook and ladder truck. Upon inquiring where the fire was, I was informed that it was a false alarm, and that what had brought the people together and occasioned the agitation was the spectacle of a tall man carrying a brick on his arm around the block for nearly five hours. The neighbors were looking at him from the windows and doors as he passed along; some thought he was crazy, but when spoken to his answer was, "Don't stop me; it's all right." As he interfered with no one, he was allowed to walk on undisturbed.

"Where is the man now?" I asked.

"There, you can see him at the other end of the block, walking with his head down," was the answer.

He was just about turning the corner, and I waited until he had performed his circuit, then, taking him quietly by the arm, I marched him to my house, followed by a lot of boys. In the meantime the firemen, engine and hose-cart rattled off. The man was thoroughly tired out when I took him into my hall and seated him on a chair, while my servant went for a little wine and a little something to eat. I paid him forthwith a dollar and a half. He informed me that while making one of his rounds a lady came out of a house and inquired why he was carrying that brick, and on his giving her the reason he received a dollar. The object soon became known, for as he passed the houses small sums were given to him by different persons, and he was well satisfied with his day's work. "But," said he, "what shall I do to-morrow?"

"Why," I replied, "go early in the morning to the houses from which you received the money and ask for work, and no doubt you will find some one who will put you in the way of getting it; then report to me."

The following afternoon he informed me that he had been sent to a German who kept a pork establishment on Third Avenue, and wanted a clerk to keep his books. He was to get five dollars a week if his work proved satisfactory, and his duties began on the following day. Before leaving me he asked for the brick which had brought him such good luck, and I gave it to him. Within the year I ascertained that the man had been transferred to a larger establishment of the same kind, with a salary of one thousand dollars.

Three or four years after this I was riding in a street car when a well-dressed man accosted me with a smile, and asked me if I knew him. Seeing me hesitate, he said: "Don't you recollect the man who carried the brick?"

He then informed me that he was doing a prosperous business on his own account, he had laid up money and expected soon to build himself a house up town.

"What became of the brick?" I inquired.

"That brick, sir, has always occupied a place on our mantlepiece, and we value it as the most precious of our little possessions."

The Grasshopper on the Royal Exchange.

Whenever I go to London I always stand at the corner of the Bank of England for a minute or two, watching the crowd of busy men hurrying everywhere. What thousands of cares they carry! How many anxieties! Then I look at the Royal Exchange. It is pleasant to see the London sparrows, though they are a little black and grimy, chirping on the massive cornices, as free and happy as possible, above the din and awful hurry of the great city. They have no cares, no anxieties. They seem to know what the great letters mean, which are cut in the stones on which they hop. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." God keeps the sparrows and they are happy. I wish the busy city men would watch the sparrows and read the great city text.

But the sparrows and the text are not the most attractive things about the Exchange, and I am sure if you look at it, you would think as I do, that the weather-cock is the most singular and curious thing about the building. It is not like any other weathercock in England, or, I should think in the world; for there, twisting on the pinnacle of the spire, is a monster grasshopper; and I'll tell you how it came to be there.

About three hundred and fifty years ago, a woman with a little baby in her arms, was trudging along a country lane. Presently, after looking to see that no one was watching her, she climbed over a gate into the field, and wrapping the baby in its shawl, she laid it down in the grass, so gently as not to awake it, and then, never even looking behind her, she climbed over the gate again into the lane, and went on her journey.

The baby soon awoke and began to cry; and it cried for a long, long time. And at last, tired and hungry, and hot with the sun, for it was a fine summer's day, it was wearied out, and dropped off to sleep again. "But God had heard the voice of the lad," and see how simply he brought help for the little one.

By-and-by, down the lane came a school-boy; he was whistling away, as happy as ever he could be. He had come out of school and was going home. He lived at the farmhouse a little way further up the lane. Now he gathered a few primroses, now he scampered after a butterfly, now he had a shy at a bird; but just as he came to the gate over which the woman had climbed, he heard a grasshopper chirping away so loudly, that he sprang over the gate to catch him; and there was the baby, fast asleep! Far more pleased than if he had caught a hundred grasshoppers, the boy took up the little fellow and ran home with his prize. The kind farmer's wife, although she had many children of her own, at once determined to keep the little orphan who had been saved from death by a grasshopper.

Years passed away and the baby became a strong boy; the boy grew to be a man; he went to London and became a merchant. God blessed all he did, and he rose to be the most noted man in the city. Queen Elizabeth was then on the throne, and often did she send for Sir Thomas Gresham, for the little deserted boy had become a knight, to consult him on the great affairs of state.

Just three hundred years ago Sir Thomas Gresham founded the Exchange. The Queen came to dine with him, and to lay the first stone; and there, upon the top pinnacle, Sir Thomas placed a grasshopper; and there it is to-day, to tell the busy, toiling city, and to tell you and me when we go to see the city, that Almighty God will hear the infant's cry, and can save a valuable life by even such a little thing as a grasshopper.

So it was that "God heard the voice of the lad."—Presbyterian.

Mott, the spirit materializer of Memphis, Mo., whom thousands have flocked to see, was exposed last week by J. H. The face at once disappeared; lights were brought in, and Mott was found with his face covered with aniline stains. The affair created great excitement in Memphis.

The light produced was photometrically equal to 800 gas-burners each burning five feet of gas an hour, which would have cost $8 per hour, while the total cost of this light would not exceed 30 cents an hour.

Editorial Correspondence.

The Southern Methodist General Conference is still the center of attraction in this city. We give some notes on important points:

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Rev. Dr. A. S. Hunt, the newly appointed Corresponding Secretary of the American Bible Society addressed the Conference yesterday. A report making the collection for the Bible Society a regular church collection was read and will no doubt be adopted. Dr. Hunt's address was a very able; one great good will result from it. He spoke of the work of the Society in its two great departments at home and abroad. Special attention was now being given to colporteur work in the South. In Arkansas, for example, 86,000 families had been visited, and of these 24,000 were found destitute of the Scriptures, 17,000 had been supplied by the Society. A new edition of the New Testament had been published and was sold at the very low price of five cents. This gave the whole of the New Testament for the price of a morning paper. Of the foreign work the reports are most encouraging. In Japan the Bible had become so popular that a Japanese Publishing House has asked the privilege of publishing the Bible as a business venture, with the belief that enough can be sold to make it pay. This is the most remarkable fact of modern times respecting the circulation of the Scriptures. In the Russian lines a great demand has sprung up for the Bible, and agents were now employed selling them to Russian soldiers.

Bishop Keener, who occupied the chair, referred to the providential scattering of the Bible in Mexico. During the Mexican war Bibles were scattered through the country, and all protestantism in that country was due to this fact. The Bishop related an incident of deep interest in connection with these stray copies of the Scriptures. He said he heard from the lips of a gentleman who, endeavoring to find his way out of a difficult country, came, as he supposed, upon a company of banditti. He saw them seated in a circle, while a venerable man was reading. They received him politely, and gave him directions as to his route, and put him completely at his ease. To his surprise, he found the old man had been reading a copy of the New Testament, published by the American Bible Society. A little boy selling trinkets at a fair sold some Testaments. A Mexican named Gomez bought one and it led to his conversion, and he is now a staunch protestant minister in Mexico.

SOUTHERN METHODISM IN THE NORTH.

The discussion on the establishing of new conferences in the North was very able, and very important because it indicated the spirit of the Conference on the question of pushing Southern Methodism to the North. The question came up on the establishment of a new conference in Montana, which was done. Dr. Winfield, of Arkansas, took the position that the M. E. Church, South, had no mission in that field. He said that $3,800 missionary money had been given Montana last year, and $3,000 for some time before, each year, and had resulted in only five traveling preachers and 250 members, and now it was proposed to erect them into an annual conference. He hoped it would not be done. Rev. Mr. Morton, of the Denver conference, which, up to this time, has included Montana, made the plea that in that distant Northern clime Southern Methodism had taken a firm root, and as evidence he had lately raised $1,200 to finish paying for a $10,000 church in Helena, the capital of the Territory. Among others who spoke in favor of the new Conference was Dr. McFerrin, of Nashville, whose remarks we quote entire, as reported in the Daily Advocate:

Mr. McFerrin: Thought the Church was laboring under great misapprehension in reference to the church in the great West. Since the last General Conference, by the request of the Mission Board and the Bishops, he had gone out there to Colorado, Oregon, California, and in sight of other Territories. He had inquired into the matter, and was satisfied that we have a great work in the West and which has never been appreciated. The country was full of Tennesseeans, Georgians, Alabamians, and Kentuckians. There were men out there who, like Stateler, have been [illegible] during civil war from their [illegible]. He was obliged to flee, and [illegible] his wagon, hitched his [illegible] put in meal and soap and [illegible] a thousand miles, preaching [illegible] he went, and trading off his [illegible] Southerner, but no truer Christian [illegible] among the Indians than [illegible] in Montana. What is [illegible] [illegible] of cain on the [illegible] to the savages of wild beasts? I can raise a great deal of money to carry the Gospel out to the West. If we had stuck to our first proposition at Louisville, perhaps the increase would have been four-fold now.

The Bishops must go to Oregon and California, and why can not they stop at the points on the route? Asbury traveled over the continent on horseback, too. You live in the days of railroads, and when they give out you have good stages. What! not jostle in a stage! Any man will endure that to be a Bishop. [Laughter.] He that desires the office of a Bishop, desires a good work. [Laughter.] How does that read? If you can't stand the trip, send me along; I'll help. I am in for all that great West. We have got lines of communication from—where's the heart of the Church, the center? Let's say Atlanta; from Atlanta, to Montana, Idaho, San Francisco to China; let's keep up the lines. These are half-way houses. I, for one, like to work for my poor brethren in the wilderness. If you convert a few souls—dropping a seed here and there—you are infinitely repaid for sending the Gospel by these men. If I was a young man I would go out West and put myself in connection with these people. Nobody knows what sacrifices these men make to preach in the far West—the noblest class. I say, all hail Oregon! all hail California! all hail the great West! As long as I can lift my voice, I will pray for you.

FRATERNITY.

To-day, May 16, has been the great day of the Conference thus far. Almost the entire session was given to the reception of the fraternal delegates from our own, the Methodist Episcopal Church. The clerical delegate was Rev. Dr. C. D. Foss, President of Wesleyan University, and the lay delegate was ex-Governor Cumback, of Indiana. We will send abstract of the addresses for next issue, and perhaps speak at length of the status whereunto we have attained in the matter of formal and practical fraternity. Just now we speak of our delegates and the manner in which they performed their important mission, and how they were received. Dr. Foss spoke first, and from the beginning to the end carried the vast audience with him. The address was scholarly, eloquent and at times thrilling, with here and there enough wit to awaken hearty laughter. Governor Cumback followed with a strong speech which fully maintained his reputation as an orator, a man of generous culture and an ardent lover of Methodism. Both these honored brethren did their work in a manner highly creditable to themselves and the great church they represented.

There seemed to be but one sentiment throughout the Conference and audience, and that was of delight with the addresses and joy that fraternity between the two great branches of Episcopal Methodism in the United States was now an accomplished fact. Bishop Paine, the chairman and senior Bishop, spoke in most earnest words, expressing delight to see fraternity established.

THE EDUCATION OF COLORED PEOPLE.

The Conference has before it the following report, which will be adopted. We give it without note or comment. It is certainly a gratifying fact that the Southern Methodist Church is to be thus thoroughly committed to the great work of educating the colored people. As to its claim that it has done more for this people than any other agency we say nothing, lest we speak harshly. Our readers can each judge for themselves. The report says:

The education of the colored people is both a religious duty and a political necessity. In the minds of thinking men of all shades of political opinion, grave apprehensions have been excited by the fact that the suffrage has been extended more rapidly than the means of popular education. Ignorance is the hot-bed in which everything vile flourishes. When ignorance is the fountain of political power, its streams must be impure. These truisms bear directly upon this question of the education of the colored people. They have the right of suffrage. Neither the wish nor the power exists to take it from them. Our one concern in the matter is, that this privilege may be exercised intelligently and beneficially to the body politic. Therefore, as Christian citizens, we rejoice in the fact that considerable progress has been made in providing the means of education for the colored race in the Southern States. Experience has shown that in proportion to the growth of intelligence among this people, is the measure of their protection against the counsels of unprincipled adventurers from abroad, and demagogues at home. The intelligent colored voter and the intelligent white voter cannot fail to see that their interests are the same and that he who would sow the seeds of discord between them is an enemy to both. Hence, the education of the colored race is a matter of vital importance. We, therefore, recommend our people everywhere to encourage, by all means in their power, the mental and moral culture of the millions who have been so recently invested with the responsibility of the ballot.

But there are higher than merely civil interests involved in this question. It involves the religious interest and eternal destiny of the colored people in these States. The guiding hand and transforming spirit of the church must be felt in the work of education. From the date of its organization to the present hour, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been thoroughly alive to the moral and religious welfare of the African race. It is not claiming too much when we affirm, that for whatever is praiseworthy in their conduct during the trying ordeal through which they have passed; for whatever is gratifying in their present condition, and for whatever is hopeful in the prospect of their future, the colored people of the Southern States are more indebted to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, than to any other agency. Political changes have wrought no change in the heart of the Church. It is still ready to work for the salvation of this people to the full measure of its ability and opportunity. We, therefore, deem it proper to give this expression of our interest in their behalf, and respectfully submit the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the education of the enfranchised colored people of the South is demanded alike by Christian duty and enlightened patriotism.

Resolved, That in all efforts that may be made by the colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America to establish educational institutions for the moral and religious training of the colored race, we bespeak the cordial sympathy and practical aid of our people.

Memory and the Judgment.

The Scriptures explicitly teach that at the last day the Savior will judge the world, and that all will be judged according to the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or evil. To this statement it has been objected that in order for us to feel the justice of that decision it is necessary that we should have a knowledge of our whole past life on which it is founded. It is asked is it possible in the nature of things that we should be able to recall our whole past lives, with their thousands of minute incidents; the long trains of thought; the impressions and feelings that have run through our minds; all the different scenes and situations that we have been in; all the words we have spoken; and all the acts that we have done? To this question we can reply, of course, that if the human mind does not possess the power, the Supreme Judge can give it the power in that day. But that there is in the human mind such a power, and that it can be called into active exercise is shown by the fact with which we are all familiar. How unexpectedly at times does the faded past come back to us with a vividness that is truly wonderful. Some word, the sight of a friend, a house, a stream, or a slight incident awakens memory and former scenes, companionships, hopes and sorrows stand before us as in a resurrection from the dead.

We have a striking illustration of what memory can do in the case of Admiral Beaufort. The Admiral was hastily jumping on board the ship Excellent, but, missing the vessel, fell into the water and sank to a great depth! For a while he was supposed to be drowned. He was, however, rescued. Describing his condition of mind, he says that all he remembered after plunging into the water was a sense of freedom from pain, and a sudden recollection of all his past life, especially his past guilty actions long forgotten. To use his own language: "They were as vividly fresh in my memory as if they had occurred but yesterday. The senses were deadened, not so the mind. Its activity seemed to be invigorated in a ratio which defies all description. Thought after thought rose with a rapidity of succession that is not only indescribable but probably inconceivable by any one who has not been in a similar situation. Thus traveling backwards, every past incident of my life seemed to glare across my recollection in retrograde succession, not, however, in mere outline as here stated, but the picture filled up with every minute and collateral feature. In short the whole period of my life seemed to be placed before me in a kind of panoramic review and each act of it seemed to be accompanied by a consciousness of right and wrong or by some reflection on its cause or its consequences. Indeed, many trifling events which had long been forgotten then crowded into my imagination and with the character of recent familiarity."

Upon these facts he thus moralizes: "May not all this be some indication of the almost infinite power of memory with which we may awaken in another world, and thus be compelled to contemplate our past lives; or might it not, in some degree, warrant the inference that death is only a change or modification of our existence in which there is no real pause or interruption? But, however that may be, one circumstance was highly remarkable: that the innumerable ideas which flashed into my mind were all retrospective. Yet I had been religiously brought up, my hopes and fears of the next world had lost nothing of their early strength, and at any other period intense interest and awful anxiety would have been excited by the mere probability that I was floating on the threshold of eternity; yet at that inexpressible moment, when I had a full conviction that I had already crossed that threshold, not a single thought wandered into the future. I was wrapped up entirely in the past." It is very noteworthy also "that the length of time that was occupied by this deluge of ideas, or rather the shortness of time into which they were concentrated was not two minutes from the moment of suffocation to that of being hauled up."

It is a solemn thought that the soul of man may be the dread book of Judgment upon whose mysterious pages we ourselves are writing every thought and feeling, every word and action of our lives. The opening of the book by the Great Judge will probably be a suddenly developed power of recollecting everything. Conscience will also be quickened into tremendous activity, and so we shall be our own judges. The sentence of the Great Judge will be approved by the wicked themselves under the combined lights of memory and conscience.

No One-Eyed Saints in Glory.

Every true Methodist rejoices in the growth of fraternity between the different Methodist bodies in the South. Occasionally however the bringing together of the brethren of the different churches recalls the incidents of the stirring times when brother was arraigned against brother in the days of war, and suggests remarks often more pointed than wise.

An incident illustrating this occurred not long since in Tennessee. Rev. J. R. Hughes, of the Holston Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was in the Union army, and during the war had one of his eyes shot out. Not long since, in these better days of fraternity, brother Hughes had a Southern Methodist minister preaching for him, who, during the war, had been very active in his sympathy with the Confederacy. The brother was eloquent and preached an effective sermon. In speaking of heaven he pictured its glories, and spoke of the fact that there would be no physical imperfections: "All glorified bodies will be perfect," shouted the brother, and turning to brother Hughes and seeing that he was minus an eye, said: "Yes, dear brother Hughes, there will be no one-eyed saints in glory." Brother Hughes while enjoying the sentiment had vividly brought to mind the effect of the rebel bullet which robbed him of an eye. The remembrance of the agony of that moment no doubt made him for the instant forget his surroundings. To the surprise of the preacher, and of the attentive audience, brother Hughes shouted out, "That is so, brother. There will be no one-eyed saints in glory because there will be no rebels in heaven to shoot out eyes." The enthusiasm of the meeting was somewhat lessened.

Mrs. Roxana Packard, mother of Governor Packard, died in this city at the residence of her son, on the 16th inst.

About four months ago this venerable and Christian lady came from her home in the State of Maine to reside with her son. On the 15th she met with an accident, falling down a long flight of stairs, which gave the system so severe a shock that it was impossible she could rally from it. Her death was as peaceful as her life had been beautiful. She was permitted to see her two sons once more, and then, as she expressed it, she felt ready to depart.

The recollection of a Christian mother will long linger like sweet fragrance in the hearts of her children and friends.

Suitable services were held at the residence of Gov. Packard by Rev. Dr. McCarty, of Ames M. E. Church, where many sympathizing friends gathered to pay their respects. The remains were then conveyed to Greenwood Cemetery, where they will rest until the day when all the dead shall come forth.

Golden Hours for June contains many excellent things, notably "The Home of an Earl," by Caroline B. Le Row, of Vassar College, it being one of a series of transcripts of her sight-seeing in Europe. A special feature is the fine Musical Selection given each month. It is wise to lead children to a high standard in this art, and it is especially fitting to do so in connection with Literature. The readers of this moral juvenile are promised an interesting serial for the remaining months of the year. Published by Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Cookman Institute, Fla.

The President, Rev. S. B. Darnell, writes us, May 16th: "Our Institute had a fine closing of this most successful year. Whole attendance during the year 114. Classes grew grandly. Examination very satisfactory, and the graduating classes acquitted themselves with honor; one distinguished himself. He took the first diploma of Cookman Institute. Deservedly he carries a testimonial which we all delight to confer upon such noble men, and reward the vigorous toils of four years."

People are not to blamed for misfortune, but is it a wise thing to allow upon the streets so many physical wrecks, holding out their hands for help? Ought not some measures be adopted by which to care for all these within doors. Such exposures are not only unpleasant to the eye, but they work injury to the living. Help the poor, but do it in a better way than that which prevails so extensively. Every case ought to be cared for and in the best way.

In his recent address to the Carroll, Co. Sunday-school Convention, Gov. Colquitt of Georgia had this to say of family prayer:

"There is one thing that excites my profound surprise, and that is that a man blessed with all calculated to make home happy—wife, children, and the comforts of life—can arise in the morning and go out to work without family prayer! Poor mortal man, how can he realize that he has discharged the obligations of life without the observance of this important duty?

"People of Carroll county, if I was going to give you the last advice on earth, I would say, Father and mother, go to the altar of your God and ask His blessing on your families; and this once secured the people of Carroll would be happy. Let this practice be universally adopted, and the prosperity and happiness of the county will be assured before your next annual meeting.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. H. Cawthorn, Brooksville, Miss: "On this work there have been six recent conversions and eight additions to the church. We have two Sunday-schools which have 115 scholars. Money is scarce, but in spiritual interests the work is in good condition."

Rev. J. N. Thomas, Mose Point, Miss.: "We have just closed a protracted meeting in which there were fourteen conversions and eighteen accessions to the church. Of the latter five are scholars of the Sunday-school. We bless the Lord for his goodness.

Rev. B. L. Crump, Greenwood, Miss.: "The churches on this circuit are in good condition. The accessions during past quarter numbered eight. The recent quarterly meeting services were well attended. The Lord's Supper was administered to 128 communicants. The Sunday-schools are organized under the missionary rules, and are doing well."

Rev. C. C. Robinson, Taylorville, Texas: "When we came to this work the first part of the year, we found but six members and no house of worship. The outlook seemed to be discouraging, but trusting to the Lord to direct we went forward. We now have a nice little church building, 20x24 feet in dimensions, and a very good congregation that gradually increases in numbers."

Rev. Jas. Hayword, Franklin, La.: "Our work at this point is in good condition. There is a continued increase in membership, and a deep spiritual interest prevails. Notwithstanding the hard times we have recently paid $64.00 on an old church debt of $200.00. Our prospects for the future are good. A young lady of our congregation, Miss Lizzie McNeal, has recently died. I visited her during her illness, which lasted through several months, and read, sung and prayed with her until she found peace in believing. She died rejoicing in hope of Heaven."

Rev. A. R. Norris, Calvert, Texas: "The Lord has blessed us with a very gracious revival. There were twenty-two conversions and thirty-two additions to the church and a number of backsliders reclaimed and the membership encouraged and strengthened in faith. We had the assistance in the meeting of our Presiding Elder, Rev. M. Gregory; also of Rev. S. Hardwell, of Brenham, and Revs. O. L. Madison and A. Brack, of Waco. We have great opposition to contend with here, but we trust to God to bring us through. Our Sunday-school is organized into a missionary society and is doing well. The congregation have recently made us the very acceptable present of a nice suit of clothes."

Knoxville, Tenn., May 16.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church South convened here this morning. The Rev. Thos. E. Peck, D.D., of Roanoke Presbytery, Va., was elected Moderator. Over 130 delegates are present, the largest assembly of this body ever convened.

Lancaster, Pa., May 16.—At the General Synod of the Reformed Church of the United States, in triennial session, the first ballot for President resulted in a tie vote—74 votes for Dr. B. Bausman, and 74 for Dr. D. Van Horne. On the second ballot Dr. Van Horne was elected by a majority of 2, Dr. Bausman being chosen First Vice President by acclamation.

Wilmington, Del., May 15.—The Bishops of the M. E. Church began their semi-annual meeting in this city to-day. Bishop Scott presiding. They are eleven in number—Bishops Andrews, Ames, Bowman, Foster, Haven, Harris, Merrill, Scott, Simpson, Peck and Wiley.

LONDON, May 17.—A dispatch from Constantinople says: The Russians continue massing their forces from all directions in the vicinity of, and are daily drawing nearer to, the Turkish capital. They are also constantly pressing upon the Porte to insist upon England's withdrawing her fleet from the Sea of Marmora. All advices received indicate that the Turkish popular feeling of uneasiness is increasing.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The Syndicate have decided to take the remaining $15,000,000 of the $50,000,000 4½ per cent bonds covered by its contract with the Secretary of the Treasury. Options for October, November and December are thus anticipated. A large part of the $15,000,000 will be sold abroad. It is asserted that the Syndicate are discussing the question of entering into a contract with Secretary Sherman for $50,000,000 4 per cent bonds, with option of taking $15,000,000 more, but members of the Syndicate are reticent on the subject.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—In the event of a declaration of hostilities between England and Russia this government will issue a proclamation of neutrality and use every effort to enforce its provisions. In the Turco-Russian war such a proclamation was unnecessary, the interests involved in that conflict being so far removed from this country. In case of a Russo-British war events have demonstrated clearly that international complications of a serious character will arise if the United States does not proclaim its neutrality and enforce as far as possible a strict observance of the treaty of Washington and fulfill other international obligations.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The Herald says: No intelligent man of either party can longer doubt that this whole batch of incendiary attempts, the Blair memorial, the Kimmell bill, the secret Florida investigation and the Potter resolution have a common paternity and were instigated by Mr. Tilden. He never did anything more characteristic of his still hunt methods. This astute and secretive plotter, who mistakes cunning for wisdom, is no doubt sincere in thinking that he has been defrauded of an office to which he was elected by the people, and probably justifies himself in the underhand attempts he is making to shake the stability of the government, imperil the tranquillity and disturb the business of the country; but neither his aims nor his methods will be endorsed by the public sentiment of the country. Against the cry of "fraud," the Republicans raise the cry of "revolution," and they will unite the whole North once more in their support.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Supreme Court to-day rendered a decision in the matter of Jackson, on petition for habeas corpus and certiori. This was the case in which a lottery dealer, convicted of sending circulars through the mails, sought to be released on habeas corpus on the ground that the act of Congress under which he was charged is unconstitutional in attempting to exclude the matter sent by him from the mails. The decision is that the act of Congress is entirely free from constitutional objection, and any one using the mails for such a purpose shall be punished. There is no authority in the officers of the postal service to open any sealed package, and evidence must be collected in some other way. As there is no question made on this case as to the competency of the evidence upon which the conviction was had, it is affirmed.

The young people of Cincinnati are excited over a promised wedding that did not take place. The young man and young woman had known each other from childhood, and were prominent in society circles. The wedding guests were assembled, and the loving couple were on the floor. The minister propounded the usual question to the bride as to whether she would take the man for her husband, etc., when much to the surprise of all present, she answered "No." Thinking he misunderstood her, the minister asked the question over again, and again she answered "No." This stopped the ceremony, and the story came out. The young man, addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, had promised reform if the lady would consent to marry him, and had signed the pledge. He had been on trial for months, but, as the bride turned to him as they stood side by side before the minister, she caught the odor of whisky on his breath, and detected signs of incipient intoxication. She closed the extraordinary scene by stating that she could not trust her future to a man who had broken a promise solemnly made. Expostulations and entreaties were all in vain. The wedding did not take place.

A great many people wonder why it was that Christ did not come at once to Martha and Mary, whom he loved whenever he heard of their affliction. It was to try them, and it is the same with his dealings toward us. If he seems not to come to us in our affliction, it is only to test us.—Moody.

June 2, 1878.—THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL.

SCRIPTURE.—Dan. 5: 22-31.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting."—22.

TOPIC.—The Sinner's Doom.

[Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.]

The banquet was at its height. "While he tasted wine," he commanded the golden and silver vessels to be brought which his father, or grandfather, rather, Nebuchadnezzar, had taken from the temple in Jerusalem. It was "while he tasted wine," that he did this. Had it not been for that, there is no probability that he would have committed this act of profanation. It was not intended at the first, but was born of the suggestions of alcohol. There is no telling what wild freak may be perpetrated before a night of wassail is over. Deeds that shock the soberer sense of those who execute them are then conceived and carried out with mad glee and with reckless daring. Belshazzar, sober, would never have so insulted the God of Israel, but Belshazzar, drunk, was capable of any act of desecration.

But in the very midst of their mocking exultation, there occurs a phenomenon so mysterious and so terrifying that the hand of the king is palsied as he raises the cup to his lips. The wall of the banquet room was neither panelled nor draped. "Over against the candlestick," on a place that was well lighted, the king was the first to perceive the fingers of a man's hand, slowly tracing some strange characters upon the wall. They were connected with no visible hand or arm. Under the awe-inspiring influence of that inexplicable mystery, the conscience of the king was aroused, and began to terrify him with threatening suggestions. He could hardly have failed to have coupled that mysterious phenomenon with a retribution for the impiousnet in which he was even then being engaged. His terror was manifest by the changing of his countenance, by his thoughts being "troubled," by the smiting together of his knees, and by his crying "with might" to bring in the wise men that they might interpret the writing. Evidently his conscience clutched and shook him with giant vigor. The inward monitor which men think they have wheedled and bound is lying like Samson pinioned with the green withs of Delilah, only waiting for an alarm to break its bonds, and, unsparing and vehement, to seize its rebellious subject by the throat. In the abject terror of Belshazzar, every sinner can see his own consternation when that day comes round.

The Crime: 22, 25.—When Daniel came before the king and his guests, there was anything but an air of careless revelry in the banqueting hall. The disregarded delicacies, the untouched drinking vessels, and the disorder occasioned by the late riotous mirth, made the present gloom and the consternation all the more noticeable and obtrusive. Instead of rubicund and jolly countenances he looked into faces that were blanched with fear. And the one who had so impiously and recklessly defied the God of Israel was the most terror stricken of them all. And he, the representative of the deity whom they had mocked and derided, was the one to whom they looked for assistance and for comfort in their hour of fright and perplexity. Alas what ever is. People may deride the God of the Bible, but when they are in trouble, they send to the servants of that God for the [illegible] and the assistance they need.

Before he interprets the writing, he enumerates the reasons why the sentence which it contains is pronounced upon the king. [illegible] humbled himself [illegible] all the marvelous [illegible] the humbling of [illegible] Nebuchadnezzar [illegible] his heart was lifted up [illegible] his reason was taken from [illegible] not restored again until he recognised the fact that the Most High God ruled in the kingdom [illegible] He knew that it was [illegible] made to eat grass [illegible] and that after he was restored to his right mind, he praised the King of heaven [illegible] are mercy and truth [illegible] able to abase those who [illegible] He knew all this [illegible] humbled not his heart [illegible] meaning of Mene, [illegible] Upharsin, [illegible] "Numbered [illegible] and dividers." [illegible] had been able to puzzle [illegible] writing, it is evident that [illegible] not have been [illegible] deepened. This had been connected by a canal with the river Euphrates. The original object of the canal had been to draw off the surplus of water occasioned by the early rains, so that no damage might be done to the city during a flood; for the river ran directly through Babylon, cutting it into halves. In the city, along its banks, great walls were built, and wherever the stream was spanned by a bridge, great brazen gates kept perfect the line of protection. Everything, with the most admirable foresight seems to have been prepared with reference to defeating just such a stratagem as that by which the city was taken. Cyrus conceived the idea of turning the river into that new bed, long enough for him to enter the city by the old one. A detachment was sent to prepare everything for the manoeuver, and, when all was ready, Cyrus but waited for just such a night of revelry as Belshazzar soon inaugurated. One can imagine the anxiety with which he listened to see whether the fall of the river had been noticed, the fear that he felt, when in the river bed, lest the presence of his army should be discovered—for if it had been, between those high walls it would have been doomed to destruction—and the final feeling of exultation when the landings were reached, and no enemy found on guard, and the brazen gates wide open! Belshazzar paid dearly for his evening of impious revelry. His life and his kingdom were forfeit for a few glasses of wine. And in that better principality where "home is the kingdom, and love is the king," how many there are who have lost their empire for the same inadequate price.

Died,

In St. Charles Parish, La., April 22, 1878, Mrs. Martha Taylor, aged forty-eight years.

Sister Taylor had for the past twelve years been a devout Christian and a zealous member of the M. E. Church. She was fully resigned to the will of God, saying that her work was done and that she was but waiting the coming of her Lord. She leaves a husband and children, together with a large circle of friends to mourn her loss.

E. P. ROYAL, Pastor.

In this city, on the 17th inst., Mrs Esther Williams, aged 79 years.

Sister Williams was born in Rockingham county, Virginia, in 1799, and came to this State in 1818. She was converted to God forty years ago and united with the M. E. Church, of which she has ever since been a faithful member; for the past twelve years her membership has been in First Street Church of this city. After her long life spent in the service of her Master, death had no terrors for her—it was but to joyfully take her departure for the mansion prepared for her in Heaven. May her four sorrowing children, and numerous grandchildren follow her as she followed Christ.

HENRY GREEN, Pastor.

At West Point, Miss., April 27th, 1878, Waterman Conner, aged 76 years.

He had been for more than forty years a member of the church, and for many years past one of our class-leaders. He was faithful in his attendance upon church and class, and in all his duties as a Christian and citizen. His illness was brief, but death found him fully prepared, and he passed away rejoicing at the bright prospects before him of a blissful immortality.

A. W. WRIGHT, Pastor.

For families and tourists this double tracked route is the best in every respect, as it has so many agreeable advantages.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

Dr. J. M. Howe's
Inhaling Tube!
AND
COMMON AIR WILL CURE
CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $2.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. BEERS, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. P. M. ADAMS, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctore told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy.

DR. PIERCE'S
STANDARD
REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (more dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
is Tonic

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

THE GRUMBLER.

HIS YOUTH.

His coat was too thick and his cap was too thin;
He couldn't be quiet, he hated a din;
He hated to write, and he hated to read,
He was certainly very much injured indeed;
He must study and work over books he detested,
His parents were strict, and he never was rested;
He knew he was wretched as wretched could be,
There was no one so wretchedly wretched as he.

HIS MATURITY.

His farm was too small and his taxes too big;
He was selfish, and lazy, and cross as a pig!
His wife was too silly, his children too rude;
And just because he was uncommonly good,
He never had money enough or to spare,
He had nothing at all fit to eat or to wear;
He knew he was wretched as wretched could be,
There was no one so wretchedly wretched as he.

HIS OLD AGE.

He finds he has sorrows more deep than his fears;
He grumbles to think he has grumbled for years;
He grumbles to think he has grumbled away
His home and his fortune, his life's little day.
But, alas! 'tis too late,—it is no use to say
That his eyes are too dim, and his hair is too gray.
He knows he is wretched as wretched can be,
There is no one more wretchedly wretched than he.

—St. Nicholas.

The Best Love.

Home-love is the best love. The love that you are born to is the sweetest you will ever have on earth. You, who are so anxious to to escape from the home-nest, pause a moment and remember that this is so. It is right that the hour should come when you, in your turn, should become a wife and a mother and give the best love to others; but that will be just it. Nobody—not a lover, not a husband—will ever be so tender or so true as your mother and father. Never again, after strangers have broken the beautiful bond will there be anything so sweet as the little circle of mother, father and children, where you were cherished, protected, praised, and kept from harm. You may not know it now, but you will know it some day. Whomsoever you marry—true and good though he may be—will, after the lover-days are over and the honeymoon has waned, give you only what you deserve of love or sympathy—and usually much less, never more. You must watch and be wary, lest you lose that love which came in through the eyes, because the one who looked thought you beautiful. But those who bore you, who loved you when you were that dreadful little object, a small baby, and thought you exquisitely beautiful and wonderfully brilliant—they do not care for faces that are fairer and forms that are more graceful than yours. You are their very own, and so better to them always than others.

A Cheerful Woman.

What a blessing to a household is a merry, cheerful woman—one whose spirits are not affected by wet days or little disappointments, or whose milk of human kindness does not sour in the sunshine of prosperity. Such a woman, in the darkest hours, brightens the house like a [illegible] piece of sunshiny weather. The magnetism of her smile and the [illegible] brightness of her looks [illegible] movements infect every one. The children go to school with a sense of something great to be [illegible]; her husband goes into the [illegible] a conqueror's spirit. No [illegible] people annoy and worry [illegible] far off her presence [illegible] he whispers to himself, "[illegible] I shall find rest." So day [illegible] literally renews his [illegible] and energy; and if you [illegible] with a beaming face, a [illegible] prosperous business, [illegible] of ten you [illegible] wife of this kind.

[illegible] attachment [illegible] persons, arising [illegible] of each [illegible] It is [illegible] but is [illegible] among [illegible] poor. In[illegible] if we do not find [illegible] among [illegible] higher circles, [illegible] considered [illegible] where [illegible] to [illegible]; but [illegible] to [illegible] love, in [illegible] to the friend[illegible] them for the cravings of man's higher nature. They are the friends who enter your bark when the sea is smooth and the sky is bright; but when the tempest of adversity hurls its thunderbolts upon your head, and the sea and the winds threaten destruction to your frail skiff, leave you to struggle with the waves, while they link their fortunes to a stronger craft. Bacon truly said, three centuries ago, "There is little friendship in the world."

If, as a certain writer says, "The first law of friendship is sincerity," a second and a still higher prerogative is confidence. Johnson says, "There can be no friendship without confidence, and no confidence without integrity." When a person feels that he can trust to another all his hopes and fears, his joys and sorrows, and knows that he will meet with warm, loving sympathy, then may those two be truly called friends. But this confinence, to be real, must be born of sincerity, and, to be lasting, requires that both should be persons of stern integrity and high moral character. How refreshing the friendship which sympathizes with our aspirations, our strivings for a higher state of being, and the many, many discouragements, and gives the needed words of consolation, showing what has been done that is right, and giving encouragement for renewed exertions.

Are Advertisements Read.

Hon. John Forsythe, the veteran editor of the Mobile Register, used to tell a good story to illustrate the value of advertising as a means of getting before the public whenever you wished them to know of your wants and wares.

Mr. Forsyth was accidentally drawn into a discussion of this subject with a mercantile friend, who expressed emphatic doubts that an advertisement benefited a man's business at all, and closed his side of the debate with the common remark:

"It's all money given to the aid of the newspapers. Nobody reads my advertisement, or thinks of it, except your foreman and collector."

Mr. Forsyth replied: "Let us test the truth of your assertion. Sit down and write out an advertisement such as I dictate, and we will put it in the smallest type the cases contain, and insert it in the remotest corner of the Register that you can select.

The next morning there appeared in agate, without a hit of display, and in the most out-of-the-way place in the paper, the following:

WANTED—To buy a dog. Apply at No. — Blank Street.

During the day of the first appearance of his experiment, the merchant called at the Register office several times. He looked as though he was in trouble, appeared nervous, looked over his shoulder like one who is pursued by a persistent dun. Finally, late in the evening, he met his editorial friend, and before the latter had time to open his mouth, the merchant said hurriedly and excitedly, "For Heaven's sake leave that advertisement out of your evening edition. There's five dollars for it and five dollars more to pay you for saying No. —, Blank Street, has got a dog. I'm nearly worried to death."

A Touching Story.

The reason for the friendship to the white race of Spotted Tail is made known to the public as follows: "Some years ago the family of this chief was living at Fort Laramie, garrisoned at that time by companies of an Ohio volunteer cavalry regiment. One member of the family was the chief's favorite daughter, a girl just entering upon her womanhood. The girl fell violently in love with one of the Ohio officers, a fine looking young fellow, who did all he could to convince her that her affection was foolish and hopeless. Day after day she hung around his quarters, waiting hours to catch sight of him, and perfectly happy if only able to follow him about. It puzzled her that she, a princess, was not able to win the love of this young soldier. At length her father learned how matters stood, and coming for her, sent her away among friends in the Rocky Mountains. There she gradually pined away till finally the chief was summoned to receive her dying message. When he reached bedside she urged him for his own sake and for the sake of his people to be at peace with the whites. This message given, she died. Her father had her body conveyed to Laramie, and buried among the pale faces. Spotted Tail often speaks of his dead daughter, and once in a great council with the whites said: "[illegible] not the hopelessness of resistance and the dictates of policy [illegible] to restrain me from acts [illegible] pledge I made my dead [illegible] her dying hour would cause [illegible] keep at peace with your chil[illegible]

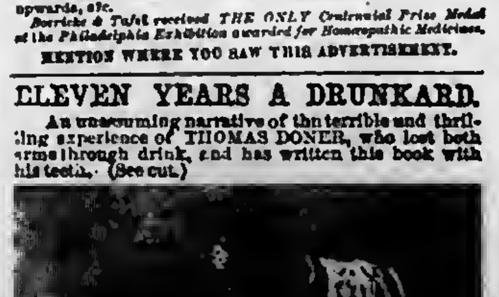
ELEVEN YEARS A DRUNKARD.

An unassuming narrative of the terrible and thrilling experience of THOMAS DONER, who lost both arms through drink, and has written this book with his teeth. (See cut.)



Thomas Writing his Book.

KIND FRIENDS:—Being deprived of both my arms by whisky, I take this method of earning my livelihood—by introducing to your honorable notice my past life. Although chastened and subdued in spirit by the suffering and loss I have borne through intemperance, I am thankful to that good Being through whose mercy I was saved from dropping into a drunkard's grave, to fight against this promoter of crime and misery, that has robbed me of my arms, until I am called away to that heavenly land, where trouble and sorrow never come, and where, as far as these statements are concerned, I am willing to be judged at last.

THOMAS DONER.

This book is neatly illustrated, and is worthy of the consideration of all temperance workers—IS JUST THE BOOK FOR THE TIMES.

It delineates the First Step; the Second Step; the silliness and remorse produced by them; the drunken reveling at houses of debauchery; Fights, stabbings, suicides of drunken comrades, and thrilling incidents in army and hospital life; the degradation and woe produced by drunkenness vividly set forth as a living picture.

A WORD TO AGENTS:—One agent assures us that he can clear $80 per month. He sold two hundred books in four days. Another agent tried it six weeks, and then refused a school at $65 per month, board and washing included, and is now selling. A lady in Battle Creek, Michigan, sold fifty-seven books in one afternoon, and sold three hundred in a short time.

THIRTY THOUSAND copies have already been sold, and we have a new edition of Ten Thousand in the bindery, fully illustrated. They sell like hot cakes.

Prices are as follows: Single copy, 25 cents. Twelve copies, $2.00, sent post-paid. Twenty-five copies, $[illegible]. Fifty copies, $[illegible], and One Hundred copies, $[illegible], express charges added. We are willing to send books C. O. D., by express, but 25 to 50 cents will be saved by sending money order or registered letter. Now friends, if you send for 100 books, you will get $[illegible] for selling them at 25 cents each. If you sell 200 in four days, you get $[illegible], or $[illegible] per day. But you will not often sell so many. Most agents will average from $2.50 to $4.00 per day, by giving their time to it. We make the above statements from practical experience, and feel assured that those who may engage in selling these books will not be deceived or disappointed.

To canvass, and then deliver, is not the most successful way to make sales. Take the Books along with you, and sell as you go. Most people rather buy, than subscribe for a book, it takes too much time to canvass and then deliver.

Write your name, POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE, plainly, and remember WHERE to send, and WHO to send to. Be sure to make no mistake.

Send 25 cents for sample copy.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo.......................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth st., Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the Ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory.

to be exchanged between the two largest branches of Methodism in the world, long and sadly estranged from each other; during the recent years, earnestly, honorably, frankly trying to remove the causes of this estrangement, or to bury them a thousand fathoms deep in the whelming tide of Christian love; and now for the first, able to strike hands over "formal fraternity" as an accomplished fact. Two and a quarter millions of Episcopal Methodists feel the joyful thrill of this day's greetings; so many in God's militant host, led to His feet by Wesley and Asbury and their successors; and let us not doubt that the countless myriads of God's triumphant host also share in the solemn joy of this great hour; for "One family we dwell in Him,

One Church, above, beneath,
Though now divided by the stream,
The narrow stream of death."

Would that he to whom we trace whatever is distinctive in the ecclesiastical order might break the long silence which has elapsed since his never-to-be-forgotten parting blessing: "The best of all is, God is with us," and speak to us from his high seat in glory words of congratulation and counsel to-day. [Applause.] I recall this vain wish and offer a more practicable one. O, that his Lord and ours, who left the world with his hands extended over his chosen to bless them, saying just as he ascended, "Lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," may breathe into every heart his spirit of ineffable love, and send us forth from this festal day as never before to cordial co-operation in the sublime endeavor which has been our common watchword from the beginning, "to spread Scriptural holiness over these lands." [Applause.]

Mr. President, what is this precious heritage of Methodism, in which millions of men have cause to rejoice? What is it without, and what within? What has it done to challenge the attention and respect of the Christian world, and what is the secret of its power? It has been defined as "Christianity in earnest." May it evermore and increasingly deserve the definition! [Amens.] Its best historian speaks of it on his [illegible] pages as the "religious movement of the eighteenth century, called Methodism." A "movement" it certainly was at the beginning, both in England and in America. It made a commotion wherever it went. The customary greeting which met its itinerants everywhere was, "these that have turned the world upside down are come hither also." And they justified the expectation thus created. They had the faith of the rough Yorkshire preacher on this text, who announced as the points of his [illegible]: "1. The world is wrong side up. 2. It must be turned upside down. 3. We are the chaps to do it." [Laughter and applause.]

It was also a "religious" movement. Men might call it fanatical, as many did, but all were compelled to admit that it was pre-eminently religious. It was incontestably [illegible] nothing else; and, compared with all other movements in [illegible], it was "the religious [illegible] of the eighteenth century."

But it has long since outgrown [illegible]. During the [illegible] of the 19th century [illegible] infant has become [illegible] growth. The statistics of [illegible] have long since arrested [illegible] of the ecclesiastic, but also of the philosopher and the statesman. Its [illegible] the religious [illegible] this continent is [illegible]. Many thought [illegible] denominations re-[illegible] the mighti-[illegible] of [illegible] American Method-[illegible]

gious weekly of each of the great denominations, and that in all of these years no single line had given him such pain as one he saw a few weeks before at the head of an article in the Christian Advocate, published in New York. It was this: "The decline of Methodism." It reminded him of a carpenter who, while working in his shop, could watch his son playing around his door-yard, and who feared that the little fellow would sometime fall into the well. Suddenly missing him one day, he rushed to the curb, and seeing something in the water, he shouted, "My boy, are you dead?" "Yes, father." What a relief to get it from his own lips! [Applause.] The speaker added: "We outsiders have heard nothing of the decline of Methodism except from Methodism itself." Sitting behind him in the pulpit was Bishop Janes, that singularly devoted man, for whose entrance on a grand career of apostolic labors in the bishopric we are indebted to Southern votes—to yours, sir, and to those of other gentlemen on this platform and on this floor. We gratefully acknowledge this debt. He was wont to say that after his abundant opportunities for knowing whereof he affirmed, he could confidently assert that the church was never more pure, and never so intelligent and powerful for her work as now. [Applause.]

We may and must see and lament whatever elements of weakness render Methodism, in point of fact, at all inferior to its grand ideal as a world embracing system of evangelical propagandism; but let us not forget to thank God that His blessing has made it the largest and most effective branch of His Church on this continent, and has caused its distinctive ideas to overflow its ecclesiastical limits and leaven every other branch of the Church.

The Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, who brought to our general Conference the fraternal greetings of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, in 1872, said:

"I rejoice to believe that when God sent the Methodist Episcopal Church into America that Church was called and elected to conquer this country, in order to put fervor and activity into the Presbyterian Church; and it has made its calling and election sure." [Applause.] And I believe further, brethren, that you have in many details of Christian activity, taught us very many lessons which, though we may have been slow to receive, we have been sure to accept in the end."

It required an effort of the imagination to realize the immense responsibility devolved on us by what God had accomplished through our fathers. Why does this august body, gathered from many States, pause in the midst of its important business to listen to this fraternal delegation? Not for what we are, nor for what we can say, but because we stand in front of 1,600,000 warm Methodist hearts, and give you their greeting in the Lord. [Applause.] We represent a body of Christians closely akin to you, having $70,000,000 invested in Church property, having the responsibility of training a million and a half of Sunday-school scholars, taught in 20,000 schools by 200,000 teachers.

It would not become us to make any particular statement of your own statistics, but the world knows that your membership is fast approaching a full million, and that your pastors are responsible for the religious instruction of several millions of the people.

Dr. Punshon says that when, in 1769, Richard Boardman and Joseph Pilmoor were sent out to America, the first missionary collection was taken in the British Wesleyan Conference, and $200 were put in their hands. On their way a farewell meeting was held at York, and a collection of $2.50 was taken up. [Laughter.] Tradition says a special prayer-meeting was called for at 5 o'clock the next morning, "to return God thanks for such unexampled liberality." [Great laughter.] That was 109 years ago, and now there are 22,318 itinerant ministers, connected with the various branches of Methodism in this country, and [illegible] members. "What hath [illegible] wrought?" Oh, for floods [illegible] upon the dry ground, [illegible] make us a thousand times [illegible] as we now are, and [illegible] He has promised. [illegible] the interior [illegible] secret of its power. That secret, I conceive, consists partly in its doctrinal system, partly in its ecclesiastical polity, but chiefly in its religious experience. Its doctrinal system is not new, though the manner of its proclamation is. From the beginning until now, the Methodists, we think, have been less inclined than any other branch of the Church, to forget the inspired apostolic commination against novelties in doctrine, "Though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other Gospel unto you than that ye have heard, let him be accursed."

In the course of the ages the old doctrines of the Bible had been buried beneath the rubbish of forgetfulness and sacredotalism. Wesley seized them, lifted them up, shook from them the dust of ages which covered them, kindled them at the altar of God, rushed forth and held them up as blazing torches before the eyes of the people. (Applause.)

Our fathers taught that sin was not a peccadillo, not merely a misfortune, but a dark, guilty, damning fact. They taught that salvation was not a proposal of help, restricted to a certain part of the human race, to be conferred at some time, no man can tell when; but to every guilty penitent, it was a proclamation that he might now be saved, fully saved, saved to the uttermost, and have the witness of the Holy Ghost to the fact of this salvation. (Applause.) No wonder the people listened, for at that time these truths came with the force of a new revelation to the masses of men.

I think I shall not be accused of an unjust criticism on our Christian brethren not of our faith, if I cite an old-fashioned Methodist's sarcastic representation of the teaching prevailing in the communities in which he moved. It was this: "Religion—if you seek it, you won't find it; if you find it, you won't know it; if you know it, you haven't got it; if you get it, you can't lose it; if you lose it, you never had it." (Great laughter.) The Methodists reversed every clause of this description, and made it run: Religion—if you seek it, you will find it; if you find it, you will know it; if you know it, you have got it; if you get it, you may lose it; if you lose it, you must have had it. (Applause.)

All the doctrines our fathers asserted were old, but they made them new, fresh, vivid and powerful.

I cannot illustrate one doctrine, misconceived by many, better than by an incident of the days of the French Revolution. An attempt was made by a brilliant Frenchman, M. Lepaux, to establish a new religion—a sentimental Rousseauism, which he termed Theo-philanthropy. After long efforts he found the trial a failure, and went to that great master of state-craft, Talleyrand, and asked his advice. Talleyrand said, "Monsieur Lepaux, you have undertaken a very difficult task. It is not easy to establish a new religion. I don't know whether you can be successful. I venture, however, to give you one piece of advice. I advise you to be crucified and to rise again the third day." (Applause.)

I take it one of the distinctive features of the testimony of Methodism has always been the necessity of a profound and unwavering faith in the sanguinary, vicarious death of our Lord Jesus Christ, and his resurrection on the third day, as the only ground on which a sinner can build his hope of salvation. Our early preachers had keen eyes. They had no foot-square audience lying on the pulpit to keep their eyes off from their real congregation. And so, if they saw on any face the signs that the Spirit was moving in the heart, they went to that man and took his hand. They did not ask, "Do you believe in the Thirty-nine Articles?" or, "Do you believe in the three orders of the ministry?" or, "Do you believe that we are the true Church?" but, "Do you desire to flee from the wrath to come, and be saved from your sins?" If the answer was "Yes," they would say, "Here is Brother Jones, the class-leader. Come next Tuesday night to his class." Mr. Wesley, according to Lord Macaulay, had a genius for government not inferior to that of Richelieu, yet he invented not a single one of our peculiarities, every one of them is a child of Providence.

The Itineracy is the foundation of our polity. The early itinerant preacher went to the people. He ever felt, as a hurricane at his back, Christ's unrepealable marching order to his ministry, "Go." Wherever the people had gone he went, and he went often before them. (Applause.)

But the religious experience of Methodism was the great secret of its power. My brethren, God's way in making any truth powerful among men has always been to translate it into the vernacular of earth by incarnating it—(Applause)—by putting it into a human soul. I detract not a word from the statement of my dear friend, the Secretary of the Bible Society, who addressed you yesterday. I re-affirm Chillingworth's great maxim, "The Bible, the Bible, the religion of Protestants." But it is not merely the Bible written; it is the Bible incarnated—lived—wrought into the fabric of souls, which is mighty for the salvation of the world. (Applause.) God incarcerated himself in order to reveal himself.

The universality of the Gospel offer is one of the truths distinctly revealed, but never understood until God incarnated it. The imperial angels had sung, "Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth, good will to men." Jesus had given the great commission for "all the world, for every creature."

But the apostles themselves did not understand this command of Jesus. They lingered in Jerusalem until persecution scattered them. Years after, Peter was still so bound by Jewish bigotry that he needed a miracle and an angel's visit to loose his bonds, and then, as though he had found a new revelation in the house of Cornelius, he said: "I perceive that God is no respecter of persons." Within a century, within the lifetime of our honored father here (Dr. Lovick Pierce), in a Baptist ministers' convention, in which the great Dr. Ryland presided, the discussion flagged a little, and the young men were invited to propose subjects for discussion. William Carey said: "Mr. Chairman, I propose this question, 'The duty of the Christian Church to evangelize the heathen world.'" Dr. Ryland said, "Sit down, young man, sit down; when God gets ready to convert the heathen, he will do it without your help or mine." And that within the past century. God hid the truth on this subject in the hearts of Dr. Coke and John Wesley, Judson, Carey and others. We see the fruits.

I will [illegible] to one more doctrine—the witness of the Spirit. God has given Methodism the honor of making millions of men understand it. This was almost a dead letter in God's holy book when John Wesley arose. Yet the teaching lay plainly on the very surface of the Bible. Enoch "had his testimony, that he pleased God." David had his feet taken out of a horrible pit and out of the miry clay," and a new song put into his mouth. Paul and Peter and John told the same blessed story. Yet I doubt if a thousand men in all England could have said that they knew their sins forgiven one hundred and fifty years ago. But after fifteen years' such service of God as has rarely been equaled, John Wesley became consciously a son of God. While listening one evening, in a Moravian meeting, to the reading of one of Luther's commentaries, he felt his heart "strangely warmed;" and then he knew, and was able to teach the meaning of that inspired declaration, "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." The glorious doctrine of the witness of the Spirit was incarnated in him, and revealed through him to millions more. In that hour Methodism was born. [Applause.] But for that strange warming of Wesley's heart we would not be here to-day.

Thus have I hinted at the special reasons we have as Methodists for striking glad hands in fraternal greetings. If we were less nearly akin we should still be drawn together in Christian charity by the bond which touches every member of the body of Christ.

Every Christian in the world is tugging at the heart-strings of every other Christian, whether he knows it or not.

If we have Christ's image, we must love that image everywhere. Wesley is drawn to Fenelon and Thomas-a-Kempis. The highest and thickest walls cannot keep out love any more than they can bar out gravitation. Let the relationship be a little closer, like that between the various evangelical churches in this land, and you witness such scenes as adorned this goodly city a few weeks ago, when Christians from all parts of the United States and Canada met in the International Sunday-school Convention and presided over by the honored and excellent Methodist Governor of this eminently Methodist State of Georgia, [applause,] who never thought of each other as Presbyterians, or Methodists, or Baptists, but as one in Christ Jesus—"fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God." [Applause.]

Let the kinship be still closer; let millions of Christians have the same type of belief, polity, experience; let them rejoice in a common history and that unique, heroic, sublime; and yet let it occur that a sharp wedge of separation rends them asunder, and that alienation and estrangement succeed; if the spirit of Christ abide in both parts of the dismembered body there must be regret, sorrow, longing, yearning, and at last an all-conquering and resistless tide of Christian love. The closeness of the kinship and the felt necessity of a real reconciliation may require a degree of hesitation and time for the full consideration of all difficulties in order that they may be put aside forever. [Applause.]

I confess to a sincere respect for the reserve with which you met our early advances. When, in 1869, our bishops proposed steps looking toward organic union, yours replied thus:

"Permit us to say in regard to reunion that in our opinion there is another subject to be considered before that can be entertained, and necessarily in order to it—we mean the establishment of fraternal feelings and relations between the two Churches. They must be one in spirit before they can be one in organization. Concord must be achieved before any real union. Heart divisions must be cured before corporate divisions can be healed."

The next year Bishop Janes and Dr. (now bishop) Harris appeared by appointment before your General Conference, and were very kindly received. After considering their communication, you adopted resolutions, the first of which declared, "We earnestly desire to cultivate true Christian fellowship with every other branch of the Christian Church, and especially with our brethren of the several branches of Methodism in this country and Europe," and the last, "We express our sincere desire that the day may soon come when proper Christian sentiments and fraternal relations between the two great branches of Northern and Southern Methodism shall be permanently established."

Four years ago you thrilled our whole Church with delight by your genuinely cordial reception of our fraternal delegation. But then, justly recognizing the difficulties in the way of complete and lasting fraternity, you appointed a commission, to meet a like one from us, to remove those difficulties, and a fraternal delegation to inform us of this action, and bring us your Christian salutations. Only one man was thought of to be first named on that delegation, the venerable and honored patriarch of this Convention. [Applause.]

When the time came, to our deep regret, he was detained by illness, but he sent us his address, and among his wise and loving words we found the following: "We do not believe that these difficulties ought ever to be discussed in either General Conference at large. They are delicate, sensitive things, never to be settled by chafing speeches, but, as we believe, can be speedily prayed and talked to death by a joint board of discreet brethren, intent upon Christian peace." [Applause.]

Such a "joint board" was appointed, the terms of their appointment, being, in your words, which our General Conference also adopted, "in order to remove all obstacles to formal fraternity between the two Churches, and to adjust all existing difficulties." Could they do this work? Or would their conference only reveal insuperable obstacles to fraternity? How could Gen. Vance and Gen. Fisk agree? How could Dr. Myers and Dr. Fuller sign the same report, for had not both written books on the subject? [Laughter.] They reached Cape May. Before they met there was a cannonade of frank and loving letters. At their first meeting they adopted this resolution:

"In view of the greatness of the responsibility imposed upon us, and in view of our utter dependence upon Divine guidance in a matter of so much importance, a half hour shall be spent in earnest prayer at the commencement of each daily session of the Commission."

That was hopeful, for God is "a very present help in trouble." The impossible became actual. Our commissioners declared this great Church an "evangelical Church reared on Scriptural foundations" and "a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States." Both commissions unanimously agreed to the "declaration and basis of fraternity" founded on this statement. Five hands seized five other hands; ten hearts melted and flowed together; ten voices sang:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above;"

while angels bent to listen, and the Divine Redeemer looked down with a benignant smile on that scene so germane to the very genius of the Gospel he had died to found. [Great applause.] When the action of the Joint Commission reached me I was on a long and wearisome journey. I picked up a secular paper and found the report complete. I devoured it with tears of gratitude, and at the close I said aloud to myself, "It is an inspiration of the Holy Ghost." To this day, sir, I have not once swerved from that conviction.

Some minor points of difficulty may yet remain, but the Malakoff has fallen. We can "love as brethren," "with pure hearts fervently." In that spirit we can confer. Let there be no strife between us anywhere, and no emulation save the holy emulation to help each other in our common work for our one Lord.

Let us fervently send up from all our borders the united prayer which inspiration has prepared for us, "May the Lord of peace himself give us peace always by all means!" O, that that "perfect love" to God and man, which it was the chief glory of Wesley and of Methodism so to emphasize as to enable the world to understand it better than ever before, may have abiding exemplification in the relations existing between the two great branches of Episcopal Methodism! [Applause.]

As for organic union, I for one, sir, am not anxious about that. Discreet and zealous lovers are likely to know when the time for marriage has come; and long courtships are sometimes judicious. [Laughter.] A real, if not a formal union of each great family of denominations must precede that manifest unity of the Church which was the great burden of the departing Savior's prayer. And the spirit of such union is all abroad among the Churches. There have recently been Pan-Anglican and Pan-Presbyterian councils. Shall there not be a pan-Methodist council [applause] in which delegates from the South and North, from England and America, from every continent and almost every island shall confer together? [Amens.] It might be chiefly a love-feast, but it would be none the less Methodistic and none the less Christian for that. Either that or something better, devised by love, must come to pass; for Jesus' prayer was a prophecy, "that they all may be one, even as we are one, that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me." [Dr. Pierce—"Glory to God!"]

Mr. President, it has cost me an effort to delay so long as this to refer to the sore bereavements of your Zion and ours. I could hardly refrain at the beginning, but I could not trust myself then to pronounce two names which have ceased to be written in the lists of your effective ministers on earth, and have been transferred as worthy to be called on another roll for grander work in God's upper kingdom.

Who of the two thousand who heard, or of the hundreds of thousands who read the clear, candid, masterful, eloquent plea for fraternity, which fell upon our ears in Baltimore, two years ago, will ever forget the silver-tongued Duncan? But, alas, too soon, that tongue is silent.

And then, we cannot forget the clear-headed, discreet, loving Myers, first named by you as one of your most trusted representatives, and appointed to a most delicate and difficult duty. He hoped, after finishing the grandest work of his life, to go Northward and spend a few weeks in Christian fellowship with new friends who would have so counted it a great pleasure to extend their hands to him in warmest welcome.

Just then there fell on his ear the call of duty—the highest call to a true pastor—for in his beloved city of Savannah the Yellow Fever had begun its ravages. I must tell you the story as it stands on the last page of this pamphlet, which is our permanent record of the steps toward that complete fraternity in which these two "reconciled Churches" rejoice to-day. Our Commissioners say this of him: "Fraternity was with him a passion. We think we cannot be mistaken, and that we do no injustice to any member of either Commission, when we declare that to Dr. Myers, more than to any other one of our number, is due the unanimity of our conclusions. We know that he regarded his appointment the greatest honor, and his share in our success the greatest achievement of his life."

When the tidings of plague and death reached him he calmly said, "I must go home to my flock," and set off without the delay of a day.

When his brethren of the Commission asked him, "Will you not come back North in the Autumn and let our brethren see you?" he said, "God only knows what I am going to, whether life or death. If I live, you will see me again; but if not, we shall meet above. Good-bye."

After a few days labor in that region of death, he fell—as may you and I fall—at his post.

Let me refer to one other name most cherished among us. No man was more intent on fraternity than Bishop Janes. None had a clearer head or a warmer heart. He, like the brethren I have just named, fell a plumed warrior on the field of battle with the ensigns of victory all around him. Amid great anguish of body, which rarely softened into moderate pain, when asked about his outlook for the future world, he answered with his accustomed reserve, which gave his words a wondrous depth of meaning, "I am not disappointed!" And then he went up to his rest.

Now, brethren, it may seem almost strange that after referring to our precious departed, I should mention any living man, but it is not strange and needs no explanation to you. I must tell you in just one word what a thrill of joy fills my heart because of the survival and presence of the grand old patriarch of this General Conference. He belongs to us as well as to you. [Applause.] I would not, sir, for a thousand miles of travel have missed the opportunity I enjoyed yesterday of hearing from this great and good man his plea for the precious doctrine of perfect love—a plea conceived on the instant, with a force of logic, of eloquence and of imagination, and uttered with a vigor of voice and manner, better befitting three-score than nearly five-score years—a plea (proved masterful by its effect upon your vote) for the restoration to your book of Discipline of that form of words, which more than any other, proclaims our sense of the value of one of the brightest jewels in the casket of Methodism, "Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life?" [Applause.]

My earnest prayer is that God will preserve the life of this honored representative of American Methodism until in still extremer age, when no longer able to stand up in your Church councils and speak words of wisdom, he may at least linger like St. John at Ephesus, and stand up in the assemblies of the saints, and stretching out his thin hands over the congregation, say, "Little children, love one another." [Great applause.]

My dear and honored father, [to Dr. Lovick Pierce,] I bring you the special greetings of the church I represent. I earnestly pray that God may give you a serene and brilliant sunset, and an abundant entrance into supernal glory. [Great applause and long continued.]

Bold Crime.

We are often shocked at the sudden commission of some great crime where one least looked for it. Life seems to have no value in the mind of many. Is there any way of accounting for this morbid state of society—these repeated murders and daily suicides?

Nothing has such a value as human life in the eye of law. Yet a man goes to a shop, makes purchase of a pistol, goes into a public hotel or the street, awaits the approach of his unsuspecting victim, takes deadly aim, shoots deliberately twice or thrice, sees his victim fall, and walks coolly away. He does this when he knows that the penalty of the crime he has the hardihood to commit is death on the gallows.

We must infer that behind all of these ontward acts of violence there is a morbidness in society which is fearful to consider. The judgement and the conscience are warped. Men are not true to their own instincts, nor their own interests. They seem to be given over to hardness of heart and reprobacy of mind. We are persuaded that at the basis of all these crimes which startle society is to be found a simple disbelief in the teachings of the Bible, and especially on all questions of social life. The Bible lays down a specific law concerning marriage, for example. But do we not know that men almost wholly disregard it? Legislatures enact laws which contravene the teachings of Jesus. Courts grant divorces on the most trivial pretexts. To-day a man and woman meet and make the most solemn covenant in the presence of God and men, to-morrow they trample that covenant under their feet without a sign of remorse, and plead in their justification the decision of some human court; thus putting the decree of any mere man up against the laws of the Almighty God. On this whole question society is loose. The marital relation is scarcely deemed binding in the world's society, and ever and anon foul murder in one way or another comes of it.

Polygamy, in this way or that, whether in Utah or out of it, is not only unscriptural but it violates nature, and from it the heart turns instinctively. Its existence strikes a blow at the very foundation of society. Let the customs of many, in the larger cities especially, become universal and who would care to live. In every age and in every land these vices have cursed men, and whole cities have been sunk and empires been laid waste by the action of these evils.

There is in the waters of the ocean a little insect called the "Teredo," a minute, insignificant bival shell-fish. As it lies before us on the rock or [illegible] it seems a very harmless thing. Yet that little insect has been the [illegible] of nations. Burrowing its way into every kind of timber, it sinks navies; it riddles landing piers into [illegible]. At one time all Europe believed that the United Provinces were [illegible] to final destruction by the [illegible] "teredo;" that God had sent it [illegible] the growing arrogance of [illegible] Hollanders by destroying the [illegible] her embankments. The ad[illegible] of one single wrong princi[illegible] life, or into the life of [illegible] the "teredo" which will [illegible] eat out the vital principle [illegible] future good depends. [illegible] fathers" are talking about [illegible] "Social Evil," and are these [illegible] now for the first time [illegible] of? Yes, we say, up[illegible] corner; drive out the [illegible] let men do right and a [illegible] will come to us all. Let [illegible] Sabbath worthy the name [illegible] holiday. The future de[illegible] present. This genera[illegible] foundations on which [illegible] must build. Shall they [illegible] or approve us is the ques[illegible]

"[illegible] is Mine."

[illegible] of William [illegible] Jail, New [illegible] was indeed a [illegible] name of Tweed [illegible] synonym [illegible]. That [illegible] in [illegible] the [illegible] aims [illegible] society [illegible] work [illegible] his crimes will in the end become known to the world. Man's secret hidings will be revealed. His vices will be revealed to the light of open day, for sin has in it the element of its own detection.

The Bible speaks of a Judgment Day, a day of settlement; when that will be not even the angels do know, but the fact is most distinctly stated. It may be a good way off, doubtless is, but then it will come; and we think no one can disprove it. You may say no such day will come in your opinion, that it is unreasonable to suppose it, but we wish to submit the question to any man: can you prove there will be no such judgment time? That would indeed be a most difficult thing to demonstrate.

We live in a world of law; there is law in everything—eating, sleeping, walking, talking; society has its laws; there is a law of business, a law of education, laws of body, soul, mind, right and wrong.

Now, judgment is of two kinds: that which compares, weighs, examines and decides on the merits of any question; and that which gives an expression of decision, that which applauds the right and condemns the wrong.

That which is true and good in human life brings pleasure and peace to the soul; that which is evil, base in human act or thought, gives pain instead of pleasure to the soul. Some men can endure more than others in the sinful extravagances of life. A man drinks and says it does not hurt him, he does not feel any ill consequence at the time, but, then, he is violating laws, and law has its penalty, and he will feel it sooner or later. A man may use his brain too severely, overstrain his powers; for awhile he feels no ill consequences, but in time the brain gives way, and down goes the whole man with a crash. There is a grand law of right active in the universe, and the violations of this law are constantly productive of evil to mankind. On the other hand implicit obedience to the laws of right would take away the ills which afflict the heart and so often becloud the society of mankind.

The times in which we live have been singularly marked by a disregard of moral principle. We do not mean by this that there is no virtue or honesty in the world, there never was more; but at the same time wicked, worldly men never were so defiant of God, vice has never been so malignant, it seems, as now.

The Greeks personified the idea of retributive justice in their goddess Nemesis. They represented her as lame and halting, but they gave her wings as well. She might be slow in her steps but she could be swift as an eagle in her descent upon her prey.

God will purge society in some way. He will make one man the instrumentality of punishing another. He will show to people in high life as well as in low life that crimes offend him, and law must be vindicated.

"Sentence against an evil work may not be executed speedily," but the "great day of His wrath" will come, and "who shall be able to stand?" "Vengeance is mine and I will repay, saith the Lord."

The Contest.

Human Society may be regarded as a great battle field in which the contestants are light and darkness—good and evil. Which shall win in the end? The believer in the gospel may ask this question, but only to answer it himself. Right must win—truth must triumph. It may not be in our day but it will in the great day of God be victorious.

At the time when Moses stood before the monarch of Egypt to convince all by his miracles that God had sent him to deliver his people, the magicians, through some kind of power were able to dispute the miracle working power with him. Satan did turn counterfeiter and produce in the presence of Moses astonishing works. Satan showed his power then.

When Jesus was on earth preaching, and healing, and raising the dead, Satan became, in a sense, incarnate, and everywhere men were "filled with devils." When the Spirit of God is poured out, and people begin to turn to God, Satan begins to put forth special effort. He fears the fate of his kingdom, and holds his revivals in the saloons to watch those which Christ's servants hold in the churches. Now as we look over the world at the present day and see how sin pol[illegible] men we are not in any way [illegible]. Moses' rod became a [illegible] and swallowed up the rods [illegible] magicians. Demoniac spir[illegible] possession of men in the [illegible] but Jesus "cast out [illegible] both Moses and [illegible] and so the [illegible] Jesus is [illegible] victory. [illegible] is [illegible] for that purpose. Consider the mighty energy of the religious press, scattering religious papers, books, magazines and tracts, like leaves of autumn, in all languages, everywhere. Take note of the great missionary movements of the times. See how the spirit of self sacrifice leads men and women to endure the hardships of "distant barbarous climes," with no motive which can explain their heroism but the motive of love—love to God, love to man.

Surely the friends of Jesus have cause of rejoicing. Far above the smoke of battle the flag floats and the cross is the heraldic sign of the nations. Let us not only "hold the fort," but move on the enemy's works with increased determination not to lay down our weapons until we hear the great Captain say, "'Tis enough. Come up higher."

The Love of Money.

Money, when properly earned, or lawfully inherited, and then wisely used, is a great blessing; but when illy gotten and illy used is an equally great curse. The Savior does not condemn mere riches, save where the love of riches drives out the love of God from the heart. A man may be rich in a Scriptural sense who owns nothing, or he may be poor who owns millions—for riches is something of the heart rather than the pocket. It sometimes seems to us that there is only one question in what the world calls society at the present day, and that query is, "How can I get money?" Will it pay? Not will it pay in the end in development of character, in soul rest? but will it pay now in dollars and cents? How much can I get? Men wear broadcloth or rags, just as they can make the most money, and for money often go and hear preaching. We sing for money and pray for money. Money tires our limbs and puts out our eyes. If we can only pile up fortunes we are willing to take all chances for the future. Many succeed in getting money. Some get more, others less, but nearly all get some. Society is a grab-game on a continental scale, and prompts to crimes which make the cheek tingle with shame for all civilization. The motto of a good many is that of the dying miser to his son: "My son," said the man, "I charge you to get money, if you can honestly; but if you can't honestly, why get it any way, for it is a terrible thing to be poor." Money must be bad in some way, for it opens the door to lace curtains, rich tapestry, silver and silk. Money is the key that unlocks this door. Happily the best portion of the world often lacks the amount necessary to gain admittance, so they grow up poor but pure, humble but honest. Men want money to give their children when they die, as if eager to accelerate their steps toward the pit. No fact is better established than that young men who begin where their fathers leave off usually leave off where their fathers began—poor and generally with bad health and worse morals. It will be better for your children if they are left to carve out their own fortunes. America's great men have nearly all been the sons of poor parents.

For the past few years the very foundations of the financial world have been shaken. God cares for us and is teaching us by these financial upheavals not to put our dependence wholly on money. Get money honorably, not fraudulently nor greedily. Use it for good and holy purposes. Let us adopt the maxim of John Wesley, "Make all you can, save all you can, and give all you can."

Principles.

Take your watch to pieces and mar just one cog in one of the wheels and the consequence will be that you will have a watch only in appearance. Wrong principles admitted into one's life or into society prove its destruction.

A gentleman stood one day in one of the large Michigan saw-mills witnessing the operation of converting logs into boards, and remarked to a by-stander, "This firm will fail inside of three years." "Why?" said the by-stander. "Because," answered he, "the saws are set too wide by an eighth of an inch. They are wasting timber." And fail they did. They were doing business with a wrong principle. It was a teredo at work undermining the mill.

A young man applied for a situation at a bank and was refused. He walked out disappointed and somewhat sorrowful, but when crossing the street he saw a pin lying on the ground. He picked it up, cleaned it off, and put it in his coat collar. The banker from his window saw [illegible] called him back, gave him a [illegible] and he became rich and great. He acted on a correct principle.

The sawdust ruined a lumbering firm and a pin made a poor boy a rich man. The element of truth in every man's life is important, and it is equally so in society. O, if men were only true to themselves, if they were to act on those principles which have been tested by the ages how soon would this world be transformed over into a paradise again!

Law and penalty are correlated in the affairs of this world. Fire is a blessing, but still it will harm you on certain conditions. Put your hand into the flame and it will be burned, but do not blame God with it. The burn is the penalty you pay for the violation of law you should learn by experience.

So there is a law of society. It is embodied in the word of God, and confirmed by the experience of the ages. The Sabbath is based on a divine law. Men may for a time do violence to its sacredness, and everything seem to go on well, and they say where is your penalty? A wealthy tea merchant once in defiance of the law of the Christian Sabbath sent a number of his vessels to China for tea, being careful to start each one on the Sabbath day. What do you suppose became of those vessels? Went down to the bottom every one of them on their return voyage? Not a bit of it. They all came in safely, with splendid cargoes. But then reverse followed reverse, and the rich tea merchant died a pauper in an almshouse.

God is in no haste to deal with men. Let us remember the old German saying:

> "The mills of God grind slow
> But they grind exceedingly fine."

Men may be libertines of the worst order; they may trample under their feet things sacred and divine, and they may become famous, and handle millions, and be courted, but then the day of retribution will come in this world or the next—it often comes in this.

There is scarcely a more needy and promising field for missionary work anywhere than among the Aztec Indian population of Mexico. Bro. Dees writes from Puebla, Mexico, May 2, saying: "One word about the work on this charge. I find continually opening new opportunities among the Indian towns where by a trifling expense in making occasional visits, I can encourage the feeble beginnings and bind the people to our work. As some unforeseen obstacles have delayed up to this time the formal beginning of our work in Los Reyes, I have used a few dollars of that appriation in making one or two visits these new places. They manifest a very encouraging disposition to help themselves and only ask preaching. They will never be any considerable expense to the missionary society and promise rich and enduring results. The places I have visited thus far are Apizaco, on the railroad, and Atzala, an Indian village some distance south of this city. In Puebla our congregation and the religious interests are well sustained, our school has increased so rapidly that the accomodations are too limited for it."

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, has made only one or two slight changes, as yet, in the Discipline. Many have been proposed, but voted down. The indications now are that but few changes will be made at all and no material changes. The Conference, contrary to the expectations of nearly everybody has decided not to elect any bishops at its present session. Some slight changes have been made in some of the Conference boundaries. The committee, to whom was referred the Ecumenical Conference question, reported in favor of holding the Ecumenical Conference and pledging the Conference to co-operate with the Methodist Episcopal Church in their plans. The report was unanimously adopted. A resolution to celebrate the one-hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Methodist Church in America was also adopted. The resolution requests the co-operation of the Methodist Episcopal Church in this centennial celebration. It is to take place in Baltimore, Maryland, December 25th, 1884.

"Children's Day."

The attention of all our patrons and Sunday-school Superintendents is called to section 247, paragraph 5, page 154, of the Discipline, which reads as follows:

"It is recommended that the second Sunday in June be everywhere observed as 'Children's Day,' and that wherever practicable a collection be taken in the Sunday-school in aid of the Sunday-school Fund of the Board of Education."

Now, brethren, this ought not to be a dead letter. The Board of Education has disbursed within a year $7,495.00 among over one hundred students in thirty institutions of learning. The students have received on an average about $75, none more than $100. All who receive help are recommended as needy and deserving, by their pastor and Sunday-school Superintendent, and also promise to endeavor, after they enter upon their life-work, to return the money to the treasury. Just how much was contributed by Sunday-schools during the year I cannot report, as in some cases the money is forwarded by Conferences to the Book Concern, and I have not the names of the donors. Only 56 Sunday-schools have sent any money directly to me within a year from this date, and these were from 29 Conferences. The average amount contributed by a school was about $6. We do not "despise the day of small things." Let every Sunday-school do something, if it is only to the amount of a dollar. Let the pastor and Superintendent explain to the school the wants of many of our young people who are striving to obtain an education to do good as ministers and missionaries and teachers, and ask for their offerings.

Every Conference that sends to the Board of Education its collections will receive more money than it sends to us—if there are needy and worthy students within the bounds of the Conference.

In this way, too, our schools can be efficiently helped.

If for any reason the second Sunday in June is otherwise occupied, let the next Sabbath be selected. Some of the Sunday-schools make special provision for the day, and hold an educational meeting, and greatly increase the interest of the school in thorough religious education.

Remember the "Children's Day."

Should all the Sunday-schools contribute to the Board, all our institutions of learning will feel the effect, and many worthy and needy young men and women will receive great encouragement in preparing themselves for more efficient service for Christ and the church.

Central Tennessee College.

REPORT OF THE VISITING COMMITTEE.

Having been appointed a Visiting Committee by our several Conferences, we have been in attendance at the examinations. Some of the Committee have been attending their annual meetings for almost a decade; also during the present scholastic year some of our number have been visiting the college, and have witnessed the workings of the Institution.

We are happy in expressing our pleasure in noticing the increased number in attendance, and the better discipline and more thorough scholarship of the students as manifest in the development of the power of thought. As the result of this development, the Institution has crystallized more fully into the college character.

The examinations have been impartial, thorough and satisfactory—doing honour to the Institution. We are exceedingly gratified with the success of the Medical Department and rejoice that three young men were able to graduate with great credit to themselves and their department.

The Theological Department has done its work well, and is furnishing the church able, earnest defenders of the truth. In fact, each department has received proper attention, and speaks to the praise of those in charge.

No part of the exercises were more delightful than the musical exercises, both vocal and instrumental.

It is with pleasure that we note the spiritual condition of the college. Scores of students have found Jesus in the pardon of their sins. The religious services—preaching, prayer and class-meetings are seasons of joy, and their influence must tell upon the future of the students. We would not forget the excellent Sabbath-school and the College Hill Temperance and Anti-tobacco Society.

We rejoice that the Central Tennessee College offers to the public a safe Christian home for young ladies and gentlemen.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. E. Provine, North Lebanon Circuit, Tenn., reports that there have been a number of accessions to his church during the year, and that the work is in good condition.

Rev. James Pickett, Lebanon, Tenn.: "At a meeting just closed seven persons professed faith in Christ and nine were baptized and brought into the church. We had the kind assistance during the meeting of several of our brethren in the ministry."

Rev. L. J. Terrell, Houston, Miss.: "We have four appointments on this work, but one church building. There have been three recent accessions to the church, and a more hopeful feeling prevails among the people than for some time past. There are 143 scholars in the Sunday-schools on the circuit."

Rev. J. W. Hilton, Fairfield, La.: "A meeting has been in progress for two weeks in which there have been thirteen conversions. Substantial improvements are being made in our church building. We have raised for this purpose during the past three months $115.00—considering the times this is truly encouraging. We praise the Lord for his blessings."

Rev. Smith Pratt, Jefferson, Texas: "We have just closed a protracted meeting which was continued through seven weeks. There were nineteen conversions and were thirty added to the church. The meetings were largely attended throughout and closed with our quarterly services, which were a time of spiritual refreshing to the multitude attending them. Eighteen persons were baptized. The cause of the Master is on the winning side."

Rev. P. Blue, Oxford, Miss.: "The Lord is still gracious to his Zion here. Since conference there have been ten conversions and thirty-one accessions to the church. On last Sabbath our time was well taken up. We attended Sunday-school at 9 a.m., preached a funeral sermon at 11, attended a burial at 12, a baptizing at 3 p.m., married a couple (Mr. Harrison Stearns and Mrs. Parthena O'Neal) at 8, and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper at 9 o'clock."

F. S. Legardy, Sunday-school Superintendent, Shreveport, La.: "A meeting has been in progress for past three weeks in our church, St. James Chapel, of which Rev. H. T. Abbott is pastor. During that time there have been twenty-seven received in full connection, and thirty-nine on probation. The Sunday-school has ninety members with a regular attendance of seventy-five. We have all grades of classes from infants to some of the oldest members of the church. Some of the oldest people take a deep interest, and are learning rapidly. One of the sisters who is fifty-five years old, while listening to a very little child reading some weeks ago determined that she too would learn to read her Bible and hymn-book. She did not then know the alphabet, but she went to work with a will and now she can read her precious books, and she seems to be the happiest scholar in the school. We also have a Bible-class in the afternoon, after church. It is well attended and is doing good."

General Religious Items.

The next International Sunday-school Convention will be held at Toronto in 1881.

Chicago is a Lutheran city. In it there are twenty-nine Lutheran churches, of which one is Dutch, one English, seventeen are German and the rest Norwegian and Swedish.

The Congregational church at Raleigh, N. C., received twenty-two to membership at the April communion. This church was organized in 1874, and has grown from eleven to seventy-two members.

The Presbyterian general assembly in session at Pittsburg, Pa., performed the ceremony of unveiling a memorial tablet in the vestibule of the church designed to commemorate the union of the new and old school assemblies, which was effected in the same building in November 1869.

One or two new M. E. churches will be built in Washington, D. C., this year; and the patrons of the Foundry church are making their arrangements to pay off the debt on that church at a very early period. At an official meeting lately nearly one half of the whole debt, which is about $30,000, was subscribed.

The Wesleyan mission to the Friendly Islands, in the South Pacific, instead of being a charge to the Society, now contributes from $5,000 to $10,000 a year to its treasury: a larger sum of money, says The Christian, than had probably been seen in the entire group before the introduction of Christianity.

The Philadelphia Annual Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, at its session on the 13th inst., adopted a resolution strongly condemning the contemplated exodus of the colored people of Africa. The resolution expresses "an unqualified disapprobation of anything like an organized effort to expatriate them from the country dear to the African race by every memory of their lives."

The Reformed Episcopal church in England is now established in 13 dioceses of the church of England. A few weeks ago Bishop John Sugden, of the Free church of England, gave in his adhesion to the new church, and together with Bishop Gregg heads the movement in England. In the session of the General Council at Newark fully 100 parishes were represented, and from 90 to 100 clergymen. The church has at present six Bishops and 100 clergymen, of whom about 85 are Presbyters or Elders, the remainder being Deacons. Its adherents are numbered at about 50,000.

There were no funeral services over the remains of her children, and she has recently taken measures to have them brought North for interment. Funeral services were held, in commemoration of their massacre, on Sunday, the 18th inst, at the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Washington, by the pastor. Rev. Dr. H. R. LONDON, May 25.—The military situation is hourly becoming more critical. The Russian lines are again drawn more closely around Constantinople.

CINCINNATI, May 24.—Government officials seized one of the largest whisky houses in the West, in this city yesterday. NEW YORK, May 24.—The Republicans in the House of Representatives are preparing lists of witnesses to be summoned in virtue of the resolution making the Potter investigation general, which was passed by the House on Wednesday. The committee will be asked to summon senders and receivers of dispatches relating to frauds and attempted bribery in Oregon and Florida, and other cases of alleged frauds mentioned in the resolution.

ATLANTA, May 24.—Gov. Colquitt closed his inspection of the Kate Southern case yesterday by commuting the death sentence to ten years in the penitentiary. He says he acted purely on the law and evidence, and left out of consideration the fact that she was a woman. His decision creates great rejoicing. No similar case ever created such excitement as this one. The many friends of Mrs. Southern will insist on a full pardon, or will go before the Governor again, or will try the Legislature.

PANAMA, May 24.—The contract for the opening of an inter-oceanic ship canal across the Columbian territory was signed at Bogoto on the twenty-third of March last. The concession of the contract is for ninety-nine years, at the expiration of which time the canal, with all appurtenances, is to be conceded to the Columbian government. The stipulated time for constructing is twelve years from the time of the organization of the company. The canal must have the length, depth and all other conditions necessary, in order that sailing vessels and steamers 140 metres long, a maximum beam of sixteen metres, and drawing eight metres of water, shall, with lowered topmast, be able to pass.

MADISON, Wis., May 25.—Further reports from the scene of the recent cyclone this morning are heart-rending in the extreme. Whole farms are laid waste and entire families killed. At least twenty-five persons are known to be killed and twice as many more seriously injured in this county alone. The storm commenced south or southwest of Mineral Point, going across the State in an east or northeast direction, and expending its force near Waukesha and Milwaukee. While Mineral Point and Fort Atkinson suffered seriously, this county suffered a far greater loss of life and property. The dire effects of the storm were greatest from Primrose, in the southwest part of this county, to within six or eight miles of this city, where it seemed to rise and again approached the earth near Fort Atkinson. The storm, in passing through this county, was from a quarter to a half a mile in width, and mowed everything clean in its path. Nearly a quarter of a century ago, a storm of like nature passed through nearly the identical portion of the country. Gov. Pillsbury (Rep.), of Minnesota, believes it will be as futile in its results as it will be hurtful to the party that originated it.

Gov. Routt (Rep.) of Colorado, thinks the sentiment of this country opposed to it.

Gov. Gear (Rep.) of Iowa, is shocked at the idea of unseating Mr. Hayes and will sustain him to the last man, and the last dollar.

Gov. Garber (Rep.), of Nebraska, considers it merely a scheme to make political capital.

Gov. Irwin (Dem.), of California, is in favor of a searching inquiry, but does not consider the agitation of Hayes' title politic at this time.

Berlin, May 27.—Prince Bismarck has signed the invitations to the powers to attend the congress, which will most probably be convened June 11. [illegible]—DANIEL IN THE LION'S DEN.
SCRIPTURE.—Dan. 6: 14-28.
[illegible]—"My God hath sent his angel, and [illegible] the lions' mouths, that they [illegible] me."
[illegible]—The Victory of Faith.
[illegible] from Nat. S. S. Teacher.

[illegible]—Whether kingdoms [illegible] God takes care of his [illegible] last scene in the Babylonian [emp]ire, Daniel was invested [illegible] insignia of third [illegible] scene of the Medo-[illegible] we see him, again, [illegible] of its highest offices. [illegible]," say the men of the [illegible] the Scriptures speak [illegible] They say that "the [illegible] are ordered by [illegible] in his [illegible] that the ad[illegible] would be ut[illegible] to those who deem[illegible], offices [illegible] When he [illegible] doubt[illegible] and saw that [illegible] being [illegible] the rebel[illegible] they fixed [illegible] at him [illegible] "work." [illegible] they [illegible]! Im[illegible] another [illegible] tive of Ormuzd, and, was, therefore, divine. The two presidents and the princes set forth that they all had had a consultation together, and that it seemed desirable that such a decree should be made. The reasons advanced for this were, probably, that in the new kingdom he had received no divine homage, and that some such requirement was necessary to the firm establishment of his authority over the people. The suggestion at once commended itself to the king. His vanity was flattered. The bait was taken. He might have suspected something from their eagerness to have the decree immediately signed, so that it could not be recalled, were it not that he looked upon that as another indication of their loyal interest in himself! "Wherefore king Darius signed the writing and the decree."

When Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he behaved just as his enemies had given him the credit of supposing that he would. He paid no attention to it, but did just as he had been in the habit of doing—prayed in his chamber three times a day with his windows open towards Jerusalem.

The Decree (14, 15).—Our lesson, as it is meted out, opens just where the trap has been sprung. The king is caught by the unyielding character of his own decree. He is tortured by what he has done, but thinks that he has no power to undo it. The law was unchangeable on account of the fiction that the king was divine, and, therefore, could make no mistakes. The nineteenth century, however, has no right to look back in derision upon that, when only a short time ago, a college of Archbishops and Bishops solemnly declared that another mortal man was infallible!

The Den (16, 17).—At last the king gave up the contest. He felt compelled to give the order that consigned his most faithful servant to the den of lions. So Herod, though he was "exceeding sorry," yet "for his oath's sake," commanded the head of John the Baptist to be brought in a charger. Under similar compulsion, Pilate delivered Jesus to be crucified, and attempted to wash his hands of all guilt in doing it. How often by some such fancied obligations, are men led into the doing of positive evil!

The Deliverance (18, 23).—What a contrast there was in the lot of the king and of his servant that night! The king went to a palace while the servant was committed to a den. The king had dainty viands set before him—his minister had nothing at all to eat. The king retired to a soft couch—Daniel reclined upon the rough stones of the lions' lair. But whose lot was most to be envied? The king could not eat. He spent the night in fasting. His heart was with a his servant in that noisome den. He could not sleep. On his luxurious couch he tossed and tumbled in torturing wakefulness. How long the hours seemed before the morning dawned! What horrible sights he imagined were taking place in that fearful cave! He saw his beloved minister struggling in the clutch of the lions—he saw his venerable form under the paw of one of those cruel beasts of prey, his gray hair dabbled with his own blood—he could almost hear the crunching of the bones as they began their sacrilegious repast. All the possible sickening details, we may be sure, passed in vivid procession before the excited fancy of the wretched king. No wonder that at the first faint intimations of the coming day, the king arose and went in haste unto that den of lions. It was in a very "lamentable" voice in which the king spake and said: "O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?" The living God! That wretched night had, at least, taught the king a lesson in theology! In some way he had learned the fact that God was a living God, and not like the idols he had been in the habit of worshiping. Further, mark the testimony that the king gives to the character of Daniel's service—"whom thou servest continually." This is the second time that Darius speaks of that. It was a recognition on the part of the king that Daniel carried his religion into everything. The highest compliment which a Christian man can win from his neighbors is when they are compelled to testify that he serves God "continually."

But how had it been with Daniel [illegible] this memorable night? After [illegible] patron left him, still [illegible] company came to visit [illegible] of an angel is [illegible] of a king. [illegible] fering had been on the part of Darius!

There are four reasons given why Daniel was not hurt by the lions. 1. "My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths." 2. "Forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me." 3. "And, also, before thee, O king, have I done no hurt." 4. "Because he believed in his God." And here we come to the most active and powerful of all the reasons given. It was faith that stopped the mouths of those lions. Heb. ii: 33. The angel only carried out its behests. "And this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

COURSE OF STUDY
FOR Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ 89, §5 of the Discipline of 1876, the following has been prescribed as a Course of Study for Local Preachers:

III. SECOND YEAR.—The Bible—Doctrines. Wakefield's Theology—First Three Books. Christian Baptism.—Merrill.
To BE READ.—Scripture History—New Testament.—Smith's. History of the United States.—Ridpath. Ruter's Church History—1 vol., 8 vo.

IV. THIRD YEAR.—The Bible—Sacraments. Wakefield's Theology—Last Four Books. Christian Perfection—Wesley's Plain Account.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.
To BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

Dr. J. M. Howe's
Inhaling Tube!
AND
COMMON AIR WILL CURE
CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. BEERS, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.
Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. ADAMS, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. may2'78-tf

The Specter Ship.

There is a superstition among seamen that there is floating about the ocean the ghost of a ship, managed by a ghostly crew, whose appearance bodes disaster. A few years ago every old sailor would be ready to take his oath that he had personally, at one time or another, almost caught a glimpse of the Specter Ship, which, by-the-way, is generally known as the "Flying-Dutchman."

A friend of mine tells a long story of how near he once came to such an encounter. The upshot of the story is that he was a passenger on board a vessel engaged a little in running the blockade during the late civil war.

"One night," as he tells the story, "during a sudden storm, the man on the lookout shouted, 'A sail two points on our port bow!' The captain, as superstitious an old salt as ever trod a deck, seized his telescope and peered into the darkness, but could see nothing. He handed me the glass, saying, 'See if you can make her out.' I found that in his excitement, he had forgotten to uncap the instrument. I took off the cap, and, after giving a look said: 'I can see her plain enough.' 'Let me have another look,' he said. I slyly slipped on the cap, and the skipper of course, was as unsuccessful as before. 'I shall see her when my time comes,' he groaned. And his time was not long in coming. In a few minutes the strange vessel was visible to the naked eye; looking ghostly enough as the vivid flashes of lightning brought out her masts and rigging in strong relief against the black sky. 'I see her now?' said the captain; 'and I see ghosts, all in white, moving about on the decks. It's the Flying Dutchman, and we are all lost!' In a few moments we saw a spectral boat lowered, and half-a-dozen spectral figures, all clad in white, dropped noiselessly into it, and rowed toward us. 'Ship ahoy! Throw us a rope!' shouted a deep voice. In a moment a tall, white figure climbed up the side of our vessel. 'Who are you, and what do you want?' I asked; for, upon nearer view, the ghost assumed a very flesh-and-blood appearance, and the captain was too much frightened to speak. 'I am Lieutenant Smith, of the United States revenue cutter Dol[illegible],' replied the visitor, shaking the [illegible] from his white mackin[illegible]; 'and I want to see your papers. [illegible] I thought so,' he said, after a [illegible] glance at the documents; 'just the craft I was looking for. I am [illegible], captain, that I will have to [illegible] charge of your vessel.' "And that," said my friend, "was the nearest I ever came to seeing the Flying Dutchman; and as, to tell the truth, I had an interest in the blockade-running adventure, I would much rather it had been a specter ship than a revenue cutter."

"A new torpedo-boat," says the N. Y. Tribune, "originally designed by the late Lord Milton, who had [illegible] skill as a mechanic, has [illegible] under the notice of [illegible]. It is in[illegible] water by [illegible] of compressed air, and in [illegible] a huge fish. The Class-Leader.
His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo.......................................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make for the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical, and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

Are you suffering from ill-health in any of its many and multifarious forms, consequent upon a lingering, nervous, chronic or functional disease? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, fretful, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are you subject to loss of memory, have spells of fainting, fullness of blood in the head, feel listless, moping, unfit for business or pleasure, and subject to fits of melancholy? Are your kidneys, stomach, or blood, in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia or aches and pains? Have you been indiscreet in early years and find yourself harassed with a multitude of gloomy symptoms? Are you timid, nervous, and forgetful, and your mind continually dwelling on the subject? Have you lost confidence in yourself and energy for business pursuits? Are you subject to any of the following symptoms: Restless nights, broken sleep, nightmare, dreams, palpitation of the heart, bashfulness, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, pimples and blotches on the face and back, and other despondent symptoms? Thousands of young men, the middle aged, and even the old, suffer from nervous and physical debility. Thousands of females, too, are broken down in health and spirits from disorders peculiar to their sex, and who, from false modesty or neglect prolong their sufferings. Why, then, further neglect a subject so productive of health and happiness when there is at hand a means of restoration?

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale, in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, Mass., April 1, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell, "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

that you wring from your employer is clear gain.

Whatever business you follow aim to do it in the best possible manner. Every man must do something in this working world, and that something he should do in the very best style. It hurts a person to do anything poorly, while doing the very best he can, aiming at perfection itself, has a tendency to elevate the whole character. I repeat it, whatever your calling in life may be, endeavor to stand at the very head of it, become a master workman that needeth not to be ashamed. Twenty years ago I knew two young men in an academy, nearly equal in age and in natural endowment. One of them had fixed upon an important aim in life. He had resolved to get an education and enter upon a profession. Steady to his purpose, he presses onward toward the goal; that goal has been reached, reputation, influence and wealth have crowned his efforts. The other was ambitious of doing something great, but he hardly knew what. Now he would get an education, then he would be a merchant, then a speculator, now a lawyer, then a politician, and the last intelligence received from our friend was that he was lingering in daily expectation of receiving an appointment from an incoming administration.

But what is the real aim and business of life? Not merely "to eat, drink and be merry," not the mere pursuing of business occupations, however faithfully you may discharge them. There is something within each one's bosom vastly more precious than the glittering stars which stud the heavens, though every star were a priceless diamond. There is that within each of you, my young friends, employ it as you may, whether to honor or dishonor, which, when the [illegible] covered with sackcloth and [illegible] moon with blood, and when [illegible] shall feel God's purifying [illegible] only then begin its real existence—an existence of bliss [illegible] of anguish untold. [illegible] to think and hope [illegible] forever in the [illegible] of light. The chief end of [illegible] to [illegible] God and enjoy [illegible]. Your mission is to [illegible] and mind, ex[illegible] those strug[illegible] current of [illegible] your own [illegible] do your best to [illegible] young man, full [illegible] him in re[illegible] of [illegible]. He re[illegible] obtain [illegible] notice from [illegible]. Then dis[illegible] and makes [illegible] of Longfe[illegible] [illegible] man, to [illegible] abound [illegible]

But all is not gold that glitters. Much that appears on the surface beautiful, is deceptive and corrupt within. Whoever trusts to the fair appearances which this world presents is not far from the brink of ruin. Do not be too confident in your own opinions, formed from such slight and unreliable data. You have embraced beautiful theories, but a breath of common sense will scatter them to the winds. These theories have not been corrected by observation and experience, and are as foundationless as the baseless fabric of a vision. Never forget it is one of the easiest things in the world for the young to be mistaken. Consult the wise, men of age, experience and worth, for they have watched the young; they have seen one course of action lead to respectability, usefulness and happiness, and another to vice, wretchedness and an untimely end. Do not turn a deaf ear to the voice of instruction that comes down to you from persons older and wiser than you are. Avail yourselves of the wisdom and the experience of the past. To reject it is as preposterous as it would be for the learner to reject all knowledge of the sciences and arts, and thus be compelled to blunder along in the dark when the bright beams of science might blaze upon his pathway. Do not, I implore you, young men, pursue a course of life that every one ten years older than yourselves assures you will overwhelm you in ruin. Whoever launches his bark upon life's ocean without the counsel of the experienced pilot, may atone for his rashness by furnishing a monument of his folly which shall serve as a beacon light for the warning of successive generations. On a stormy night a skillful pilot offered his services to a Spanish vessel endeavoring to enter Portsmouth harbor, but he was repulsed by the rash commander, and now nine graves on the lonely Isle of Shoals utter a terrible warning against that reckless self-sufficiency which rejected the counsels of wisdom and experience.

Think it not unmanly, young man, to "hear instruction of your father, and forsake not the law of your mother." None cherish a deeper interest in your welfare than they: none would counsel you more lovingly and faithfully. The experience of the wise will throw a light forward upon your path, while your own experience comes too late. To use a simile of Coleridge, your own experience is a light in the stern of a vessel, which only shows the dangers which have been past, and not those which are ahead.

3d. I counsel you, young men, to avoid the perils that beset you. The present age is a perilous one, and numerous snares are laid to entrap the young and inexperienced. Danger lurks everywhere. There is no occupation or pursuit in life, no scene of toil, no bower of repose that is entirely free from it. Sometimes it presents itself in the form of unhallowed pleasure, sometimes it appeals to the passions, which, if unaccustomed to control, leap forth to grasp the proffered indulgence. Pleasures, sinful pleasures are cheapened, and beset the young in every direction. These streams flow abundantly, invitingly, deceitfully. Like the mirage in the desert, they are attractive but delusive. Open your eyes to your perils and you may thus escape them. No perils! It is the stratagem of the foe. Listen not to the lulling song. There are perils, and you cannot be too watchful to escape them. When it will be safe for the pilot to hoist sail and head the cliff, then may it do for the young to trifle with the warning of danger. 1st. Beware of bad associates. Every community is infested with a gang of base persons whose very [illegible] is contaminating. With all [illegible] they possess certain [illegible] redeeming traits, [illegible] the innocent [illegible] unsuspecting. Be especially [illegible] the selection of your as[illegible] their principles [illegible] their conduct. If you [illegible] loose in principle [illegible] in conduct, then shun [illegible] because [illegible] rapidly between [illegible] together upon [illegible] selection [illegible] and [illegible] you [illegible] not become vicious. 2nd. Avoid gambling. The argument against it is almost myriad-tongued. It involves a fearful waste of time. It affords no healthful exercise of body or mind. It literally kills time. It involves the loss of property. What one gains, the other loses—no increase of value is secured. No equivalent is given—none is received. The gainer seizes upon property upon which he has no lawful claim. How can the one who has lost his property, or the one who has swindled it from him go from the gaming table to the judgment? It is terribly disastrous upon the affections of the soul. The basest passions are strengthened and influenced. Envy rankles, jealousy is excited, anger rages in the gambler's breast. Shun every approach to it; do not play even for amusement, for if you do it is almost certain that you will soon hazard a little to give interest to the game, and when once the passion of gaming has taken possession of the soul, it will rule you with a tyrant's sway. Gambling is the forerunner to a host of vices, and he who begins to play for a sixpence may end in staking his soul on the giddy chances of the game, and may wreck at once both his temporal and eternal felicity.

3d. Shun the intoxicating cup. It is full of misery and death. It may not seem so fatal at first as it sparkles in the goblet, but at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. A friend once inquired of Dr. Johnson why he did not use wine? The Doctor replied, because I cannot use it moderately. No one is safe from its fatal effects who does not entirely abandon its use. There is fearful apprehension that the practice of moderate drinking is increasing among the colored people. It becomes us to raise the voice of warning. Let every friend of humanity do everything in his power to dissuade the young from the habitual use of that which will inevitably involve them in ruin. May God in mercy spare our people from the desolating scourge of intemperance. If you would be safe, young men, touch not, taste not, handle not the accursed thing.

4th. Avoid profanity. Reverence for the great and good, and especially for the Supreme Being, formerly characteristic of our youth, is scarcely known among us. Parents are treated as equals, teachers with contempt, God with irreverence, and those in authority are considered mere targets at which any one may shoot with perfect impunity. But this spirit of irreverence stops not here. It climbs up and lays violent hands upon the throne of the living God, and goes down to the regions of the damned, and gathers up the vocabulary of the lost, to grace the daily topics of conversation. It heaps insult upon the Redeemer, and strips all sanctity from themes which should be pondered only with the profoundest reverence. And still an evil so alarming, a sin so revolting and God-dishonoring, is prevalent among us. It may be heard from the lips of lisping childhood, of stalwart manhood, and of trembling age. Young men, avoid it, for it is not the mark of a gentleman, it will brand you with disgrace among men, and provoke the just judgments of an incensed God, "for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."

How does profanity benefit any one? Is it the mark of courage? Then the basest coward is courageous, for he will belch forth profanity like a burning volcano. Does it add to the graces of conversation? Then fine specimens of conversational power may be found in the low groggery and the brothel, for the inmates of such places point almost every sentence that they utter with horrid oaths. Does it add to the beauties of literature? Then our standard works should be enriched by these flashes of Rhetoric. No, no, the use of profanity in a literary production, no matter how meritorious it might be in other respects, would exclude the book from good society and consign it to infamy. Is it consistent to exclude from your homes the book disgraced by profanity while you welcome to the innocent circle lips and vocal powers steeped in this terrible vice.

[illegible] Avoid Sabbath breaking. The Sabbath is an oasis in this desert world. Around it cluster our fondest hopes and tenderest associations. Everything lovely and of good report is associated with the Sabbath. The Sabbath contributes most liberally to all that goes to constitute the prosperity and happiness peculiar to the land. The refreshing rest of the sacred day is imperatively demanded both by the body and the soul. And yet by many among us the sanctity of this holy time is trampled in the dust. Away from the influences of home you yield to solicitations to roam in the fields, to ride, to lounge at your boarding place on the Sabbath. I assure you, young man, that you cannot thus violate the Sabbath without exposing yourselves to the loss of character, and the favor of God. I am of the deliberate opinion that a Sabbath-breaker is peculiarly exposed to temporal losses and injuries, as well as to moral declension and ruin. How often has it been proved by the bitter experience of those who have declared themselves with their expiring breath ruined beyond all hope of redemption, wrecked for all eternity, that the forsaking of God's house was their first step in the downward road to perdition. Young men, your Sabbaths are the seed-time for eternity, and what can you expect, if you "sow to the wind," but that you should "reap the whirlwind." Select a regular place of worship, obtain a seat in the church, honor it with your presence every Sabbath, connect yourself with the Sunday-school, treasure up the instructions of the pulpit, and your profiting shall be visible to all, and the Sabbath thus spent shall become to you the choicest day of the seven. It will dawn upon you as one of the veritable days of heaven; its hours will prove as golden links, binding your souls more closely to duty, happiness and God; and you will see, with all the feelings with which you bid farewell to a friend, its tranquil sun setting behind the western mountains.

I have thus pointed out a few of the perils that beset your path; your patience will not allow longer detention under this head; I implore you to be on your guard against them; they approach stealthily and in disguise. To remit your opposition to these foes is to invite attack, and offer yourself an easy prey. In conclusion, young man, I counsel you to embrace the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, as the only reliable source of consolation and defence. I assure you, my young friends, that if you neglect religion, the only sure hope of a blessed immortality, all is lost. You lose restraining power and consolation in this life, you lose the only sure defence, for there is no other principle adequate to buttress the frail character of man against the fearful assaults of passion and vice. Frail humanity, worldly policy, or self-interest is too weak to resist such terrible shocks. Only the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, its rock-built faith, its unwavering hope grasping immortality, its boundless love stronger than death, its precious promises replete with life, its startling warnings, more terrific than the glare of hell, can so stir the soul, so purify the affections, so imbue the entire man with heavenly strength, as to enable him to triumph over the temptations of life, and come off a victor over death, hell and the grave. If you would live a pleasant and happy life, awaken in the minds of loved ones emotions of the most ending joy die in the triumphs of faith with glory in your soul and its accents quivering upon your lips, and beaming from your countenance; and would you be conducted from the shores of time to the cloudless realms of eternity by a convoy of angels, then embrace the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, live an humble follower of the meek and lovely One and your highest anticipations shall be more than realized; for eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him.

The Ritual of the Temple.

Every morning before the break of day the captain or chief officer of the Temple guard opened the door of the court, where the priests in residence for the week had slept for the night, and the procession often passed round the court in white robes and bare feet to kill the morning sacrifice. As the first rays of the rising sun struck upon the golden lamp above the porch, the trumpets sounded; and those of the priests who had drawn the lot entered the temple for the offering of incense. That was the moment, if any, for any preternatural visitation to the priests. Then they came out, and having slain the lamb on the altar, they pronounced the benediction, the only relic of the sacerdotal office which has continued in the Jewish Church to our own time. On greater days the solemnities were increased, but the general plan was the same, and it was this worship, with its sacrificial shambles, and its minute mechanism, that furnished the chief material for the theological discussions and ecclesiastical regulations of the Jewish Church of that period. The High Priest was still to be kept from falling asleep on the eve of the great feast, by pinching him and by reading to him what were thought to be the most exciting parts of the Bible. Five times over in the course of that day had he to take off and put on his eight articles of pontifical dress, and on each occasion, behind a curtain put up for the purpose between him and the people, he plunged into the great swimming bath, or pool, which, if he was old or infirm was heated for him. He then put on his gilded garments—goat's hair gilt—to penetrate into the innermost sanctuary and sprinkle the blood, like holy water round the pavement eight times, checking his movement like the officer who laid on stripes on an offender, by numbering them. When he came up he was thrice to utter the benediction, when all were hushed in deep stillness to catch the awful Name—which then only, in each year of an Israelite's life could be heard—pronounced in that silence so distinctly that, in the exaggerated Rabbinical traditions, its sound was believed to reach as far as Jerico * * * * The ceremony of the scape-goat still continued though it had all the appearance of a terrified ritual in its last stage of decadence. The creature was conveyed from the Temple to Olivet on a raised bridge to avoid the jeers of the irreverent pilgrims of Alexandria—who used to pluck the poor animal's long flakes of hair with the rude cries of "Get along and away with you!" Then it was handed on from keeper to keeper by short stages over hill and valley. At each hut where he rested an obsequious guide said to him, "Here is your food, here is your drink." The last in this strange succession led him to a precipice above the fortress of Dok, and hurled him down, and the signal was sent back to Jerusalem that the deed was accomplished by the waving of handkerchiefs all along the rocky road.—Dean Stanly.

Old Soup.

The following curious anecdote is from a book about elephants, written by a French gentleman, named Jacolliot, and we will let the author tell his own story:

In the Autumn of 1876 I was living in the interior of Bengal, and I went to spend Christmas with my friend Major Daly. The major's bungalow was out on the banks of the Ganges near Cawnpore. He had lived there a good many years, being chief of the quartermaster's department at that station, and had a great many natives, elephants, bullock-carts and soldiers under his command.

On the morning after my arrival, after a cup of early tea (often taken before daylight in India), I sat smoking with my friend in the verandah of his bungalow, looking out upon the windings of the sacred river. And, directly, I asked the major about his children (a boy and girl,) whom I had not yet seen, and begged to know when I should see them.

"Soupramany has taken them out fishing," said their father.

"Why, isn't Soopramany your great war elephant?" I cried.

"Exactly so. You can not have forgotten Soupramany!"

"Of course not. I was here, you know, when he had that fight with the elephant who went mad while loading a transport with bags of rice down yonder. I saw the mad elephant when he suddenly began to fling the rice into the river. His mahout tried to stop him, and he killed the mahout. The native sailors ran away to hide themselves, and the mad elephant, trumpeting, charged into this enclosure. Old Soupramany was here, and so were Jim and Bessy. When he saw the mad animal he threw himself between him and the children. The little ones and the nurses had just time to get into the house when the fight commenced."

"Yes," said the major, "Old Soup was a hundred years old. He had been trained to war, and to fight with the rhinoceros, but he was too old to hunt then."

"And yet," said I, becoming animated by the recollections of that day, "what a gallant fight it was! Do you remember how we all stood on this porch, and watched it, not daring to fire a shot lest we should hit old Soupramany? Do you remember, too, his look when he drew off after fighting an hour and a half, leaving his adversary dying in the dust, and walked straight to the 'corral,' shaking his great ears, which had been badly torn, with his head bruised and a great piece broken from one of his tusks?"

"Yes, indeed," said the major. "Well since then, he is more devoted to my dear little ones than ever. He takes them out whole days, and I am perfectly content to have them under his charge. I don't like trusting Christian children to the care of natives; but with Old Soup I know they can come to no harm."

Beside the children on the bank of the Ganges, stood Old Soup, with a bamboo rod in his trunk, with line, hook bait, and cork, like the children's. I had not watched him long before he had a bite; for as the religion of the Hindoos forbid them to take life the river swarms with fishes.

The old fellow did not stir; his little eyes watched his line eagerly; he was no novice in "the gentle craft." He was waiting till it was time to draw in his prize.

At the end of his line, as he drew it up, was dangling one of those golden tench so abundant in the Ganges.

When Soupramany perceived what a fine fish he had caught, he uttered one of those long, low, gurgling notes of satisfaction, by which an elephant expresses joy; and he waited patiently, expecting Jim to take his prize off the hook and put on some more bait for him. But Jim, it seems, sometimes liked to plague Old Soup. He nodded at us as much as to say, "Look out, and you'll see fun now!" Then he took off the fish, which he threw into a water-jar, placed there for the purpose, and went back to his place without putting any bait on Old Soup's hook. The intelligent animal did not attempt to throw his line into the water. He tried to move Jim by low, pleading cries. It was curious to note what tender tones he seemed to try to give his voice.

Seeing that Jim paid no attention to his calls, but sat and laughed as he handled his own line, Old Soup went up to him, and with his trunk tried to turn his head in the direction of the bait-box. At last, when he found that all he could do would not induce his wilful friend to help him, he turned round as if struck by a sudden thought, and, snatching up in his trunk the box that held the bait, came and laid it down at the major's feet; then picking up his rod he held it out to his master.

"What do you want me to do with this, Old Soup?" said the major.

The creature lifted one great foot after the other, and again began to utter his plaintive cry. Out of mischief I took Jimmy's part, and, picked up the bait-box, pretended to run with it. The elephant was not going to be teased by me. He dipped his trunk into the Ganges, and in an instant squirted a stream of water over me with all the force and precision of a fire-engine, to the immense amusement of the children.

The major at once made Soup a sign to stop, and to make my peace with the fine old fellow, I baited his hook myself. Quivering with joy, as a baby does when it gets hold at last of a plaything some one has taken from it, Old Soupramany hardly paused to thank me by a soft note of joy for baiting his line for him, before he went back to his place, and was again watching his cork as it trembled in the ripples of the river.—St. Nicholas.

The mining and manufacturing of the phosphate rock in South Carolina have become one of its leading and most important interests. From small beginnings the shipment and manufacture of phosphate rock have risen in nine years to the large amount of 199,086 tons in 1877-78, of which 115,965 tons were shipped to foreign ports, 64,486 tons coastwise, and 16,635 tons were consumed by our manufacturers.

Editorial Notes on Atlanta, Georgia.

The Public Schools of Atlanta are as thoroughly organized and, as near as we can judge, as efficient as those of any city of similar size in the country. Professor B. Mallon is the Superintendent. Upon his invitation, in company with Rev. Dr. Foss, of Connecticut, Governor Cumback, of Indiana, Rev. Dr. Fuller, of Atlanta, Rev. Mr. Westgate, of Middleton, Conn., and Judge Jackson, of the Georgia Supreme Court, we spent a day in these schools. In the organization of classes, methods of instruction, courses of study, discipline and in grade of teachers the schools rank among the very best. There is one high school for boys and one for girls. We were glad to learn that the two would probably soon be united in one and thus expense be saved and the boys and girls be educated in the same classes. We were especially pleased to see in all the schools evidences of great care in teaching writing and correct pronunciation. The schools attended by colored scholars were as thoroughly organized and taught as any.

Fifty-three teachers are employed, and 2,105 white and 1,195 colored scholars attend, making a total of 3,300. Total value of school property $95,000. Expenses for 1877, $35,662.05.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in Atlanta, is not strong as compared with other denominations in the city, but is of great importance because it "holds the fort" for our Southern Methodism in the most thriving city in the central South. On Whitehall street is located our Book Depository, and the office where the Methodist Advocate is published and edited. Mr. Jones has in charge the Book store; Mr. Holcomb, who has been in the employ of the Methodist Book Concern for thirty-five years, superintends the mechanical work of the Advocate; Miss Coffin does the work of Assistant Editor, while over all as editor, and in very many respects adviser and director is Dr. Fuller. Dr. Fuller has made a manly and successful struggle against many obstacles in maintaining our banner in the central South. His Quarterly Review articles and his "Appeal to the Records" have done much to impress the whole church. Marietta street Church, Bro. Thurman, pastor, is well located, has a beautiful edifice and, while not strong in membership yet fills an indispensable place in our church work in Atlanta. Like others of our churches in the South and elsewhere, it is not strong, but its presence represents the purpose and work of the church in Georgia, and must be treated like weak churches are in Illinois and New York, that is, helped and encouraged. Shaw University.

This institution is located at Holly Springs, Mississippi, and is one of the several schools established, and now being maintained in the South by the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

It was our good fortune to attend a part of the closing exercises with Rev. Dr. Rust, Corresponding Secretary of the above Society. The exercises began with a students' love feast on Sunday morning, May 26th. The large church was crowded with a most interesting and very intelligent congregation. A gracious revival had lately visited the school and many of the young men and women had been converted. As we listened to the testimonies we wished that the whole church could but hear them and witness the wonderful transformation that a few years had made in those people. Young men spoke who were filled with sanctified ambition to preach the Gospel, and young women filled with pious longings to do something for the Master, told of their sweet trust in Jesus and buoyant hopes. When the meeting closed, we said to Dr. Rust, "if Shaw University should be wiped out and forgotten to-day the scenes of this hour paid for all it had cost in money and in pious effort."

At 3 p.m. Dr. Rust delivered the Baccalaureate sermon to a crowded house. The sermon, by special request, is published in full in this issue, and our readers can judge for themselves of its merits. The audience listened with fixed attention, and gave many evidences of being interested and profited. We of course cannot print the eloquent and instructive passages which the Doctor gave impromptu and which were not in his manuscript. At night we preached the annual sermon.

On Monday occurred the last examinations. Quite a number of friends of the school were present throughout the day. Among them were Revs. M. Adams, J. G. Johnson, J. M. Shumpert, and several laymen. The classes did well. We attended examinations in Latin, under Prof. Coit; History, under Miss S. A. Smith; Elocution, under Miss Ophelia L. Smith; and Theology and Book-keeping under President Hooper. In each class there were several students who had mastered their work, and as usual some who had not. All the classes gave evidence of careful and thorough training.

President Hooper has steadily won his way into the affections of the nearly two hundred who have attended the school the past year, and has gained the confidence of a large proportion of the citizens of Holly Springs. The city has come to recognize Shaw University as something to be proud of. The days of ostracism to those who teach in the school are not past, but the days have come when the value of the school and the labors of its friends are recognized by the thoughtful people of the place. A few years ago Dr. Rust and Dr. McDonald were hooted at along the streets; but now the sainted McDonald is spoken of kindly, and Dr. Rust and Prof. Hooper are cordially greeted by leading citizens. Thus steadily, but surely, righteousness prevails. In after years Holly Springs will be spoken of as "a beautiful city in North Mississippi, the seat of Shaw University."

Monday afternoon the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees was held, Dr. Rust presiding. The chief work was the election of professors for next year and the arranging for work on the new building. President Hooper was unanimously re-elected, and there were many expressions of appreciation of his worth from the entire Board. Miss Ophelia L. Smith was re-elected Preceptress. Professor Coit remains, and the Board referred the selection of whatever other instructors would be needed to Dr. Rust and President Hooper. It was understood that Miss S. A. Smith was not an applicant for a position. The Board conferred the degree of Bachelor of Arts on Messrs. Adams and Thomas, graduates; and the degree of Master of Arts, pro merito on Rev. Jeremy S. Bean. The new building will soon be begun. The [illegible] are on the ground.

Monday night the Literary So[illegible] gave an intellectual treat, consisting of essays, declamations, music and a debate.

Commencement day dawned with [illegible], suggestive of blessings [illegible] graduates of Shaw University. Mr. Thomas spoke on [illegible] Thought," and gave [illegible] is well chos[illegible] spoke on [illegible] in Being's [illegible] "What [illegible] presenta- [illegible] by the President, [illegible] followed an address on Education, by A. M. West, M.D., a citizen of Holly Springs. This address won golden opinions from all who heard it. The music for the day was furnished by a choir trained under the direction of Miss Ophelia L. Smith.

At 8 p.m., of the same day, Masonic Hall in the city was crowded to witness the Anniversary Exercises of the school. Miss Mary Exum gave the Salutatory in a well written and well delivered essay. C. Bullen declaimed on the "March of Mind." Miss Talbot gave one of the finest productions of the evening in an essay on "The Influence of Art." Mr. R. Smith gave an oration on Communism that showed much thought on one of the great questions of the hour. Miss Anna Barr recited "Lost Hunter" well, and Mr. Alferd Coffin gave an original poem. The Valedictory, "Finished," was delivered by Mr. H. H. Avant in a manner very creditable to him. The last performance was "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." The drama required quite a number of of performers and the audience throughout gave evidence of its appreciation by close attention and frequent applause. The character of Sample Switchel, a down east Yankee, represented by Mr. Holmes, was very well done. Many of the white citizens of the city were present and expressed themselves pleased and even astonished at the excellence attained by the students. Much of the success of the evening was due to Miss S. A. Smith, who had largely in charge the training of the speakers.

Another year of study passed, the students of Shaw go forth, many to teach, others to preach, and others to labor wherever they can to secure means to return again next fall. Who shall estimate the power of that influence which year by year goes forth from a single institution of learning? The Teachers, Trustees and friends of Shaw University are to be congratulated upon the close of the most successful year of their institution.

Decoration Day at Chalmette.

The annual decoration of the graves of the "Boys in Blue" at Chalmette, just below this city, was attended with imposing ceremonies last Thursday. A large concourse of people were in attendance.

For the first time the Blue and the Gray blended in the tribute of honor to the nation's dead. The Louisiana Division of the Army of North Virginia sent a delegation bearing a magnificent floral tribute. It was a large shield, several feet wide, wrought in flowers of richest hue and surmounted by a white dove. The Continentals of this city sent an American flag, fully five feet long, held by a staff resting in a bed of flowers. The flag and staff were woven in flowers in which the stars and stripes were shown in perfect symmetry. Suitable addresses and responses were made at the presentation of each. There was most excellent music by a chorus of trained voices under the leadership of Dr. C. B. White. Several companies of United States troops were on the ground as well as several companies of local military organizations.

The oration was delivered by Col. Y. A. Woodward, Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic at this post. We regret that we can not give all the oration for lack of space. The following are the concluding paragraphs:

It was a happy thought in those who chose this place for the burial of their country's defenders; here, heroes fought and vanquished a foreign foe who sought to invade our soil; here, now, heroes sleep who died that a brother's error might not imperil the hope of freedom. Nature could not have provided for our dead heroes a lovelier resting place than greets the eyes of the thousands now assembled to do them homage. These evergreens bear to those whose lives were given that a united country might extend its protecting arm over universal freedom. On this spot there is no day or hour in the long year when some sweet flower does not lift its censer and send up its fragrant incense in praise and ornament of the dead; here myriad ships of a nation's commerce lean leans their masts as a knight would bow his crest as they pass these hallowed graves, in token that they bear their rich argosies to free and friendly cities, untrammeled by tax or toll or duty; here those murmuring waters ever sing a requiem for our dead comrades—a requiem that will last into the infinite future, along with the immortality of their fame; and the rippling waves, as they follow one another, but mark the succeeding years that will roll away before their renown is faded or their deeds forgotten.

Whence do these waters come, that kiss the borders of this ground as in revolving eddies they linger here to add their tribute to the dead? From the Rocky to the Alleghany mountains the raindrop that falls on every cottage under [illegible] roof a brave lad was nurtured for the struggle which saved [illegible] country—helps to swell this current [illegible] brings to these spirits [illegible] memories of home; a thousand miles up this valley, and further still in each tributary vale, the widowed mother sits in her loneliness by the river side and mourns her dead son buried here; the falling tears, as they drop into the stream are borne upon the bosom of the great "Father of Waters"—a message of love to the fallen hero. Can anything be sadder, tenderer, sublimer, than the tribute of honor which this great river ever pays to this memorial spot? It sighs its grief in its majestic swell; it mourns in its murmuring waves, and it bears from the mountains and from the valleys where millions dwell their grateful remembrance of these patriot dead.

At such a place, on a spot so beautified by nature, so poetic in location, so sanctified by memories, we, the gathered remnant of survivors, are here to pay the annual tribute of flowers to our dead comrades. No angry cloud of war now darkens the horizon, no rude alarums call to hustle and to strife; our bruised arms are hung up for ornament, and all the clouds which lowered o'er our land are in the deep bosom of oblivion buried; the smiles of peace beam upon a prosperous people, and when we in thought or speech recur to the dark and bloody days of war, it is to recall the valor of those who fought with and against us. Ours to-day is a soldier's tribute, and when we place the sweet flowers of spring upon these green mounds, we mean to embalm in a soldier's heart a soldier's memory, and our act is praise for all who honored their uniform, whether it be blue or gray.

This anniversary is honored only when its observance appeals to the nobler sentiments of our nature; when valor, virtue, magnanimity and love are its inspiring motives—and when the glory of our whole country and the welfare of our whole people are its aims and purpose. It is in this spirit, my comrades, you are here assembled; the humble interpreter of your thoughts, memories and aspirations—I now invite every one who loves freedom, courage and devotion, every one who prefers smiles to tears, love to hatred, peace to war, honor to dishonor, without regard to section, nationality or sex, to join with us in this decoration, and the spirits of the honored dead will plead with the Great Spirit, that the blessings of peace and a united country, which their valor achieved, may be perpetual.

The Southern Methodist General Conference.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, adjourned May 24. Nashville was chosen as the next place of meeting four years hence. It was a very conservative body, and but few changes were made in the discipline of the church. We were present several days and received many courtesies at the hands of members of the body. In former issues we have spoken on some of the points of interest to our readers, and will, as circumstances suggest, speak in the future of other points.

The General Conference officers elected are as follows: Book Agent, Dr. J. B. McFerrin; Editor Nashville Advocate, Dr. O. P. Fitzgerald, of San Francisco; Editor of Books, Dr. T. O. Summers; Editor Sunday-school Publications, Dr. Cunnyngham; Missionary Secretary, Dr. A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore.

By a vote of the Conference the patronizing Conferences elected the editors of the various local papers. The Nashville Advocate is the only official paper published by the Church. The local papers and their editors are as follows:

St. Louis Advocate—D. R. McAnally.

Western Methodist (Memphis)—W. C. Johnson.

New Orleans Advocate—L. Parker.

Texas Advocate (Galveston)—I. G. John.

Southern Advocate—F. M. Kennedy.

Pacific Methodist (San Francisco)—W. B. Parsons.

Holston Methodist (Tenn.)—R. M. Price.

It was announced that the North and South Georgia, and Florida Conferences had united to publish a paper to be known as the Wesleyan Methodist, at Macon, Ga. A. G. Haygood is to be editor and J. W. Burke, assistant. The Southern Advocate, now published at Macon, Ga., is, we understand, to be removed to South Carolina.

It is also stated that Dr. A. H. Redford, late Book Agent, is to publish an independent paper at Louisville, Ky., to be known as the Southern Methodist.

In addition to the above there are the Central Methodist, at Catlettsburg, Ky., and the Richmond Advocate.

Nashville, Tennessee.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln, of Pittsburgh, Pa., are holding Gospel Temperance meetings in this city. Very little interest manifested on the part of the citizens. So far—the result of ten days labor—499 persons have signed the pledge.

Rev. C. W. S. Woods has been placed in charge of Clark Chapel. Bro. Woods is an excellent laborer and will do good work. **

The marriage of Vinnie Ream, the celebrated sculptress, to Lieut. R. L. Hoxie, of the United States Army is announced to take place on the 29th of May.

Pittsburgh Female College.

Notwithstanding the long financial depression this well managed institution has enjoyed a long measure of prosperity. For years it has been the leading school in the the United States, under the care of the M. E. Church, for the education of ladies. Its buildings are of modern finish. The rooms and table comforts are unusually fine, the course of study full and thorough teaching, comprising eight departments and twenty-three teachers, and at charges less than any school affording equal advantages and accommodations.

As an evidence of the future reputation of the College, every graduate who decides to teach has a situation. Applications were received for teachers from more schools than could be supplied. Schools supplied with teachers and efforts used to secure them good places.

Upwards of three years ago a Conservatory of Music was established in connection with the College, which has proved a grand success, and pupils have been attracted from many adjoining States, including Louisiana. Thirteen teachers are employed in the Conservatory, including a native teacher of French and German, and a very superior teacher of Elocution. Instruction given in the elements of music and its theory, composition, &c., and also voice culture, and the use of the grand organ, cabinet organs, pianos (22 in number), guitar, violin, &c., and all at low rates. Three full courses given in music, and diplomas granted to those who complete either course.

Last year the Music Faculty established a Summer Annual Music School, which proved so successful as to induce them to make it a permanent feature of the Conservatory. It is designed for music teachers who desire to become better qualified for their work, and thus secure higher and more lucrative positions; church singers, and church organists, and pupils who do not desire to lose through the long vacation what they have learned during the year. This is a rare opportunity to afford all such, not only to improve in music, but also to visit the celebrated manufactories of Pittsburgh and other places of interest.

The Summer Annual Music session will open at the close of the College year, June 24, and continue six weeks. Those desiring full information should address, President I. C. Pershing, D.D., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Alexander H. Stephens on the Potter Investigation.

Mr. Stephens of Georgia, is out in a severe letter on the Potter Investigation scheme. His concluding words are these:

"I look upon the whole of this proceeding, concocted as it was, conducted as it has been, as most unwise, most unfortunate, and most mischievous. Its effect will be to disturb the peace, harmony and quiet of the country. Neither Mr. Potter nor anybody else can prevent it. And I say to him most respectfully, that nothing short of immediate, general and firm concert of action by the law and order abiding people of all parties, Republicans and Democrats, throughout the Union in reprobation of this investigation proceeding any further with a view to disturb the Presidential title, such as announced by the Pennsylvania Democracy in their convention a few days ago, can arrest most fearful consequences. Those who have, though innocently, sowed the wind, will reap the whirlwind. My own opinion is as I repeatedly have said, that this affair will prove, in the end, either a contemptible farce or a horrible tragedy. Whether it will lead to the Mexicanization of our Federal republic, the result must show; but I say, as I said upon another occasion, that all soft words instilling in the minds of the people of this country the idea that Mr. Hayes can be peaceably unseated by Congress, are as delusive as the whispering of the great arch-fiend in the ear of Eve, from which sprang all our woes."

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. Joseph Gould, Presiding Elder Baton Rouge District, writes June 3rd: "I have just held my quarterly meetings at the following named places: Monroe, Bastrop and the Island. Rev. N. Lee has held a successful protracted meeting in Bastrop, which resulted in eight conversions and forty accessions, and the work in this vicinity is very promising. The Rev. A. Jones has returned to the Mother Church with a congregation of sixty members, and a Sabbath-school of forty or more children. Since he left the church he has always assisted our preachers, and I welcome his return and hope the conference will receive him."

Bro. Hudson began a protracted meeting on the 19th of May, which lasted one week, resulting in one conversion and twenty-four probationers. He was assisted by the Baptist brethren. His charge is prospering. We had an accession to our church not long since in the person of Rev. B. J. Donnell, recently from the Baptist Church. The brethren are raising money to improve their church and buy a bell.

General News Items.

London, May 31.—A dispatch from Dover confirms the worst fears regarding the collision of German iron-clads in the English Channel, which resulted in a most fearful loss of life. The colliding vessels were the Kaiser Wilhelm and the Grosser Kurfurst. The weather at the time of the disaster was clear and calm, and what led to the disaster is a mystery. Both vessels were under full headway when the Kaiser Wilhelm ran into the Grosser Kurfurst. The shock was terrific, the latter vessel filling with water and sinking within five minutes after the collision. From all reports received it is believed that nearly 400 persons have lost their lives by the disaster. The Kaiser Wilhelm was the largest iron-clad frigate of the German navy. She was built at the Thames Iron Works, Blackwell, and was launched ten years ago. She is of 5938 tons, 8000-horse power, and carries 23 guns; these are rifled ninety-six pounders made of Krupp's hammered steel. Her armor was eight inches thick amidship. She also carried four 300-pounders. The Grosser Kurfurst was a turret ship, built at the German dock yard in 1873. She had two turrets, with armor eleven inches thick. She had four twenty-six centimetre guns in the turrets, and two twenty-one centimetre guns placed fore and aft. The scene of the terrible disaster was off Folkestone, and about half-way between that port and Calais. The squadron had passed the South Forelands and Dover on the English coast, and was steaming almost due south.

Washington, June 1.—The treasury is doing all it can to get the standard silver dollar into general circulation, but is not meeting with any great success. Very few are desirous of possessing the bulky coin, preferring greenbacks. With a view to getting the coin circulated the department applied to the first comptroller of the treasury for a decision as to whether, under the law, the silver dollar could be used in paying for the transportation of coin. The decision is in the affirmative. In accordance therewith the department orders that all amounts for the transportation of coin from the mints to the treasury, or various sub-treasuries and depositories, be paid in standard silver dollars.

Berlin, June 2.—This afternoon, as the Emperor William was returning from a drive he was again shot at on the Avenue "Unter den Linden." The shots were fired from a pistol, and the slugs took effect in the Emperor's face and arm. He was immediately conveyed to the Imperial Palace, when the physicians who had been summoned at once proceeded to extract the bullets. The wound in the Emperor's face is considered a serious one, but the surgeons do not think that it will prove fatal. The assassin, who attempted to fly after firing the shots, was followed by the crowd, and was soon captured. He then made a desperate attempt to take his own life, but was prevented from so doing by his pursuers. The assassin, who proved to be a Dr. Nobling, refused to say anything.

LONDON, June 3.—The Times says that the total number of persons on board the Grosser Kurfurst was 457, and of these 217 are known to be saved. Six officers are among the lost.

BERLIN, June 3.—There are reports that an examination of Nobeling's papers has resulted in showing that there is a conspiracy against the Emperor, and that arrests in Saxony have been ordered to be made.

LONDON, June 3.—All is jubilant to-night in ministerial circles. The coming congress is at last definitely settled for the thirteenth instant, at Berlin. Earl Baconsfield, the Marquis of Salisbury, and Lord Odo Russel are to be members for England. The session is to be very short. It is said Austria will find herself compelled to take what England and Russia are willing she should have, or stand alone against united Germany, Russia and England. This is the tone of the conversation in the lobby of the House of Commons to-night. It is added that Russia was absolutely compelled by pecuniary difficulties to consent to England's demands, which are not extravagant. Russia is now spending 1,300,000 roubles in merely keeping her army in position, and her difficulty in obtaining ready money becomes day after day greater. The Liberals, on the other hand, refuse to share these views, and insist that when the congress convenes fresh trouble will begin, and that it will end in a disagreement or a Russian triumph.

Washington, June 3.—The news from the Indian frontier, as reported to the War Department to-day, is that Gen. Sheridan telegraphs that there is much alarm at Benton as to the situation, condition and intentions of Sitting Bull, who, it is thought, is ready to cross the frontier and start on the war path from Upper Columbia. The news comes that the Nez Perces, under Chief Mozels, are anxious to begin a war. The Pelonse Indians are in the same mind, and are itching for the war path. The military and civil authorities are doing all they can to prevent an outbreak, and are making preparations for the protection of settlers in case of war.

LONDON, June 4.—The negotiations for a simultaneous withdrawal of the English fleet and Russian army from before Constantinople have been abandoned.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The will of the late shipowner, Charles Morgan, appointing his widow sole executrix and leaving $13,000,000 to be distributed according to the State laws, among his next of kin, was admitted to probate this morning.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The Senate Committee on railroads has authorized Mr. Ransom to report the bill of Senator Johnston, providing for the construction of the Texas Pacific Railroad without recommendation. They took the same action upon the bill of Senator Hill, aiding the Great Southern Railroad company to construct a line of railroad in the States of Georgia and Florida.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—The Senate Transportation Committee to-day agreed to a bill which will authorize the payment of $500,000 down, which is advancing the twenty-four-feet payment, and an additional $500,000 will be appropriated to be paid to Capt. Eads on the monthly statements of the Army engineers that he is expending the money in the improvement of the jetties.

RICHMOND, MO., June 2.—A disastrous cyclone passed over this place about 4 o'clock last evening, leveling to the ground over half of the buildings in the town. Over one hundred houses were destroyed, and loss of property will reach a quarter of a million dollars. Whole blocks were completely swept away, and the debris scattered for miles. The storm came from the southwest, passed to the northeast and was preceded by a heavy fall of rain. Trees were uprooted and carried through the air like feathers, as were also fragments of houses, and in fact everything that the storm struck. The Shaw House, a large brick hotel, was demolished and the inmates buried in the ruins. So far as known ten persons were killed and three mortally wounded.

Passports have been issued by the Treasury Department to Mr. James Gordon Bennett's Arctic ship, the Jeannette, which it will be remembered, was purchased by him in England for an expedition to the North Pole and by an act of Congress made an American ship.

New York, June 3.—The Tribune's special from Washington says: The Republicans expect to call Minister Stoughton as a witness to expose the great Democratic conspiracy, and will probably summon Judge Campbell, before whom Anderson is said to have sworn to his protest, which he now says he did not swear to at all. They will also call Pitkin and I. B. Jenks. The Florida sub-committee left for Jacksonville last evening.

JUNE 16, 1878.—THE MESSIAH'S KINGDOM.

SCRIPTURE.—Dan. 7:9-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: the sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre."—Ps. 45:6.

TOPIC.—Christ, the Everlasting Ruler.

[Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.]

The Vision.—With the exception of the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, in the preceding chapters we have been studying the personal history of Daniel and his three friends. With this, however, there is a marked change in the character of the book. It ceases to be a record of what man has done, and chronicles what God intends to do. It is no longer a biography, but a revelation.

That which, in the vision, made the most impression upon the seer, was the "little horn." This was additional to all that appeared to Nebuchadnezzar. The ten horns in this corresponds to the ten toes in that, but in the first there is nothing which answers to the little horn here [illegible] of. The little horn refers to the papal power. This the- [illegible] obtains among [illegible] The [illegible] it into the [illegible] like uprights into the [illegible] for them in the foundation [illegible]. The [illegible] The rule of the papal power has been keen, shrewd and far-discerning. It has governed fully as much by its intelligence as by force. On account of its spiritual claims, it [illegible] the very hearts of [illegible] has spoken "great [illegible] power has ever [illegible] and presump- [illegible] There is [illegible] ex- [illegible] powers, and [illegible] It is [illegible] preceded [illegible] about [illegible] Pope [illegible] which at [illegible]

We note the characteristics of his kingdom. 1. It was received from the ancient of days. And in this is another one of those coincidences; for Christ said: "All things are delivered unto me of my Father." Matt. 11:27; John 3:35. 2. It was no beast. It was not selfish, fierce and cruel. With the coming in of his kingdom all the brutal and malevolent qualities which marked the supremacy of the others began to diminish. His is a kingdom whose aggressive principle is love. 3. It is to be universal. The church of God is not always to be few in numbers, forming but a small part of any community. It is to include all people, nations and languages. 4. It is to be everlasting. It is not to pass away from inward weakness, nor be destroyed by any outward power. God's kingdom has not lighted upon the earth like a dove whose wings are quivering for another flight. It has come to stay.

It is said in verse 18, that the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom. They are not to wait for prophecy to be fulfilled, but to fulfill it. They are to storm the positions of the enemy themselves. They are not merely to "hold the fort"—they are to storm the forts of the enemy as well. They are to sit with the Lord in judgment upon this world. What that may mean we do not as yet fully know, but from it it is certain that those who love him are to be taken into his counsels, and to aid in the administration of judgment.

When Dr. Judson was asked concerning the prospect of the redemption of this world, his answer was: "It is as bright as the promise of God can make it." There is no need to fear for the future. God has it entirely in his hands. He will bring everything to a triumphant [illegible]. The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study, and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examinations for orders by the Annual Conferences. [illegible] order and in behalf of the Board of [illegible]

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Dr. J. M. Howe's

Inhaling Tube!

AND

COMMON AIR WILL CURE

CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. BEERS, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. ADAMS, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. may2'78-tf

HOME FROM WORK.

Home from work when day is done,
Pass the rapid, willing feet;
Home from work at set of sun,
Go the toilers through the street,
Each tired face becoming bright
As it sees the soft home-light.

Weary eyes that looked all day,
Where the busy hands have wrought,
Now in leisure glance away,
While the mind grows glad with thought,
Seeing in the light and shade
How serene God's world is made.

Yet they have not laggard feet,
These tired workers; love impels;
They can hear while in the street,
Music sweet as Sabbath bells,
And [illegible] dear one's welcome song,
Seems to urge their steps along.

So they linger not outside,
But [illegible] through the friendly door,
For [illegible] with eventide
All [illegible] and pain are o'er;
Home is bright at set of sun,
Home is dear when work is done.

Little children climb their knees,
Wifely eyes look up with smiles,
Loving spirits strive to please,
Happy talk the time beguiles,
And while darker grows the west
Thankful hearts bless God for rest.

Home from work when day is done,
Pass we all with rapid feet;
Home from work at set of sun,
Till we gain the golden street.
This shall be our lot at last,
When life's toiling time is past.

[illegible] joy to see
[illegible] shine,
[illegible] long set free,
[illegible] divine,
[illegible] blest
In our [illegible] may rest.

What the Moon Saw.

The hen [illegible] and screamed, and [illegible] wings over the little [illegible] father came [illegible] her; and I glided [illegible] thought no more over the [illegible].

"[illegible] evening, only a few [illegible] I looked down in the [illegible] court-yard. Everything was [illegible] girl [illegible] quietly to [illegible] back the bolt, [illegible] apartment of [illegible]. They cried [illegible] ring down [illegible] about in [illegible] girl was after [illegible] ly, for I [illegible] the hen- [illegible] the [illegible] her [illegible] her [illegible] told. mate came into his study, and laying a folded paper before him said, "There is a problem I wish you would help me to solve," and immediately left the room.

The paper was eagerly unfolded, and there, instead of a question in mathematics, were traced the lines, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul; or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

With a gesture of impatience he tore the paper to atoms, and turned again to his books. But in vain he tried to shake off the impressions of the solemn words he had read. The Holy Spirit pressed home his conviction of guilt and danger, so that he could find no peace till he found it in believing in Jesus. He subsequently became a minister of the Gospel he had once despised, and his first sermon was from the words so eminently blessed to his own soul, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"—American Messenger.

Cultivate one Talent.

One talent, well cultivated, deepened, and enlarged, is worth a hundred shallow faculties. The first law of success at this day, when so many things are clamoring for attention, is concentration; to bend all the energies to one point, and go directly to that point looking neither to the right nor to the left. It has been justly said that a great deal of the wisdom of a man in this century is shown in leaving things unknown; and a great deal of his practical sense in leaving things undone. The day of universal scholars is past. Life is short and art is long. The range of human knowledge has increased so enormously that no brain can grapple with it; and the man who would know one thing well must have the courage to be ignorant of a thousand other things, however attractive or inviting. As with knowledge, so with work. The man who would get along must single out his speciality, and into that must pour the whole stream of his activity—all the energies of his hand, eye, tongue, heart, and brain. Broad culture, many-sidedness, are beautiful things to contemplate; but it is the narrow-edged men—the men of single and intense purpose, who steel their souls against all things else—that accomplish the hard work of this world, and who are everywhere in demand when hard work is to be done.—Prof. Matthews.

Are you suffering from ill-health in any of its many and multifarious forms, consequent upon a lingering, nervous, chronic or functional disease? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, fretful, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are your kidneys, stomach, or blood, in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia or aches and pains? Have you been indiscreet in early years and find yourself harassed with a multitude of gloomy symptoms? Are you timid, nervous, and forgetful, and your mind continually dwelling on the subject? Have you lost confidence in yourself and energy for business pursuits? Are you subject to any of the following symptoms: Restless nights, broken sleep, nightmare, dreams, palpitation of the heart, bashfulness, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, pimples and blotches on the face and back, and other despondent symptoms? STANDARD

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 38 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," inhaling-tubes, and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. O. REMICK.

Is Pectoral.
GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.
GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

After using one box, in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the Ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has affected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory. EDWARD H. HAMSON.

comfort, no word of Christian consolation has been uttered over her lost ones? Who of us can begrudge this little gift? Who of us shall say that such consecration is a desecration? Who shall complain that the Lord's day and the Lord's house are employed in this most Christian service?

Let us with bowed hearts dwell under the shadow of this still present calamity. Let us stand around this mourning Rizpah, who lies prostrate before her dead, not sons alone, but husband, and daughter, and son—that perfect trialty to woman's heart—who had lain there, lo, these many months; who refuses to be comforted, not only because they are not, but also because, in ever fiber of her soul, they are still unburried. Let us gather about these lads, who stand in manly silence before the graves of their household, the revered father, the oldest brother, heir thereby in their conscience to the headship of their own family and generation, and their adored sister, and who solemnly await the due rites of the Church over their beloved dead. May Rizpah now find comfort, and the household accept these tributes as a proper burial!

I shall not dwell upon the scene that rises before your eyes in all its horror. I dare not. My own feelings cannot bear the sight. A year ago, the 20th of last month, no happier family blossomed in all this land—in any land. The father and daughter had just returned from a journey to the North, where the mighty Niagara had been first seen by those young eyes, which dreamed not that they should look ere many weeks on a more deadly cataract, and be whelmed beneath its rushing torrents of madness and death. She had written a description of that trip only two days before the opening of the fearful drama. They were exulting in the opened glory of the coming year—the soft, rich landscape, the blooming trees and fields, the music of birds, every [illegible] of nature in its ecstacy of [illegible]. How [illegible] was that open[illegible] [illegible] that daughter's [illegible] week be[illegible]

"This afternoon brother and I mounted our horses and galloped away for a ride. We left the road [illegible] five miles from town, and [illegible] to the wood; and I would tell [illegible] how beautiful they looked if I [illegible]. The trees are all clothed in [illegible] soft and tender foliage, the leaves [illegible] about half grown. There [illegible] lovely flowers of every color [illegible] variety now in bloom along the [illegible]. The beautiful yellow jessamine meet across the stream, and [illegible] their soft sweet blooms and [illegible] together, while the banks [illegible] with forget-me-nots, [illegible] wild violets, dogwood, [illegible] magnolia. O, I wish you [illegible] have been with us on our [illegible] then you would know how [illegible]. Sweet papa just [illegible] St. Louis."

[illegible] picture in this—[illegible] into youth, [illegible] into maiden[illegible] in the last ride [illegible] glories of a [illegible] sweet papa, [illegible] of loveliness [illegible] the destroyer [illegible] of the next [illegible] Wednesday [illegible] three of [illegible] down [illegible] swept, [illegible] prayer [illegible] of Christian [illegible] was uttered [illegible] about the [illegible] the souls of [illegible] passed [illegible]

by whom they fell, a public monument testifying to their sorrow at the event that has made their county fearfully famous. Such a lamentation and dedication will yet be made. If they or their children fail to do this holy duty, others will certainly do the same. It is the eternal law.

A week ago I rode by a granite statue, exquisitely carved, of a brave and beautiful woman. It was erected only a year or two since, and in honor of Hannah Dustin, who, in 1698, nearly two hundred years ago, there showed extraordinary valor in rescuing herself and children from savage captors. The land has never let the memory of her courage die, and has at last molded it into enduring shape. None the less will the same land remember the not inferior courage and faithfulness of Cornelia Josephine Chisholm. Nay, it will the more remember, for this woman died for her love and devotion. She chose to die. Her "sweet papa" was in jeopardy—nay, was in the grip of death. Rather than fly from his side, she hastened unto it. She prepared for the defense of his life with ammunition concealed about her person. She interposed to save him after her own face had been filled with wounds from shot that cleft the iron from the bars, and her arm had been shattered from wrist to shoulder as she covered his heart with its protecting embrace. She begged them to take her life and spare her "darling papa." But all in vain. Theirs was the long intimacy of the oldest child and only daughter with the father, an intimacy the deepest that family ties can know, unless it be the corresponding affection of the oldest child and only son with his mother, and this intimacy is less delicate and tender in its filial phases. They had made this depth of mutual devotion deeper and dearer by their winter in Washington, and in Northern travel. They had clung together these many months of home separation, only now to show how they could die together.

Brave and manly as were the father and son in that awful hour, they were exceeded in coolness of daring, in intensity of purpose, in completeness of self-possession, in readiness of resource, in earnestness of petition, in every element of highest humanhood by this frail girl of nineteen. Cornelia is a name that ranks high in Roman annals. Her boast of her sons as her jewels has shown her brightest jewel for more than twenty centuries. But this Cornelia excelled the earliest of her name. Her jewel was her passionate devotion to her father in this hour of death. That shall shine forever. No waste of time can dim its brightness. Immortality will but increase its beauty and its worth. Josephine is a historic name. A proud and capable woman stands at the front of this century mastering the master of the world. Divorced and degraded she rules him from her enforced seclusion. Those of her blood still sit on thrones, and are heirs to imperial crowns. But this Josephine would be gladly welcomed by that illustrious lady as her peer in every quality of womanhood and manhood, for the highest traits of humanity met and mingled in one brief hour.

On that morning she was a simple girl, "heart-whole" as she wrote loving, girlish things. In that hour she towered into an angel, princely and potent, glowing in the fires of death with the strength and glory of Beatrice in the upper circles of the heavens. Welcome to the undying names of mankind, be that of this worthy successor of the great Cornelia and Josephine.

We shall not enter upon the field that lies before your every thought. Why was this deed done, and what shall be the end of these things if allowed to go unrebuked of the nation, ye need not that I should [illegible] you. Your hearts are inditing [illegible] pleasant, though, perhaps, [illegible] profitable matter. [illegible] rose a [illegible] lamb, the unleavened [illegible] the bitter herbs, made a [illegible] to the thoughtful Israelite [illegible] the hour when [illegible] Egyptian [illegible] miracle [illegible] on [illegible] left your homes free, yet only for a season. If we allow to be the law of one part of our land, it will soon be of all parts. Can one member suffer, and not all suffer with it? Can a leading citizen and his family be set on, and slain in Massachusetts for political causes, and peace and safety attend the ballot in Mississippi? No more can the reverse be true. The present honeycombing of Pennsylvania, with murder, which stern and unrelenting justice cannot abate; the communistic threatenings in Chicago and California; the bloody strike along the Ohio; the tramp wandering murderously over one-half of our Union, is the natural, the inevitable outcome of the unwillingness of the National Government to protect its citizens of the other half. The theory that State Governments have such absolute control of life and death within their territories, that the nation cannot cross their boundaries to protect its citizens and punish their murderers, has brought us to this weak and miserable pass. We are affrighted at the shadow glowering at our own hearthstone. In secluded Vermont, in crowded Cincinnati, in remote Maine, in Central Indiana, the same terror besets us by night, the same deadly danger by day.

One Indian massacre arouses every part of the land, be it the Modocs of Oregon, or the Sioux of Minnesota, or the Utes of Colarado, or the Comanches of Arizona, indignation and wrath leap from end to end of the continent, and that, too, when no one dreams that the dread foe is to steal into Eastern homes and renew his horrors at Wyoming or Schenectady. But this deed has universal application. It proves universal national weakness; it breeds universal national disaster. A people that cannot protect itself is no people. It falls to pieces when it allows its members to be cut to pieces. [Applause.]

Said a gentleman to me but yesterday, who had just returned from abroad: "The old world is over-governed; we, under-governed." Nothing strikes me more forcibly on re-entering this land than over its own citizens. Unless a stronger Government shall arise, we shall disolve and disappear as a nation. We sigh for the verification of the seal of Massachusetts—an uplifted arm holding a sword, which alone gives placid quiet under liberty. We have taken our first step in verifying our right to exist as a nation on gigantic fields of strife by bloody and costly valor. We must carry forward and complete this work in the national protection of every citizen in his every right. [Applause.] We must defend freedom of speech and freedom of ballot, or we perish from the earth.

To this coming perfection of national peace and power this sad event will contribute. This family group are martyrs to the American equality of right, to the Declaration of Independence, and to the preamble of the Constitution. It was for the cause of equal rights the father fought and the family fell. It was for the protection of every citizen at the polls, for true democracy, the government of the majority of voters legally and fearlessly expressed, for the American nation, for the rights of mankind, that this citizen of America, and his brave son and braver daughter, laid down their lives.

Their cries of agony and death shall never be forgotten—never below, never above.

> Their moans
> The vales redouble to the hills, and they
> To heaven.

Their forms will be wrought into marble, painted upon canvass, honored in prose and verse, held in higher and higher remembrance as years and ages go by. The children of the fathers who so ignor[illegible] slew them will build their sumptuous sepulchers. That lone and dread procession that thrice threaded the dismal path a score of miles—a feeble few, without minister, or even sexton, to assist them, bearing the bloody dead, in jeopardy of life, as they pursued their mournful journey—will yet be changed into a solemn, penitential, but glad multitude of the citizens of the same county, with their wives and daughters and sons, gathering about that green spot, where they were thus buried, to make confession of their fathers' [illegible] by such deeds of atonement in marble, and eulogy, and prayer, and sermon are able to give. [illegible] those remains, now on their way to a safer resting-place, be recalled, as were those of Dante, by the city of his birth, by those still hostile fellow-citizens in the place of their birth, and death, and the name of that county, so dishonored now, by this act of penitence be restored to its former esteem.

To the future, then poor, stricken wife and mother, poor fatherless and sisterless youth, to the future cast your wet but hopeful eyes, wet with joyful tears, tears for the dead beloved, joy that they died so gloriously, and won in one short hour immortal fame. Had they not thus died, the world had never known them. Had they not thus died, liberty, equality, fraternity for all our land, and all its peoples, perhaps, had never been attained. There may be ere that high table-land of humanity and America is reached.

It may be that others, who now speak and hear, may be required, also, to make for their nation like holy sacrifices. In this city, where our greatest citizen gave his life for the life of the land, we can note the slow and bleeding feet of the martyrs to Christ and our country. May we, if called, be as willing and ready to follow the Christ, and these his disciples, for the perfection of the work of human regeneration. It may be that the whole nation will be compelled to wrestle in the sweat of this great agony for equal rights of all men, as it has had to wrestle for existence. It may be that Enceladus will yet arise from under this mountain of permitted prejudice and hate in a number at which all the world shall stand aghast—a Kemper County massacre in every hamlet of the land. It may be that we shall yet be compelled to cry out in bitterness of spirit:

> Ah, woe for the land that is sown
> With the harvest of despair!
> Where the burning cinders, blown
> From the lips of the overthrown,
> Enceladus, fills the air!

God forbid that such a horror shall light upon our land! God will [illegible] forbid it if we let his children's [illegible] cry to him from the ground. [illegible] did not forbid, could not forbid, [illegible]'s deluge from washing out [illegible]'s sin.

Yet if the deluge shall come, if [illegible] waters of death shall prevail even above the tops of the highest mountains, if the nation shall be wrapped in the flames of civil strife more dire than we have yet felt, and our indifference to the fate of our brothers shall doom us to a worse suffering, out of it all shall the new earth come. The deluge shall pass away; the land of righteousness, of brotherliness, of Christ, without caste or violence, or hatred or disloyalty, or murder, shall appear above the flood. And then will still gleam forth, nay will more brightly blaze, the fame of this just father, this brave lad, this Cornelean jewel of filial maidenhood.

Hope, then, sad hearts; hope and endure, and be patient. Pray for those who have despoiled your house of its home, its head, its heart. Pray for them by name, pray for them with all the heart. So will you be still one household, for thus prays your family in heaven. In Christ they lived, for Christ they died, with Christ they dwell. Live ye in Christ in petition for the forgiveness of your enemies, so that, if spared the martyr's fate, you may still rejoice in the martyr's crown. For thus you shall win like honor from God, with those of your own flesh and blood that have gone up—yes blessed be the Lord, gone up, up, up, up, in human love and reverence, in earthly fame, into heavenly seats, through great tribulation, and have washed their robes of blood, and made them white in the bloodier blood of the Lamb, who died for them as they died for Him, and will make them to reign with Him in peace and bliss forever and forever.

The Natural Bridge, with the tract of land upon which it is located, valued at $[illegible],000, is included in the assets of Mr. Harmon, of Virginia, who has gone into bankruptcy.

Commencement at Central Tenn. College, Nashville.

The college love feast on Sunday morning, May 12th, was a season of refreshing. Many of the students could testify that in the college they had become savingly acquainted with the plan of salvation, that they had received a great benefit while attending school both intellectually and spiritually, they could now rejoice in Christ their Savior, and looked to Him for strength to live useful lives wherever they might be. The testimony to the power of Jesus to save was clear and scriptural. At 3 o'clock the Annual Sermon was preached by Rev. C. S. Smith, of the Tennessee Conference M. E. Church, and pastor of Clark Chapel in this city. The sermon exhibited careful preparation.

The examination of the several classes began on Monday the 13th and continued through Tuesday and Wednesday. The report of the examining committee and visitors from the several patronizing conferences, speaks of the character of the examinations in the highest terms of commendation, for thoroughness and comprehensiveness. On Tuesday night Rev. A. J. Baird, D.D., of the Cumberland Prebyterian Church delivered an address full of common sense, good advice, stirring exhortation, sparkling with wit and gems of thought, delivered in an easy conversational style, yet with an earnestness that made one feel that he meant every word that he spoke. Labor, he said, is necessary to success. Poverty is not an impassable barrier to an education. A young person who has not energy and self-denial enough to get an education now, with the facilities within the reach of the colored people, would not use it well if it could be acquired without labor and self-denial. The friends of the freedmen in the North, and some in the South, have placed advantages within the reach of the colored people such as few persons of any color enjoyed a century ago. These privileges demanded labor; persevering labor, self-denial and energy on the part of the colored people to prove that they were ready to grasp the hands of those who would help them. The speaker said there was nothing in the way of the colored youth of this country rising to any position of trust and usefulness, if they, by persevering, patient toil, would prepare themselves for it. The address commanded the closest attention from the beginning, and was frequently applauded. On Wednesday night an educational meeting was addressed by Rev. J. G. Thompson, Rev. Eli Provine and Rev. S. J. Harris, of the Tennessee conference, and Rev. A. P. Melton and Rev. D. W. Hays, of the Holston conference. The speeches were short, pointed and appropriate. The Endowment Association and its work were the themes of the addresses.

The colored people, led by such men as Revs. C. Pickett, W. S. Butler, Wm. Taylor, D.D., W. L. Muir, J. D. Tate, with the speakers of the evening, have planned to raise five thousand dollars as an endowment fund for some department of the college. Over one thousand has been subscribed and some has already been paid. The speakers expressed the hope that not only the five thousand would be raised, but double that amount and more in a few years. On Thursday morning the mempers of the Theological class delivered addresses. J. J. Bass, M. D., on The Minister a Man of one Work; J. W. Picket, The Call to the Ministry; W. H. Ogleton, Homiletics; K. Fields, Analogy of Nature and Revelation; H. W. Key, Immortality of the Soul; M. Williams, The Obligations, Subjects and Mode of Baptism; W. A. McKissack, Eternal Punishment. The addresses evidenced thought, research and careful preparation. In the afternoon the graduating address of Miss A. P. Martin, who has finished the classical course, was delivered with a gracefulness, clearness of enunciation and contained thought and diction that would honor the graduates of older institutions and of fairer complexions. This was followed by an address by the President and conferring the degree of A. B. on Miss Martin and the honorary degree of D.D. on the Rev. A. S. Dobbs of the Erie conference and Rev. Samuel Rose of the Canada Methodist Episcopal Church, Book Agent of that Church. At night the Excelsior Literary Society had a public exercise, in which the members acquitted themselves so as to receive the closest attention of the large audience, until a late hour.

With these exercises closed the most prosperous year of the school. The attendance reached two hundred and eighty-seven in the college at Nashville, and one hundred and thirty-three at the Mason preparitory school. The different departments are steadily growing, and the pressure for more room to meet the growing demands of the school is already felt. The next session opens on the first Monday in September, the Medical Department on the 30th of September and the Law School at the same time. Any one desiring information can address the president, Rev. J. Bradon, Nashville, Tenn.

Science.

We are living in a remarkable age, an age of great activity in the thought-world. Men are busy searching throughout the world for its hidden treasures. Yes, more than this—they are mounting up to the very stars to ascertain their secrets. It is a fact that we are able to determine with great accuracy the composition of stars which blaze in the heavens millions of miles away by means of the spectrum. How truly is man the image of God in wisdom and knowledge! All these wonderful revelations of science tell of God, and only confirm the Christian belief.

No science is more full of the manifestations of God than Geology; yet, no one has been used more by the infidel world by which to disprove the validity of Divine revelation. But the infidel has been forced to abandon this particular field, and the Christian scientist in the presence of the rocks stands victorious. For instance, Geology says the earth is more than six thousand years old, and the Bible does not contradict the statement. It says, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," but it does not say when that "beginning" was. It may have been hundreds of thousands of years ago when the matter of the globe was created by the word and power of God. Science, when perverted, may contradict Scripture, but where rightly interpreted will not; both books, nature and revelation were written by the finger of God, and both are true.

Geology says that man was formed last of all. His fossil remains have not been found below the alluvium, though a pretense to the contrary has been made by some writers. What did Moses say about this? "Last of all he made man also." Here surely they agree, and this is the Bible starting point.

The Bible is not designed to be a text-book on science. It only alludes to science when the latter comes in its way, and then it is so worded as that when science is fully understood they will not be found in conflict, while at the same time the Bible always uses the language of common life and not that of exact science.

Infidelity in one form teaches that man is only a developed animal—that his nearest ancestor is the monkey. There are some people who seem to have had that origin we admit, but most of us feel somehow that we have had a different and higher origin. Geology completely refutes this development theory by showing that the earth has passed through many different changes. Whole races of beings have been swept away and others have suddenly come in their places. These were the revolutions in nature of which God was the author. No links mid-way between the monkey and man have been found, and if the latter sprang from the former there ought to be found some specimen somewhere, half monkey and half man. No men are so credulous as those who reject the Bible. In that old Book men have a revelation from God. There is the truth. Let us anchor to that rock and not let our feet slip, and then we shall be safe. He who is in possession of the truth as it is in Jesus is safe at all times. Mere science cannot move him from his position. Let us have at least one firm foothold. Science is vacillating. Men are ever changing their opinions, but the truth of God's word changes never.—Lectures on Science, by J. H. McCarty, D.D.

Hon. J. S. Harrison, son of the late President Harrison, was buried at North Bend, O., May 29. While the burial service was in progress, it was discovered that the grave of a young man who had died ten days before had been rifled by body-snatchers. A party immediately started for Cincinnati to search for his remains in the medical colleges there. The next day, while searching the Ohio Medical College, they discovered the body of Mr. Harrison, who had been stolen from his grave a few hours after burial. The affair has caused great excitement.

Texas contains an estimated population of 2,000,000. It receives annual increase by immigration alone of 250,000. There are produced in the State annually about 700,000 bales of cotton. The value of the crop is $30,000,000. The annual export of cotton is estimated at $10,000,000 in value, of wool at $1,500,000, of hides at 1,800,000, of beef in barrels and cans at $2,000,000 and other productions besides wheat at $3,000,000. The present wheat crop will be between six and and seven million dollars.

The country was beginning to take hope. The boundless fields of moving grain—the almost fabulous wealth which the earth promises to honest labor—had just begun to inspire the merchant, the mechanic, and the artisan with the assurance that the burthens were lifting and the skies growing brighter; that returning comfort and prosperity were coming through the re-opened "furnace doors" and the revival of the busy hum of the wheels of commerce. Suddenly vicious political schemers appear and ask a halt, and demand that the people wait until they can invoke the spirit of evil and unrest. While the country is too thoroughly aroused to allow conspirators to proceed to desperate methods, the damage to the people from the renewal of the strife once settled, as was thought forever, will by almost incalculable. Let the responsibility be placed where it belongs.—Inter-Ocean.

There shall be two Bulgarian Provinces—one north of the Balkans, under a prince; the other south of the Balkans—not to touch the Ægean Sea, and its name to be chosen by the Congress—with a Christian Government, and the Government modeled upon that of the English colonies. 2. The Turkish troops shall withdraw from the latter province and not re-enter it. 3. England deplores, but will not oppose the retrocession of Bessarabia. 4. England reserves the right to discuss in the Congress all International arrangements relating to the Danube. 5. Editorial Notes on Nashville, Tennessee.

We left Atlanta, Georgia, in company with ex-Governor Cumback, of Indiana, Friday evening, May 17, and arrived in Nashville, Tenn., Saturday morning. The day was spent in visiting places of interest. Rev. Dr. Braden, President Central Tennessee College, made us his guests. The College year that has just closed has been a very prosperous one. Much more might be added the words of our correspondent published elsewhere in commendation of this school. The four good sized brick buildings are already too small. Ground is being bargained for on which to erect an additional building at once for the accommodation of Meharry Medical School which, under the efficient work of Rev. G. W. Hubbard, M.D., is rapidly growing. We are pleased to learn that several leading physicians of Nashville were ready to give their assistance as lecturers to Dr. Hubbard during the coming year.

The College includes as a preparatory school, West Tennessee Seminary, located at Mason, Tenn. The school is in charge of Rev. C. E. and Mrs. M. B. Alexander. This school numbers 62 males and 68 females. In the College proper there are the following in the different departments: Collegiate, 5; [Scien]tific, 6; Preparatory, 12; Theological, 38; Medical, 18; Normal, 83; Academic, 175. Total in all schools, omitting names mentioned twice, males 215; females 210—425. There was one classical graduate this year.

President Braden is a tower of strength in his position. He has culture, administrative ability, aptness to teach, strength of character sufficient to remain firm in the midst of opposition, and his heart is in his work. He has given these years to the work of education among the colored people because he has faith in them. The Doctor's work is recognized in Nashville. He has been placed in charge of the State Teachers' Association by the State Superintendent of Education, and spends his vacations of each year holding Institutes throughout the State. He is universally known and spoken of in the city as a good man and successful educator. He has had, during the past year, a good corps of teachers associated with him.

Nashville boasts several institutions of learning. Governor Cumback delivered his lecture on "Invisible Some People" to a good audience on Saturday night. The lecture discussed the reality of invisible, evil influences as exhibited in the witchcrafts of the past and the slanderers of to-day who are classed under the phrase "they say." The lecture was good and was well received.

Danger Ahead.

No thoughtful man can shut his eyes to the fact that the nation is drifting toward revolution. Nothing but the common sense of the American people expressed emphatically through the press, and at the ballot box, at the coming fall election, can save the nation from anarchy and revolution. The immediate cause of alarm is the course of the House of Representatives in the Potter investigation now going on. But it is asked, are not frauds to be investigated? Certainly, and more, whosoever is guilty, if found such should be punished. But the punishment of fraud is not the object of this investigation. If so, why confine it Louisiana and Florida? Why not extend it to Mississippi, Oregon, New York City? The answer is evident. The investigation is partisan, and has for its purpose, to find some plausible excuse for putting Mr. Hayes out of the Presidential chair, and putting Mr. Tilden in. This is the interpretation put upon the investigation by such liberal minded democrats as Postmaster-General Key and A. H. Stephens. The Republican party has many bad men in it, who disgraced it and the country. We apologize not for them and had we the power would bring them to justice. But the question before the country is not one of party against party, but it is whether when the Presidential title has been settled by one Congress a following Congress can unsettle it? In this question is involved the whole question of the stability of the Government. If one Congress can put out a President which another decides is elected, then this country is Mexicanized, and anarchy, and revolution, and bloodshed will reign from Maine to the Rio Grande.

The following from the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, is quoted as expressive of our views:

"Nothing appears to us more evident than that the Presidential title, once decreed by competent authority cannot be touched, save by impeachment for malfeasance in office, or by quo warranto through a court having jurisdiction in the case. Certainly no Congress subsequent to the Forty-Fourth, has any legal authority whatever in the case. Congress has no authority not conferred by the people. The Forty-Fourth Congress, by the conditions of its accession to power, was to decide who was elected President in 1875. The legal presumption is, that the people, in casting their votes, had this fact in view and intentionally clothed them with this prerogative. Having decided the question and died, all power over the question died also, save in the manner indicated above. In the election of the Forty-Fifth Congress, this was not a question in issue and indeed could not be, for the demands of the law, which was the limitation the people had placed upon their own action in the matter, had already been met. For the Forty-Fifth Congress, or any other, to meddle with the work finished by its predecessors is plainly an act of usurpation. Had the law conferred the right of reviewing the Presidential title upon the present Congress, can any one say it would not have been constituted differently?

Let not the people be beguiled by the cry of peace, peace, when there is no peace. The whirlwind of revolution is around us. We can control it now; a few months hence, it will defy our utmost power, save at the expense of a war, which closing will leave nothing but the wreck of free institutions upon the fair fields of liberty. Have we forgotten how incredulous we were of danger in 1861, laughed at its portents, till the cannon of Fort Sumter changed our countenances and sent us to the field, while the homes we left behind were filled with the voice of weeping, there to expiate our [illegible] and folly in blood?

If ever our country called for the people to act inspired by a love of country superior to party attachments, it is now. We should throw [illegible] dogs of war an extra [illegible] hold them tight, yes, [illegible]

Settled.

The [illegible] of the M. E. [illegible] the Cape May settlement, by which all property disputes between that church and our own are practically settled, and by which each church recognizes the other as a "legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism." The adoption of this settlement as final by both churches settles the question of fraternity so far as official action can. The responsibility of unfraternal acts toward our men or churches in the South must now be charged to individual men or churches committing those acts.

Before the Southern General Conference met we spoke of the danger that fraternity would be hindered by that body placing upon the Cape May agreement an interpretation, which would demand the practical withdrawal of our church from the Southern States. That sentiment had been strongly endorsed by nearly all the Southern Methodist papers, and by many leading Methodists. Had it not been for the positive rulings of the Southern Bishops at Atlanta, by which no resolutions were entertained which did more than simply receive the Cape May agreement as a finality, it is not improbable that action would have been taken looking to a redrawing of the old territorial line, north of which should be our church and south of which should be the Southern Church. Such a resolution was read by Dr. Edwards, of Virginia, but was ruled out on the ground stated above.

The resolution adopted by the Southern Conference was this:

Resolved, That the report of our Commissioners on Formal Fraternity be spread on the Journal, and the documents presented therewith be deposited in the archives of the General Conference; and that the thanks of the Conference are due, and are hereby tendered, to the Commissioners for the eminently satisfactory manner in which they discharged their onerous and delicate task.

With this action nothing is left but for each church to carry out in good faith the pledges of the agreement. It would have been worse than folly for the Southern Church to have insisted upon an interpretation looking to the re-establishment of the tentative line of separation defined in 1844. The M. E. Church has no thought of any fraternity which requires a sacrifice of her Southern membership of 400,000. Let us now have peace and brotherly kindness between the ministers and people of the two churches everywhere.

Five Colored Men Hung.

The following special dispatch to the New Orleans Democrat, dated June 6, we publish in full. Some of the statements have been denied, but there is probably no doubt about the men being hung. Such an organization as is spoken of among colored people for the purpose of establishing "a nation of their own," if it exists, is bad, and can only lead to trouble to its leaders. The would-be assassins deserve the full punishment the law gives, but on the other hand the lynching of five men, when professedly they were in the hands of the law can only be condemned. We will wait for further information:

Bayou Sara, June 6.—On Sunday night last, June 2, as Dr. Wm. B. Archer, was returning to his home from the house of his neighbor, Major Burton, about 10 p.m., about midway between the residence of Capt. O. Lejeune and his own, he was fired on by six negro men, who were lying in ambush waiting for him. Five of the negroes had double-barreled guns and one a musket. Dr. Archer was on horseback and riding on top of the levee. The assassins were concealed behind two large cotton-wood trees, standing within a few feet of the levee, and all the negroes fired as the doctor was passing these trees, his clothes being riddled with bullet holes and he was thrown from his horse, but fortunately not much injured.

The assassins took to their heels, running in different directions, but it was ascertained who the parties were who had attempted the foul act, and on Tuesday morning a large number of citizens collected together at Raccourci, where the act was committed. A jury of twelve of our best citizens, the most of them old gray-headed men, was chosen, who after a lengthy and thorough examination found the prisoners, five in number, one having made his escape, guilty of shooting at Dr. Wm. B. Archer with intent to kill.

Many witnesses were examined, all colored, and two of the prisoners were allowed to make their statements, having requested per[illegible] to do so. They stated that they intended to kill Dr. Archer on [illegible] night, and after making away with him they were to kill Mr. O. Lejeune, Mr. William Picquet and Mr. Frank Burton; they stated also that they belonged to an organized club, the object of which was to kill the leading white men in the country and establish a nation of their own; they gave the names of many members, names of their president, vice president, and a general exposé of their plans.

After the examination was closed the prisoners were conducted to a shady grove, by all of the citizens present, and after mature deliberation it was resolved to turn them over to the law. The prisoners were placed in charge of a party and started in the direction of the court-house, but had not proceeded far before they were intercepted, taken by force and hung, all five of them.

Meridian, Miss., District Conference.

This Conference was held at Meridian, May 1, 2, 3 and 4, Rev. M. Adams, the Presiding Elder, in the chair. Conference was opened by reading a Scripture lesson, singing and prayer. Twenty-four traveling preachers answered to roll call and several local preachers, with other members, were present. C. P. Clemens was elected Secretary; W. D. Sims, Assistant Secretary. The various committees were appointed which did well the work assigned to them. High ground was taken on all the reforms of the day. The temperance committee read a long and able report, also the committee on education, of which the Presiding Elder was chairman. We have a high school at Meridian, a branch of Shaw University at Holly Springs. Meridian District will not be behind in any of the great church enterprises. Our motto is "go forward," and this we intend to do. The preachers reported their charges in good condition, and are hoping for better things in the future. We want more religion and education, and the Meridian District is seeking both. Her preachers are in the prime of life and able to do good work. Preaching at night brought out large congregations to hear the word of God. Every meeting was full of interest. During the Conference there was held a temperance meeting which did much good, and one educational meeting. Our people are advancing; the days of darkness are passed; the true light now shines and we hope to walk in the light. On Sabbath Rev. G. W. Barney preached the sacramental sermon at 11 o'clock a.m. The sermon was a good one. More than one hundred communed. In the evening, at 3 o'clock, Rev. M. Adams preached a missionary sermon to a large congregation. A deep interest was awakened in us all by listening to the discourse. All were moved to do more, and go forward in the discharge of duty as ministers and people. During the Conference thirty dollars were taken up to aid our high school, which must and will be sustained. Education is what we want and must have. The preachers separated in love to one another and with new vigor to preach the Gospel and be more useful in the future. The next Conference is to meet at Macon, Miss., in the fall.

C. P. CLEMENS, Sec'y.

From Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. Editor:—Knowing how you like to hear from the churches and Sunday-schools, I thought I would write you a short letter. Yesterday we had a beautiful day, and at evening service had a good congregation, being crowded at night, as it was communion, Dr. Braden and Bro. C. Pickett, our Presiding Elder, being with us. Bro. C. W. Woods, our pastor, preached. We like him very much. I believe he will do much good among us, by the help of the Lord. Yesterday was only his second Sunday here. We've had six accessions, four Sunday night and two last night. Yesterday afternoon we had general class-meeting. A great many spoke, some having been in the service of the Lord over forty years, and some only a few months. We had a glorious meeting. At Sunday-school yesterday morning we had one hundred and seventy-eight present. The infant class was so large we had to divide it. Have now infant class Nos. 1 and 5. There are about forty in one and thirty-five in the other. You have visited our school so you know what a host of little folks we have. Yesterday being the first Sunday in the month, and the day set apart for our missionary collection (the Sunday-school is organized into a missionary society), we took up six dollars and five cents. Our pastor gave us a good missionary address, showing the distance of land where once the work of missionaries extended, and to where its extent is to-day. He also told the children how Bishop Simpson was brought into the Sunday-school, how hard he was to keep there, and what sort of a man he made, and all about his missionary work, and what he is to-day. The children paid strict attention, and seemed to enjoy his talk very much. We will have our annual pic-nic on the 20th of this month. We anticipate a nice time. I wish we could have you with us. I must close for this time; will write to you again soon.

Meridian District, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor:—My District comprises twenty-six appointments, and in the round just completed I have held twenty-two quarterly conferences myself, and held four by proxy. I am glad to say that there has been an increase in the membership. One hundred and fifty joined during the quarter. On the Garlandsville circuit we licensed a boy twelve years old. He had several times gone to his pastor for authority to exhort, but his youth kept the pastor from granting it until the quarterly conference should meet. He reads and writes well and exhorts with power. He claims to be divinely called to his work.

The instructions of our last conference under Bishop Harris, that the missionary money given to the church is to be reported to the stewards, and go into their accounts with that of the preachers and presiding elder, are being carried out in this District and have a good effect. The people are beginning to understand what the Missionary Society is doing for them. This knowledge leads the people to give better to all the benevolent collections. Only give our people the light and they will follow it.

The SOUTHWESTERN is popular among the preachers and people, and we only regret that more do not subscribe. The hard times press sorely on our people. But from nearly every point we send a few cash subscribers.

The Meridian Academy is increasing in attendance and influence. Our Sunday-school at Meridian is a good one, one hundred and seventy-five being in attendance.

M. ADAMS, P. E.

Our School Work in the Alabama Conference.

Dear Editor:—Your paper makes its regular weekly visits to our school Reading Room. Your readers perhaps desire to know how we are getting on. Our school has just closed one of its most prosperous sessions. One hundred and ten students have been enrolled during the year. The first class of four graduated, doing themselves and the institution credit. Our work here is altogether with the white people. There are very few colored people in this part of the State. The M. E. Church has about six thousand white members in Alabama, and about the same number of colored members. The colored people have two very good schools, the Alabama conference has but one—the Andrews Institute. This school is doing a great work and proposes to do still more. The church is a success here.

JOHN T. BLAKEMORE.

Teachers' Institutes.

A series of Teachers' Institutes will be held in West Tennessee, beginning at Trenton on the 14th of June, at Covington, Tipton county, on the 18th, and at Somerville on the 21st. Others will be held at different places in Tennessee. These Institutes are held under the sanction of the State Superintendent, Hon. L. Trousdale, and are conducted by the teachers of Fisk University, Nashville Institute and Central Tennessee College, and others. The object to be accomplished is to raise the standard of qualification among colored teachers, and to rouse an interest in the subject of popular education among the colored people. The whole work is planned by the members of the State Teachers' Institute, who propose to do the work as a gratuity to the cause of education.

J. BRADEN,
Pres't. State Teach's' Institute.

Rev. Dr. Braden, writing from Nashville, says: Rev. Alex. Meharry, D.D., of the Cincinnati Conference, his wife, and Rev. Samuel Meharry, of Shawnee Mound, Ind., with his neice, Miss Lettie Meharry, spent several days here visiting the city, educational institutions and the Hermitage, the home and burial place of Andrew Jackson. They passed on to Athens, Tenn., to be present at the Commencement exercises of the Wesleyan University. Rev. B. Sears, D.D., L.L.D., the General Agent of the Peabody Fund, and Rev. Dr. Rust, the active friend of the freedmen and Corresponding Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society, visited the Central Tennessee College on the 30th of May. Dr. Sears expressed himself very highly pleased with the buildings and grounds of the Institution.

Woodward Circuit, Miss.

We invite all traveling and local preachers, exhorters, class-leaders, and other church workers of this vicinity to meet at Shady Grove Church, Calhoun county, on Saturday, June 29th, to take into consideration the best means of advancing the work of the Lord in this community, and for better securing co-operation in holding special and protracted church meetings.

There will be a Sunday-scool celebration at Mt. Pisgah church on Sunday, August 17, to which all are invited.

W. B. KENDRICK, Pastor.

Austin District Conference.

The District Conference of Austin District, West Texas Conference, will convene at Luling, Caldwell County, on Tuesday the tenth day of October next. The Conference will be composed of all the traveling and local preachers, the exhorters, the district stewards, one Sunday-school Superintendent and one class leader from each pastoral charge in the district. Do not fail to be present, brethren, at this central point, and be there on time; suitable accommodations will be provided for all.

S. GATES, P. E.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. C. L. Crump, Batesville, Miss.: "We have just closed a successful protracted meeting that lasted for three weeks. There were eleven conversions and twenty-two accessions to the church. We bless the Lord for his goodness."

Rev. H. Henderson, Clinton, Miss. "We have five churches on this work, all in good condition. There have been eleven recent conversions, and in all, during this year, fifty-two. We have a flourishing Temperance society, with 105 members enrolled under the banner of total abstinence."

Rev. G. W. Townsend, Boerne, Texas: "We have now five appointments on this work. There are but two church buildings—at the other preaching places we get the use of houses that will for the present answer the purpose. At this point we have an interesting Sunday-school. The teacher of our day school, Miss Fannie Hermann, is the very efficient superintendent. All the scholars not already professing christians, have recently been at the altar as seekers of salvation. The spiritual condition of the church and Sunday-school is good."

Rev. A. E. P. Albert, Houma, La.: "The Houma church is doing well. Last Sabbath (June 2nd) we collected $100.30 at our "Basket Meeting." Bro. Lynch, from Thibodaux, with about one hundred of his friends "came over and helped us." We are going to have our church ceiled with the money we collected at the basket meeting. The church is alive in Houma, and her influence is being felt morally, religiously, and in temperance reform. Praise the Lord for a living church."

General Religious Items.

"Wesley clock," the first Methodist church clock in America—the gift of Mr. Wesley—is still in service in the main audience room of old John Street church, New York.

The colored Baptist Association of Virginia, at their annual meeting at Portsmouth, held recently, resolved to send Rev. Solomon Cosby to Africa as their missionary. The association also appointed a Foreign Mission Board, which will have its headquarters in Richmond.

The American Unitarian Association received last year $237,693. The total invested fund is about $155,000. Of the moneys expended $5,000 was given to the church in New Orleans, and certain sums had been given in aid of Wilberforce University, (African Methodist,) and for colored students in Harvard University, and Meadville Theological Seminary, (Reformed German.)

Over 15,000 persons, including Arabs, Turks, Chinese and Japanese, besides Europeans, received portions of Scriptures on the opening day of the Paris Exposition from the kiosk of the Crystal Palace Bible stand. The pressure of the eager crowd for copies was so great that the windows of the kiosk had to be closed a dozen times.

Recently, when a resolution to condemn a "Retreat," held by fifteen ministers of the Church of Ireland, came before the General Synod, the Archbishop of Dublin said he would take upon himself the entire responsibility of giving his sanction to the holding of the recent retreat. He had done so under a wrong impression, and would grant no such permission in the future. He had heard, with great pain, of the practice of auricular confession on that occasion. This explanation had a pacificatory effect on the Synod.

General News Items.

GALVESTON, Texas, June 7.—A News special states that Lerdo was reinforced to-day by 300 government troops from Guerrero, under General Cato. The revolutionists have retreated. A second party has left in pursuit.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The Senate by a vote of 55 yeas to 2 nays passed the bill modifying the act authorizing a contract with Capt. Eads for improving the mouth of the Mississippi river.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Stewart Woman's Hotel was formally opened to-day to the general public under the name of the Park Avenue Hotel.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 8.—The wheat harvest was begun in this county under the most favorable prospects. A well-informed farmer asserts that the crop is the best but one he has ever seen. The grain is unusually large and full and chaff light. Crops which three weeks since were thought to be a failure will be a full average. Harvest hands command from $1 50 to $2 per day, the latter being the prevailing price.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Mr. Ferry, president pro tem of the Senate, has just appointed the committee asked for by Senator Matthews to investigate the Louisiana matter. The committee consists of Messrs. Edmunds, Allison, Ingalls, Hoar, Davis of Illinois, Whyte and Jones of Florida.

WHASAINGTON, June 8.—Mr. Spencer, of Alabama, introduced in the Senate to-day a resolution for an investigation of the charges of fraud, intimidations, etc., in connection with the presidential election of 1876 in South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana, and concerning the election in Alabama, Mississippi and Oregon, and also of the facts connected with the dissolution of the Packard government in Louisiana and the establishment of the Kellogg government, and gave notice that he would call it up every day until a vote upon it was reached.

BERLIN, June 9.—Several houses of this city have been searched by the police and a number of persons arrested. Herr Moast, Socialist member of the Reichstag, has been sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment for persisting in addressing a meeting at Chemnitz after the police had declared it closed. Eight persons were tried yesterday for using disloyal language in speaking of the Emperor. Seven of the prisoners were sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment. Judgement was deferred in one case.

BERLIN, June 10.—The Emperor left his bed yesterday and sat in a chair for three hours. His appetite is increasing, and his recovery generally is considered unprecedently rapid. It is expected that the Emperor will start for Babelsburg in a fortnight.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Mr. Evarts has received a telegram signifying acceptance of the invitation to an international monetary congress by both France and Italy. Mr. Evarts said in conversation las evening that with the acceptance of these two great powers the holding of the congress was a fixed fact.

NEW YORK, June 10.—M. Leon Chotteau, the distinguished French economist and publicist, who came to this country a short time ago with a view to improve the commercial relations between the United States and France, and to establish a commercial treaty between the two countries, has now completed his mission and will sail for Europe on Wednesday. Mr. Chotteau has made a flying tour through the country. He arrived on the fourteenth of March last, and has delivered speeches in behalf of his project in nearly every State in the Union. He is well satisfied with his visit and has organized committees in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, New Orleans and San Francisco, which will send delegates to France to the congress which will be held in Paris on the seventh of August next.

The debt of the United States reached its highest figure October 31, 1865, when it reached $2,808,549,438, of which $2,352,957,477 bore interest. March 1, 1878, the total debt of the government was $2,114,889,385, of which $1,741,782,500 was bearing interest. Thus it appears that the interest-bearing debt of the United States has been reduced $611,174,977. The annual interest on the interest-bearing debt October, 1865, was $149,421,362. By the reduction of the bonded debt and the funding of a part of the debt at a lower rate of interest, the annual interest of the public debt March 1, 1878, was at the rate of $92,063,358, showing a reduction in the annual interest account amounting to more than $57,000,000.

JUNE 23, 1878.—THE DECREE OF CYRUS. SCRIPTURE.—2 Chron. 36: 22, 23.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned."—Is. 40: 2.

TOPIC.—"He is faithful that promised."—Heb. 10: 23.

[Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.]

The Promise (22).—If the people of Judah believed the words of the Lord which had been spoken to them by the prophets, at no time could their exile have been a hopeless one. It had a definite limit fixed to it. "The word of the Lord spoken by the mouth of Jeremiah," was that they should serve the king of Babylon for seventy years. This bow of promise was arched over the years of their captivity. No matter how hard was their lot, nor how dark was the immediate prospect before them, this assurance shone on the firmament of the future.

There was one, at least, who knew that the time of release was ripening. And that one was Daniel. He knew it by studying the word of God. "I, Daniel, understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah the prophet that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem. Dan. 9: 2. Like those in [illegible], who were looking for [illegible] of the Messiah, he was [illegible] for the consolation of Israel."

When the time came for the word of the Lord to be accomplished, the fulfillment was not brought about, as in the case of the deliverance from Egypt, by signs and wonders and plagues. The miracle—for miracle it still was—was brought about in a quieter way. "The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus," to [illegible] promise. with 7,337 slaves. Among these were some from the kingdom of Israel. The number was not large, and yet it well compared with the numbers spoken of as being carried away.

After their arrival at Jerusalem, first they put up an altar on which, morning and evening they failed not to offer sacrifices to the God who had brought them back. Every one freely contributed what he could every year towards the funds necessary for the rebuilding of the temple. So soon as crops could be grown, they exchanged their produce for the cedars of Lebanon, for timbers to be used in the erection of the house of God. At last the foundations were laid with ecstatic and solemn joy. The ancient men who had seen the first house in all its glory "when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes wept with a loud voice and many shouted aloud for joy."

The lesson of the captivity effectually cured the people of their idolatry. It was never more known among them. The promise of a return at the expiration of the seventy years had been coupled with this condition: "And ye shall find me, when ye shall search for me with all your hearts." Jer. 29: 13. They would not have come back at all had that not have been complied with. When they returned, they did so shorn of all their former political strength. Never more were they to be a great national power. And yet God was to set up a kingdom which was to overcome all kingdoms, and itself be everlasting. Ah, he has no need of conquering battalions to do his work! All the force with which he intends to overcome the world is the force of love. It is to work with the silence of leaven and not the crash of a hammer. It is to win its victories within and not without. "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

Reverence in the Pulpit.

The pulpit is a sacred place. It is the altar of God. It is the audience chamber of Jehovah into which the preacher and man of God enters to deliver solemn messages, and make supplications for the sins of the people, and offer praise and thanksgiving. There he stands between the living and the dead in sin.

There is no place on earth where human feet stand so burdened with fearful responsibilities to God and to man, as the pulpit of salvation. "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet," [illegible] God to Moses in the presence [illegible] burning bush, "for the place [illegible] thou standest is holy ground." "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God," said Solomon. Invisible angels stand around [illegible] pulpit, and the Son of God is there looking on and sees and hears.

No monarch on earth admits his subjects to his throne-room so heedlessly as many enter the pulpit—the [illegible] room of God. Many pastors [illegible] preachers enter the pulpit and reverently bend the knee in silent prayer. Others enter the pulpit as [illegible] haste, and, without a pause, lay [illegible] the Bible—God's own book—[illegible] rudely turn over its sacred [illegible] if it was a ledger or common [illegible] day-book. It is not suited to inspire a holy reverence in the [illegible] and minds of a worshiping assembly. It is not done "decently and in order," becoming the house of God.

Congress has been asked for an appropriation of $50,000 to make a preliminary survey from Liberia one or two thousand miles into Central Africa, and to report upon the country, its population, productions, and the practicability of the road. Should the report of the survey be favorable, a company is to be formed to build the road, who are to commence by putting on a line of twenty steamers from Philadelphia or New York to Liberia, which are to carry out railroad material, goods suitable to the African trade, and to call at Norfolk and Charleston for colored railroad laborers and colonists, and bring return cargoes of palm-oil, coffee, sugar, ivory, gold, and other African products, the trade in which, it is believed, will be vastly increased as it reaches the interior.—Telescope.

A Tea Party.

The ladies of the Histrionic Society will give a tea party, June 15th, (Saturday), at Winans Chapel, N. O., on St. Denis Street, between Fourth and Washington. The money that is raised is to go toward erecting a parsonage for First Street M. E. Church. Admission 10 cents. Committee of arrangements: W. S. Wilson, C. C. Crane, N. B. Kennedy, P. P. Pollard and H. McKenna. The object is a good one and we hope the attendance will be large and the proceeds remunerative. We thank Brother Campbell for tickets.

An explosive compound, composed of nitro glycerine and collodion, has been invented by the inventor of dynamite. It is fifty per cent. more effective than that substance and has other advantages over it. Russia and Italy have adopted it for filling shells.

Married.

At Camp Parapet, Louisiana, in the M. E. Church, by Rev. R. W. Overton, May 9, 1878, George Williams to Miss Mary Bundy.

Also, at the same place by the same, May 29, 1878, John Adams to Miss Isabella Bundy.

The brides are sisters and both members of the Methodist Church.

Died.

Esther Williams was born at Cascade, Rockingham county, Virginia, in 1799, on the farm of Col. Enos Williams. She went to Nashville, Tenn., with Mr. Jimmy Williams when about 11 years old. She stayed at Nashville five years, then went to Columbus, Tenn. Soon after she was sold to John Goeff, and he took her to Tangipahoa, La. She stayed with Goeff's family about nine years. She was then sold to Frederick Starns, and removed to his place, 18 miles from Tangipahoa, and has been connected with his family and descendants ever since. She left Columbus, Tenn., on the 8th day of August, 1815, and was then sixteen years of age. She was seventy-nine years of age when she died—May 16, 1878. Sister Esther Williams was converted forty years ago, and has been connected with the Methodist Church ever since. For the twelve years just past she has been a member of First Street M. E. Church, and died in the triumphs of faith. There are four children, Margaret Ambrose, Julia Ambrose and Melissa Ball, and the only son, Greenberry Williams, are left behind to mourn her loss. The grandchildren are fourteen in number, and all, old and young men, tenderly attached to the aged pilgrim, now safely housed in the mansions of bliss prepared for all who by faith in Jesus Christ endure to to end.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Inhaling Tube!
AND
COMMON AIR WILL CURE
CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $2.50, or call at his residence. Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. BEERS, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately. N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. ADAMS, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. may?-tf

Men Wanted.

The great want of this age is men! Men who are not for sale. Men who are honest, sound from center to circumference, true to the heart's core. Men who fear the Lord and hate covetousness. Men who will condemn wrong in friend or foe, in themselves as well as in others. Men whose consciences are steady as the needle to the pole. Men who will stand for the right if the heavens totter and the earth reels. Men who can tell the truth and look the world and the devil right in the eye. Men that neither brag nor run. Men who neither swagger nor flinch. Men who have courage without whistling for it, and joy without shouting to bring it. Men in whom the current of everlasting life runs still and deep, and strong. Men careful of God's honor and careless of men's applause. Men too large for sectarian limits, and too strong for sectarian bands. Men who will not fail or be discouraged till judgment be set in the earth. Men who know their message and tell it. Men who know their duty and do it. Men who know their place and fill it. Men who mind their own business. Men who will not lie. Men who are not too lazy to work, nor too proud to be poor. Men who are willing to eat what they have paid for. Men who know in whom they have believed. Men whose feet are on the everlasting rock. Men who are not ashamed of their hope. Men who are strong with divine strength, wise with the wisdom that cometh from above, and loving with the love of Christ. Men of God.

Politeness of Great Men.

Truly great men are polite by instinct to their inferiors. It is one [illegible] of their greatness to be [illegible]ful for others.

[illegible] greatest men in the world [illegible] noted for their politeness. [illegible], many have owed their greatness [illegible]inly to their popular manners, which induced the people whom they pleased to give them an opportunity to show their power.

Many years ago the errand boy employed by a publishing house in a great city was sent to procure from Edward Everett the proof sheets of a book he had been examining. The boy entered the vast library, lined from floor to ceiling with books, in fear and trembling. He stood in awe of this famous man, and dreaded to meet him.

But Mr. Everett, turning from the desk where he was writing, received the lad with re-assuring courtesy, bade him sit down, chatted kindly [illegible] he looked for the proof-sheets, and asked [illegible]

"[illegible] I put a paper around them [illegible]" as politely as if his visitor [illegible] President.

The Class-Leader.
His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."
12mo. $1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a fine, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 3, 1877.

MR. EDITOR;—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (more dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 25 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuffs," "dusts," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering Coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

3. That is a beautiful picture where they brought little children to Christ and He put His hands on them and blessed them. Those little ones were not afraid of Christ. It would be interesting to know their after history. Tradition says that one of the great martyrs of the early church was one of those children so blessed by the Savior. He gathered the little lambs in His arms.

None are too old to need the Shepherd's care. Don't let go the hand of Christ for a moment. Look back, brother. In the dark days of your life, when you stumbled, fell, your hand was out of Christ's. You had let go that hand.

4. Those hands grasped the hands of the sinking Peter. Peter made an experiment which redounds to the good of the saints in all ages. I sometimes think that Peter is the most instructive character in the New Testament. So impulsive, so generous, so quick to repent. Poor Peter sinking in the waves is a pitiable object. But he cries to Jesus for help, and grasps the outstretched hand. How many millions sinking have been encouraged to grasp the ever outstretched hand of Jesus! So powerful is that hand that none are able to pluck out of its grasp those it lays hold of to save. On this rests the final perseverance of the saints. The assurance is, God will hold on unto the end. Here is a precious thought for us as we come to the table of the Lord to-day. The merit of Christ's sacrifice is sufficient. No one who comes to Him will be cast out, and Christ assures that all whom the Father hath given unto Him will come to Him. With one of the greatest of Christians of all ages we can exclaim, I have no fear, Christ died for me.

5. The hands of the Savior are evidence of His having suffered for us. You remember, in that room with the closed doors, how He convinced by His pierced hands and wounded side the doubting desciple. Those pierced hands have lifted a world [illegible]! What wonderful tri[illegible]! Those hands in six days [illegible] the world, and now are they [illegible] world.

... lar directions, and will serve as an encouragement to these elect women in pushing their work to complete and effective organization. This Women's Baptist Society works in harmony with the other Missionary Societies of the church. Among the providential things named leading to this organization a year ago the following is given:

Prominent, also, among the influences which finally resulted in the organization of the society, were the appeals for help which came from Miss Moore, a devoted Christian woman, who was laboring alone among the colored people in New Orleans, supported by a few Sunday-schools and mission circles in northern Illinois. Still later a Woman's Missionary Society was formed among the native women of the Indian Territory, by Mrs. C. R. Blackall, of Chicago; and soon after a most touching appeal was presented from them through Maj. G. W. Ingalls a devoted friend and missionary to the Indians, to the women of Chicago to aid them in sending the Gospel to their native sisters among the wild tribes.

Mrs. C. Swift, of Chicago, Corresponding Secretary, read the first annual report, in which the origin, objects and organization of the Society were given. The field is divided into three parts: 1. Our immediate surroundings; 2. The colored race of 5,000,000 in the South; and, 3. The Indian women of the far West, and the semi-pagans of Mexico. There are now nine missionaries on the field—four in New Orleans, one in Columbia, S. C., and four native missionaries among the Indians. Four of these are missionaries of the American Baptist Home Mission Society. The reports of special work were full of encouragement, warranting its being prosecuted with greater zeal and earnestness. The report was accepted.

Mrs. Dr. D. B. Cheney, of Chicago, said she became interested in the home missionaries in making out an abstract from the report of their work in Ohio. The sacrifices those men made, and their noble wives with them, will never be known here. When she went to the Pacific slope she was more profoundly impressed with the necessity of this work. If the Eastern or Central workers knew the needs of the frontier States, they would make greater efforts to relieve them.

Mrs. Dr. Nathan Bishop, of New York city, made a short address, in which she said: "We in New York have but recently begun to work in connection with this Society. In one respect our work in New York is peculiar. We are endeavoring to draw into our Society young ladies and girls, those who have felt that they could never give anything outside of what they give to their church. They are glad to give the small sum of two cents per week to aid this Society. Not one cent will be taken from the old Society. The interest from this will not draw from that, but tend to cause greater interest in the Home Mission Society. Some of the New York churches have from three to five engaged all the time, making articles and sending them to those most in need. A great blessing has come to us in doing this work."

Mrs. Crouse said she hoped any one present would feel at liberty to speak.

Dr. Nathan Bishop, of New York, said: "We are living in a most remarkable generation—a generation split in two. The war cut off half a million of our young men, who if they had not thus died would have been husbands to the young women that were raised up to be their wives. A vast field has opened up for these women to engage themselves in. They had education and culture and piety, everything but means to go to their work. It is said two-thirds of the members of [illegible] churches of the West are women, and full one-half of [illegible] are poor. It was a good idea [illegible] for large contributions; [illegible] a very large sum to be [illegible] by women. Men's societies [illegible] but they employ missionaries [illegible] require a salary on [illegible] and so family may [illegible] by women [illegible] than $15,000 [illegible] It is a practical [illegible] to send mission[illegible] [illegible] and one [illegible]

Disbursements have been, in cash, $3,401.56. There remains in the treasury nearly $700.

The following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. J. N. Crouse, of Chicago.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. C. Swift, of Chicago.

Treasurer—Mrs. R. R. Donnelly.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. J. Clement, of Chicago.

Editress—Mrs. A. Blackburn, Oak Park, Ill.

Executive Committee—Mrs. E. C. Baldwin, Mrs. G. W. Northrop, Mrs. C. R. Blackall, Mrs. J. L. Dickerson, Mrs. A. B. Meeker, Mrs. W. E. Peters, Mrs. C. A. Tinker, Mrs. Prof. Mitchell, Mrs. A. Owens.

Vice-Presidents were also elected from thirteen different States.

Mrs. J. L. Dickerson, in a brief, happy way, explained the workings of the Society, the mode of organizing them in small places, and urged upon all the importance of engaging in this work. Mrs. Knowlton, recently from China, and Mrs. Lansing, of Wisconsin, congratulated the Society upon the position they had reached, the work they were doing, and the prospects of usefulness open before them.

Dr. W. W. Everts, of Chicago, said the guarding of the ancient temple by the women, and their feeding its altar's flame, was but a symbol of the duty of women in every age. The Gospel recognizes this position for women. They are like the little wheels in the vast machine, that may be out of sight, but move all the rest. Women are the heart of the home, the church and society, and they must lead humanity to Christ. Hannah More's record was most wonderful, but many to-day can have just such a record. They are opening up the way for a great work. May they be blessed in what they are trying to do.

Dr. M. B. Anderson, of Rochester, being present, was called upon to say a few words. He said he had been profoundly impressed with the importance of women's work since his trip in the South. There are many freedmen taught under the care of the Home Mission Society—where are the women that are to be their wives? How and where are they being educated? Women must go and teach them the elements and details of morality. There is no separation between the Home and Foreign Mission Societies. We must take care of ourselves religiously. Rome tumbled when the barbarians came down on it, because it was not well fortified; interest had been directed away from it and the shell was left to fall. The social problems that now disturb us will be met by sanctifying the home, by bringing womanly influence to bear upon them. This Society will be one of the chief supports of Foreign Missions. These two forces go together, and are halves of one golden globe.

East Tennessee Wesleyan University.

This institution has just closed the best year of its history, and looks out upon the year to come more hopefully than ever before. The attendance during the year has been 264, as follows: in the classical course, 49; scientific, 105; irregulars, 48; music and drawing, 53. In this enumeration a few are counted twice, but the number of persons enrolled is 230. Nine graduated in the classical department, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and five in the scientific department, with the degree of Bachelor of Science. One of the best students and most promising young men in the classical department, Henry C. Moore, died a few weeks since.

The anniversary in all of its features and as a whole was of unusual interest. The examinations were close and eminently satisfactory. On Sabbath, the 2d inst., Bishop Haven preached the Baccalaureate sermon, which was of rare excellence, and delighted the large audience which was present. At night, Dr. Rust preached a sermon which for clearness of thought, elegance of style and forcible presentation of evangelical truth is seldom excelled. Both of these eminent ministers have made a deeper impression upon the people of Athens than ever before and either of them will be greeted with [illegible] [illegible] they can return to [illegible] [illegible] Monday and Tuesday were [illegible] examinations and business [illegible] attending to their [illegible] of its interests carefully.

As heretofore, this was especially true as regards the finances. All of the collections made by the president or agents, all of the receipts and expenditures by the treasurer or other officers of the board, were examined and passed upon, and itemized reports placed on file for future reference or examination at any time by any parties who may have an interest in doing so.

Three vacancies in the board had occurred, which were filled by the election of C. W. Deime, of Knoxville, J. P. Bryant and F. O. Beaman, of Athens. Others, whose term of service had expired, viz.: J. H. Hornsby, W. H. Briant, J. S. Matthews and J. F. Spence, were re-elected for three years. The faculty was strengthened by the addition of Emory Morgan, of Baltimore, a young man of rare abilities and attainments, who is soon to return from travels and studies in Europe. All will be glad to know that N. G. Taylor, D. D. is to continue in the chair of Belles Letters under an arrangement which will allow him to travel a part of the year, in the North and South, in the interest of the institution. So much credit has been given to President Spence for the ability and success with which he has managed the finances of the institution that the equal prosperity which has attended the work within its halls has seemed to be in a measure overlooked. His labors as administrator and head of the University have not been exceeded by his financial skill. He is a success in every respect.

On Tuesday the under-graduate exhibition occurred, in which nine gentlemen, three from the Athenian, three from Philomathean and three from the Theological Societies had been appointed by these bodies, severally, to compete for a prize which had been offered for the best oration on this occasion. All did well. We might say, without exaggeration, splendidly. The prize was awarded to David H. Taylor of the Philomathean Society. While none complained of this award, some thought that others were also deserving of remembrance for their efforts, which was true, and a second prize was offered, which was awarded to R. J. Cook, of the Theological Society, and a third awarded to J. W. Bayless, of the Athenian Society. The occasion was highly entertaining and a happy illustration of all coming out ahead. May these young men do as well in life.

The great day dawned. Wednesday morning was bright and the air delightful. A Latin salutatory and fourteen commencement orations bubbled on the lips of fourteen irrepressible young men. All did themselves and their Alma Mater each high credit that it seems almost unjust to discriminate in favor of any, and yet we will remark that at least Messrs. Wright, Wilson, Zeigler, Waugh and Fowler are elegant and forcible speakers of whom any institution might be justly proud. Every production on that day was meritorious. Evidently the degrees given had been earned. The honorary degree of Master of Arts was conferred on Prof. Ketron, of Arcadia, Tenn., and of Doctor of Divinity on Rev. E. Brown, of Baltimore, Rev. C. W. Cushing, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Rev. James Mitchell of Atlanta, Ga.

During all of the exercises instrumental and vocal music was interspersed under the direction of Prof. Hacker, the efficient teacher of music of the University, and by the University orchestra. Among the visitors present we observed Dr. Meharry, of Ohio, and his brother of Indiana, who take a deep interest in our educational work in the South. But few, if any, institutions in the Church are doing more real service for Methodism and the country than the East Tennessee Wesleyan University. The President and faculty are noble men and deserving of great credit for their self-sacrificing and heroic labors.—Methodist Advocate.

The "Decline of Methodism."

Before proceeding to the inquiry about the correctness or otherwise of any or all of these theories for accounting for the "decline of Methodism," it might not be amiss to examine into the truth or falsehood of the primary proposition. Is Methodism declining? The oft-told story about the learned discussion as to why it is that a living fish put into a vessel of water does not increase its weight may properly be here considered. The great savants to whom the question was submitted had each his own scientific solution of the problem—no two agreeing, however; till at length it was proposed to test the truth of the proposition itself by experiment, when of course it proved to be incorrect. So in this case it might be wise first to know whether or not Methodism is declining before any more strength is expended in determining the cause of such a decline. We will, therefore, compare the statistics of the body—as to its substantial conditions—for two distinct years, at an interval of eleven years from each other:

Years	Full Members.	Effective Ministers.	Church Property.
1866.......	871,113	6,287	$30,014,962
1877.......	1,396,120	8,231	80,306,181
Gains..	525,007	1,946	$50,291,219

Years	Sunday Schools.	Officers and Teachers.	Scholars.
1866.......	13,645	162,191	960,022
1877.......	19,946	204,964	1,426,946
Gains.	6,301	42,773	446,924

It will be seen that during this term of twelve years, coming down to the present, the membership of the church increased at the rate of nearly sixty per cent.; the effective ministry by not far from thirty per cent.; the church property by over a hundred and sixty-six per cent.; and the Sunday-schools in their three departments, by forty-eight, twenty-six and a half, and forty-four per cent. All this does not show a very rapid decline in any of these departments of the church's affairs. And this so far disposes of the question that any pretense that there has been any decline devolves the burden of proof of that fact on those who assert it. Till that is done we are at liberty to assume that, instead of being a feeble and dying system, American Methodism is eminently and most remarkably vigorous and progressive, and the proper subject of inquiry in respect to it relates to its extraordinary vigor and increase.—National Repository for June.

The New Orleans Sunday-School Association.

Mr. Editor;—The pleasant reunion of Sunday-school workers at the United States Barracks, on May 25th, has given occasion for many inquiries concerning the Sunday-school Association, under whose auspices the entertainment was given. To answer these, and to some extent demonstrate the need for such an association, is the object of this communication.

Just now the Sunday-school work is receiving a larger share of consideration and attention than ever before in its history. The work of the teacher, the superintendent, the librarian and the secretary is formulating upon a more advanced ideal. The teacher's work especially is looked upon as work, and teachers are casting about for all the helps they can lay hand or mind upon; and this is not only in exposition, but in the matter of methods. As, for instance, the judicious use of the reward system; how to secure attention; home study of the lesson; punctuality and regularity of attendance, etc., ad infinitum.

The greater interest now associated with the Sunday-school, and the enterprise on the part of the great body of Sunday-school workers, show the value of that great stimulant and help—the interchange of ideas and sympathy.

It is the object of this association to afford opportunity for these, and for the elaboration of methods in managing the work in all its parts, and free comparison of modes and interchange of ideas upon them.

The association is governed by a president and executive committee. The latter represents all the various evangelical denominations. All sectarianism is carefully avoided. Theoretically, the meetings of the association are held monthly, and are not confined to a single annual reunion, as some have supposed. The requisites for membership are simple. Any one interested in the Sunday-school work—whether parent, teacher, officer of a school, or otherwise—may become connected with the association upon payment of one dollar a year as dues. It is a constitutional provision that no debt can be contracted by the association, and no assessment can be levied upon members beyond the dues above mentioned.

Among the possibilities—if not the probabilities—of the future, in connection with the association, are the features of Normal Classes and institutes.

The association desires to embrace in its membership every worker in the cause, and cordially invites all ladies and gentlemen who are interested in Sunday-school work to apply for membership. Their membership will not involve the performance of any duty not purely voluntary. Every member is duly notified of the time and place of each meeting.

Applications may be addressed, without form or ceremony, to Mr. Louis Kells, Secretary, No. 31 Camp street. G.

A Few Facts About the Bible.

The Bible was translated into Old English, about the year 1370, by Wyckliffe. The New Testament was rendered into modern English by Tyndale, in 1526, and the Old Testament, by Bishop Coverdale, in 1535. The verses were not numbered until the year 1560, in an edition called the "Geneva Bible."

King James I. (1603-1625) ordered a new English translation, which however, is but a thorough revision of the former editions. This was published in the year 1611, and has been the one only and standard edition of the Holy Scriptures in the English language ever since.

The Psalms were mostly written by David, son of Jesse, and the father of Solomon, who reigned as king over Israel from 1055 to 1015 B. C. As devotional compositions they have been in use for nearly 3,000 years.

The word "Psalm" is from the Greek, meaning a sacred song.

The word "Psalter" is from the Greek also, and indicates by its origin a collection of pious songs set to music.

John Adams thought it a most significant circumstance.

The combination, or Genoese lottery, which is the system on which the daily drawing of the Louisiana Lottery Company is conducted, has been in existence for centuries. Italy, France, Austria and Bavaria carried on this kind of lottery for years, but none of these governments ever thought of suggesting such rediculously small prizes as those offered by the Louisiana Lottery Company. In Austria the rule is that the capital prize shall be $60,000 times as great as the cost of the ticket; in Bavaria it is 64,500 times as great; in Louisiana it is only 5100 times as great. Bavaria and Austria derived immense revenues from the sale of lottery tickets; what, then, must be the income of our Lottery Company, which, although the chances are the same as in Austria or Bavaria, gives prizes 92 per cent. less. This capital prize of $5100, or, as we had better call it, $1275 is really the only prize worth mentioning in the daily drawing of the Louisiana Lottery. There are three other prizes—of the fourth, fifth and sixth numbers drawn; seventh eighth and nieth numbers; tenth, eleventh and twelfth numbers. These prizes are nominally $1250, less 15 per cent; but as a whole ticket never draws a prize in the Louisiana Lottery, these prizes in reality amount to only one-quarter of $1250 less that inevitible 15 per cent; in other words, to $265.62. That is, with 76,076 tickets the Louisiana Lottery Company offers one prize of $1275 and three of $265.62. Was anything ever more infamous? Do the people who invest in these tickets ever think that they are paying Howard ninety-five cents for a chance to win back the odd five cents they have invested in his swindle? The man who buys a ticket every day, at every drawing, will have only one chance in eighty-four years to draw even this $242.35 prize. Old Methusaleh himself, had he backed up against the lottery from his earliest childhood to the day of his death, and bought a ticket every day, would have found himself winner of only $[illegible] having spent about $[illegible] on Lottery Company.—*N. The Freedwomen.

What is to be done for the mothers and daughters among the five millions freed people of the South? We have called attention to this important matter before, and in this issue publish the proceedings of the first Anniversary of the Baptist Women's Home Missionary Society, which has for its object Christian effort among the women of the degraded masses of our country. The chief work accomplished in the first year of the Society's history has been among freedwomen. The providential indications which led to the organization of the Society were gathered largely, if not chiefly, from facts and appeals sent from a group of pious ladies from the North, who have labored for two or three years in this city and neighboring parishes among the colored people.

We know that the question with which we begin this article is pressing itself upon the hearts and consciences of many Christian philanthropic women of the North. In our own church, under the leadership of Mrs. Bishop Clark, Mrs. Drs. Rust and Hoyt, in Cincinnati, and of other ladies in other centers, this question has been discussed and efforts made to inaugurate a movement that shall answer practically this question. There is a universal conviction that something should be done at once to organise and carry forward Christian effort among freedwomen.

As are the women of a people so are that people in morality and in religious, intellectual and patriotic capabilities. The most brutal and damning effects of slavery fell everywhere on colored women. In the field every womanly instinct was crushed. If there was beauty of form or feature, or if there was sprightliness of spirit or grace of manner only the more surely were they the victims of unbridled passion, against which they dared not resent. There were exceptions, but we speak of the rule. Since the war there has been a great improvement wherever the effects of earnest Christian effort have been felt; but where for generations the purpose and aim have been to educate the people that to them is no such thing as marriage, and that slavery as it existed in the South gave them their God appointed place, the only [illegible] is that any moral sense [illegible] should remain. Considering their past the advance of the colored people since the war has been [illegible]. But the great demand [illegible] is that currents of Christian [illegible] and Christian philanthropy [illegible] civilization should [illegible] homes, so that their women [illegible] be saved and blest and [illegible] influences would be [illegible] thousands of [illegible] throughout the South [illegible] found pure Christian [illegible] who labor and wait [illegible] the coming redemption [illegible] people.

The labor demanded is not simply [illegible] them the precepts of the [illegible] but to visit their homes [illegible] their dead [illegible] that [illegible] matters [illegible] questions of social [illegible], and many other things [illegible] Christian friend [illegible] connection as she [illegible] from house to house. A [illegible] there, once [illegible] could be brought to [illegible] how to sew, and [illegible] and advised [illegible] questions [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] full sway? The same question might be asked with reference to the temporal well-being of men as well as to their eternal salvation. God desires all men to be happy in this world. Why then does He not make all men happy? Why does He allow them to suffer at all? Let it always be kept in mind that God is a Ruler, a moral Governor. He created man a free agent. Over man, as a free agent, He has established a moral government which He must maintain. The stability of that government, his own veracity and the greater good of the universe demands the rigid execution of Law. The penalty of its violation must be exacted. God's Infinite Wisdom is shown in the plan by which Justice is fully satisfied, and yet His own benevolence towards the fallen race may be gratified. The Gospel method of salvation is the highest possible expression of his desire that none should perish. But if men will not accept it, what can they expect but to reap the full consequences of their own sins? The way of deliverance is pointed out to them, but if they reject the door thus opened, they must perish, although God is "not willing that any should perish."

Responsibility.

It is a solemn thought that we are not only responsible for own salvation but for the salvation of others. We are familiar with the fact that the temporal welfare of one person is made to depend upon the conduct of others. If a man is a drunkard, his wife and children suffer. If a son commits a crime that brings him to the Penitentiary or to the gallows, the disgrace falls with crushing weight upon the parents. The error of a ruler may involve his country in terrible misfortunes. Thus it is that man is placed in numberless particulars at the mercy of his fellow-men. But that the eternal interests of our fellow-creatures are committed to our care is the most strange. Here is a tremendous responsibility. Through my teachings or example an immortal soul may be saved or lost! His eternal ruin is the result of my neglect or of my influence. This fact should sound like the blast of a trumpet through the chambers of my own soul! Christians are to be the salt of the earth. As salt is not only itself exempt from corruption but is a preservative of other substances, so Christ's followers must not only be holy themselves but be the means of purifying the rest of the world and preserving it in holiness. Christians are lights in the world. Their light must so shine as to glorify their Father in Heaven. They are living epistles. As such they will be read and known of all men. Here is a call to watchfulness, to prayer, to effort. Let no lost sinner point to us in the last day and charge us with his ruin! It is not enough that we did nothing to prevent his coming to Christ. Was it our indifference? Did we fail to improve our opportunities? Did we have the spirit of Cain when he asked, "Am I my brother's keeper?" May we be wise to win souls!

Bishop Haven and the Southern General Conference.

Atlanta, Ga., the place where the Southern General Conference met, is Bishop Haven's home. He visited that body during a brief stay at home while it was in session. Several of the Bishops and distinguished members of that body have at various times accepted the hospitality of Bishop Haven, when traveling in the North. Bishop Haven is one of the eleven Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, numbering 1,600,000 Methodists, and whose fraternal delegates had been received with great demonstrations of fraternity. It would seem impossible that a Bishop of the M. E. Church could visit that body and not even be invited within the bar by one of the Bishops or representative men. Yet this was the fact; and as for introducing him, that it was a question of such diplomatic importance as to require [illegible] discussion. We left Atlanta before Bishop Haven arrived, [illegible] from Dr. Edwards, of the [illegible], how the question was settled. Dr. Edwards says:

"The Southern Bishops uniformly and calmly exchanged but few [illegible] with Bishop Haven, and [illegible] passed on, as though it were [illegible] that the last could be [illegible] to a chair within the bar, [illegible] the consumer of [illegible] being introduced to [illegible] The treatment of [illegible] to shab- [illegible] as much [illegible] not introducing Bishop Haven, and yet not impeaching the fraternal spirit. The final decision was to fall back upon the rule prohibiting introduction of all but fraternal messengers, and one of the Kimballs was sent to Bishop Haven to smooth over the matter. We witness the interviewed between the smoother and smoothee and the process gave us a facility of digestion of that day's dinner which we could wish to be permanent.

First Word from Central Africa.

Bishop Haven, who has in charge our African Mission, has received the first letter from Rev. J. Osgood, whom he sent to open a mission at Boporo, our first missionary station off the coast toward the interior of that great continent. The company were ten days in going from Monrovia. We quote the following extracts:

"We find Jimmy Parkro to be the acknowledged King of the country, though he has a brother who is the legal King. Semoro is the Mohammedan King of the Mandigo people. Boporo is no more, as I see, than any other prominent town, except that it is the capital. I have seen no town yet that is suitable for a station, i. e., to settle a missionary at, so that his time may be used at that one place as a preacher. We have visited and probably selected a site suggested by King Jimmy, eight or ten miles southwest of Boporo, being a high hill about 150 or 200 feet above the surrounding land. This is three or four miles northwest of Jimmy's own town. I have in view a circuit containing Boporo, Medina, Bamboo, and Jimmy's town, and also other half-towns, with the mission containing a school near the center.

The circuit will be about 15 miles in diameter. Our star is growing brighter. The foresight by which I have been looking at the future is becoming more radiant. I have thought in the past, that any mission could be managed so as to be self supporting within from 3 to 5 years in Africa and I am stronger in the faith than ever before and now I believe had I $250 in goods by next July, I could open a school of a hundred students and make that school self-supporting henceforth. From this we could by the help of Divine Providence, take possession of this whole realm in the name of the Lord in a few years. But if the month to come is lost, not much can be done upon this plan until one year from next July, and my eagerness to get the work in operation can hardly bear the thought of so much delay.

All the chiefs of the nation are now assembled here at Boporo in a grand palaver, enacting laws. Jimmy told us when we arrived that within five days they would adjourn, then he would take us to his town and there "live at his hand" till we were settled at our own location, but the palaver still continues.

Children's Day at Ames M. E. Church.

Last Sabbath was set apart as "Children's Day" by the Sunday-school workers of Ames M. E. Church. The day was somewhat lowry—threatening rain at the hour of service, but notwithstanding that the representation was very good. The school met as usual at 9½ o'clock in the chapel, and went through with the usual exercises. At 11 o'clock the classes marched in order into the main auditorium, and were seated on each side of the main aisle in front, leaving the rear portion of the house for the members of the church and congregation. The singing was under the management of C. H. Shute, Esq., superintendent, assisted by several members of the choir, and was excellent. The pastor, Rev. J. H. McCarty, then preached a regular sermon to the children, taking as his text the account of healing Naaman through the influence of a little captive maid. He showed that in the story were five great personages—the Syrian king, the great general, the renowned prophet of God and the little maid, who was in some sense greater than either the King or the General. The theme was the opportunity to do good. The sermon was listened to with marked attention.

The floral decorations were more beautiful than at any former period. No one could look upon the the beautiful evergreen cross and shield without the greatest admiration. Boquets, hangings and vases were all models in their way. This work was arranged by Mrs. Capt. Clinton, Mrs. Wm. Aikman, Miss Cora Barney and Miss Stevens.

It was a most enjoyable time and makes one wish for other and many happy returns of Children's Day.

June 30th is the day for reviewing lessons of past quarter in the Sunday school.

Progress.

Ever since the abolition of slavery the Christian people of the United States have taken great interest in the education and elevation of the Freedmen. Until recently the work of establishing schools and helping to build churches since the war, among the freed people, has been done almost wholly by Northern associations and money. But lately the Southern Baptist and Presbyterian Conventions and Southern Methodist General Conference have taken advance grounds and proclaimed that every consideration of Christian philanthropy and patriotism demands the education and elevation of the freedmen. All of these churches did much before the war for the colored people as slaves, but as yet have done practically nothing for them as freedmen. This universal outspoken demand on the part of native Southern Christians for the education of the free colored people is very significant, and marks an important era in the greatest missionary problem as yet committed to this nation. If these professions, as to the absolute necessity of educating and elevating the colored people are sincere, and we do not doubt but that they are, hereafter all Christian laborers in this great work are to be recognized as servants and handmaidens of the Lord, doing work in his vineyard.

A Good Endorsement.

Rev. D. W. Hayes, one of our most cultured and successful colored pastors, writing from Chattanooga, Tenn., says concerning the SOUTHWESTERN: "Thank God for such a fearless, outspoken journal, daring as it does to lift up its voice in the unpopular struggle against the prevailing caste and prejudice of the present time. I am glad, too, that it does not, on this account, appeal to our people alone for patronage. Its broad, liberal views, its high, moral tone, its array of church news and items of general interest, its able editorials, characterized by a noteworthy depth of thought and an earnest Christian spirit, its unflinching loyalty to conscience, to principles, to humanity, to religion and protestantism, recommends it to the hearty support of every man without regard to color or section. Long live the SOUTHWESTERN!"

A Word of Cheer.

The following word of cheer is from the editor of the Northwestern, whom we met in Atlanta. The editor says: "When we arrived at Atlanta we found Rev. J. C. Hartzell, of the Southwestern, New Orleans, present, and he was bristling with "points" to take home and discuss. That editor and that paper are doing grand work in the South. No Methodist dollars are doing diviner work than are those which support the New Orleans and Atlanta papers. Could our General Conference, delegate by delegate, look over our Southern work carefully, there would not be a moment's hesitation in voting full supplies for the campaign in the South."

Lottery Politics.

It has been charged that the Louisiana State Lottery, with all its corrupting influence, was a Republican institution. Gens. Beauregard and Early, in their communication to the Picayune of Thursday, settle this question in a very decisive manner. They say: "Before entering into an arrangement for superintending the different drawings of the Louisiana State Lottery, we took care to ascertain that all the management of the company were in sympathy with the Democratic or Conservative party of the State, and became satisfied that they were active and earnest supporters of the present Governor as well as of the Legislature, which was in sympathy with him, the political condition generally known as the status in quo being then in existence."

Two Interesting Items.

Rev. J. G. Johnson, Presiding Elder of the Jackson District, in Mississippi Conference, sends the following exceedingly interesting items. He says: Mr. Grandeson Smith was formerly a slave of a wealthy planter of Tippah county, Miss. On becoming free he sought the Savior in the pardon of his sins and was happily converted. He has since bought his former master's plantation, and paid for it, and upon the very spot where he obtained pardon for his sins, has built a church and turned it over to the Methodist Episcopal Church to be dedicated to God.

On my visit to Grenada I had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of a lady that had reached the age of one hundred and twenty-eight years. On being introduced she arose from the quilt upon which she was sewing, without the aid of spectacles. On remarking that I felt highly favored in taking one by the hand of her great age, she replied, that she could thank God that she had been a Christian for seventy-nine years, had had six children. Her oldest boy was now living, he having reached the age of ninety-five years, and her baby child, as she called her, who resided in the adjoining lot and looked to be much older than her mother, had reached her seventy-sixth year.

Wiley University.

The prospect at this point is better than at any time previous. We will, no preventing providence, get our new building ready for occupancy by opening of the Fall session. We have found many obstacles in our way since we began to canvass for means to put up a new building; and it is with some trembling that we now undertake to build. We have however ventured to begin the work, trusting to a higher power to carry it through. Rev. S. S. Steele, known in many places West and North, as a first-class, reliable, and economical builder, has the supervision of the work. Our plan is to burn our own brick on the ground. This part of the work we have begun. We have had very unfavorable weather for the past two weeks. We have everything in the best of shape for making the brick. With a few weeks of good weather we can have ready to our hand plenty of brick as fast as we will need them. We hope the members of the Texas Conference will not be slow to raise their fifty cents a member according to the action of the Conference. Our school is closed for the Summer. Our last session was characterized by faithful work on the part of the students and teachers, and very good progress on the part of nearly all the students was the result. Attendance was not so large as during some former years, owing in part to the higher grade of scholarship necessary to enter the school. But taking everything into account, the school was much better last session than ever before. It is better in these respects: more students are coming from a distance, we have more advanced pupils, and a higher appreciation of a good education prevails in the school. Although we have not attained to the grade of Scholarship of the older schools yet we are encouraged in the belief that our pupils are securing such a foundation of an education as will make them men and women who need not be ashamed when they come in contact with scholars from any institution. We look for a large increase in the number of pupils at the opening of next session, Sept. 23rd. What we need now most of all is financial help. We ask of all friends of Methodism, but especially of the Texas Conference, to help us now in this time of so much need to our people, and we will give you back a hundred fold in the shape of educated teachers and preachers.

W. H. DAVIS.

Wiley University, Marshall, Tex., June 12, 1878.

From Victoria, Texas.

I have just held the quarterly meeting at Victoria, Texas. I find the church here in a thriving condition under the supervision of Rev. M. Henson. In anticipation of the quarterly visitation, he had been holding meetings for a week, and when I came I found them in the condition Peter found Cornelius and his friends, "all here present before God to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." The church here has a membership of about one hundred—not a hundred names on the church register simply—but a hundred live, working members, that are growing in grace and in knowledge of the truth.

I notice one encouraging feature in this church. There is a larger per cent. of young folks in the church than I am accustomed to find. These are the first fruits of intelligent, systematic Sunday-school work.

During Bro. Henson's administration a series of improvements have been going on in the church building, amounting in all to $509.67. Of this amount the congregation has contributed $398.90; the sisters $92.12, and the young ladies $18.65. The improvements consist of a recess for a pulpit, a new pulpit and altar, neatly stained windows, a new floor and ceiling neatly painted. They will put in new seats and new front doors as soon as they can raise the money. They are not in debt and do not intend to be.

The quarterly meeting was one of interest from beginning to end, and perhaps the most interesting part, especially to the editor of the SOUTHWESTERN, we have made an earnest rally for the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE, and herewith send the names and the money. The presence of several brethren from the surrounding circuits contributed to the interest of the meeting.

Remember the Sabbath Day to Keep it Holy.

On last Sunday evening, while a large crowd of young men were playing base ball near this place, one of the players ran against another and threw him against a stump, which broke his neck. The name of the injured man was Boston. He was only heard to make two or three indistinct utterances before he died. He was about thirty-five years of age. He leaves a wife and four little children to grieve and mourn for a wicked husband and father. Surely the Lord will bring vengence upon those who break His commandments.

LEWIS LANE, Pastor.

General Religious Items.

At the recent convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania a motion to inquire into the ritualistic practices of St. Clements Church created great excitement. The Rev. Mr. Mortimer, assistant pastor of the church, insisted that the convention was acting on baseless newspaper rumors. He wanted to know if the convention could not find something sensational to amuse itself and the town without attacking St. Clement's Church. The Rev. Dr. Claxton, on the other hand, maintained that the practices of St. Clement's were so notorious that there was no need of an inquiry. "It is known," he declared, "that Sunday is passed in spectacular plays. It is known that those who go there attend for the same purpose that they go to the theater the next evening." Dr. Rudder, for his part, believed that a large portion of the rumors were absolutely false. And yet he would favor the appointment of a committee. "If I may say a word out of the logical line," he continued, "I will add that the real fault is in the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. It seems to me to have either intellectual inability or doctrinal unsoundness." The resolutions authorizing the inquiry were agreed to by a vote of 84 to 28.

The council of the Reformed Episcopal Church held its closing session May 13. The subject of electing bishops was laid over until the next council. A report as to the state of the church gave the following statistics: Church attendants, 17,657; communicants, 5,808; Sunday-school scholars, 7,814; Sunday-school teachers, 744; confirmed, 615; collections for benevolent, religious, parochial, and church buildings, $280,785; value of church property, $600,031; incumbrances, $138,750. Adding in the value of lands held for educational purposes in Chicago, the total value of property held by the Reformed Episcopal Church is $800,021, an increase of $172,000 from 1877. During the year fourteen congregations have occupied their own houses of worship; six have taken steps to erect new churches, and new congregations have been formed in Philadelphia, Tallahassee and Jacksonville, Florida; Boston, Mass.; Washington, D. C.; Wheeling, W. Virginia, and Charleston, S. C. From the incompleteness of returns it is probable that the number of communicants exceeds the number stated by some four or five thousands.

General News Items.

The Senate, by the decisive vote of 39 to 19, reinstated the army at twenty-five thousand men. It will be recollected that the house reduced the army to twenty thousand. In view of the threatened Indian troubles there is no doubt that the people wish the army to remain as it is.

Recently seven hundred miners from different mines near Charleston, West Virginia, captured the steamer Modock, and went to Blacksburg to make the miners there stop work. They threatened to kill or drown every one opposing them. They succeeded in stopping the Blacksburg mines, after which they took possession of a train on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad and returned, making the train stop when and where they pleased, and refusing to pay fare.

While in Bayou Sara during the early part of the week, we were shown by Mr. B. T. White, who has it on exhibition, an ingenious piece of mechanism—a miniature steamboat—constructed entirely of corn stalks, and pins made from swamp cane. The boat is complete in every particular—stern wheel, cabin doors, texas, stairs, hatchways, bell pilot house, boilers and all, and is a facsimile of those which ply the Mississippi. It is four feet in length and weighs two and a half pounds. Capt. Leathers of the Natchez has offered twenty dollars for the wonder. The most astonishing part, however, is yet to be told. The workmanship is that of a twelve year old negro boy who but once saw a steamboat, and who can neither read nor write. A Mr. Hubert Humblestein, of Tallulah, La., thus writes to Mr White: "This same little negro makes houses, wagons, locomotives and whole railroad trains from cornstalks."—Clinton Patriot-Democrat.

Washington, June 14.—The House Judiciary Committee to-day adopted a report prepared by Representative Hartridge, adverse to the Kimmel bill, and in support of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the two houses of the Forty-fourth Congress have counted the votes cast for President and Vice President of the United States, and having declared Rutherford B. Hayes and William A. Wheeler duly elected President and Vice President, there is no power in any subsequent Congress to reverse that declaration; nor can any such power be exercised by the courts of the United States, or any other tribunal that Congress can create under the Constitution.

In the house this afternoon Mr. Burchard moved to suspend the rules and adopt the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, at a joint meeting of the two houses of the Forty-fourth Congress, convened pursuant to law and Constitution for the purpose of ascertaining and counting the votes for President and Vice-President, for term commencing March 4, 1877, on counting the votes, Rutherford B. Hayes was declared elected President, and William A. Wheeler was declared elected Vice President for such term; therefore,

Resolved, That no subsequent Congress and neither house has jurisdiction to revise the action at such joint meeting, and any attempt by either house to annul or disregard such action or title to office arising therefrom, would be revolutionary and is disapproved by this house.

While the vote was progressing there was great commotion and excitement on the Democratic side, and members on that side gathered together in whispered consultation, so as to give rise to suggestions on the Republican side that there should be a recess to allow a Democratic caucus.

The vote was finally announced as yeas 215 to nays 21.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bells.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian [illegible]

Inhaling Tube!

AND

COMMON AIR WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $[illegible], or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. BEERS, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. ADAMS, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy.

[illegible] McGowan [illegible] this place [illegible] in 18[illegible] [illegible] them [illegible] ved. Address [illegible] Rev. P. Bliss, [illegible] to a man [illegible] Colum[illegible]

[illegible] these three years that place has been crowded to its utmost capacity every Sabbath by most orderly and attentive audiences—audiences constituted almost wholly of the very class who could, by no influence, be drawn to hear any preacher in this kingdom. It is affirmed that those audiences prefer the ordinary discourses of that woman to any extra discourses from such a speaker as Mr. Varley, for example—such cases having been tried. The result has been that infidelity, with its attendant abominations, has received, and is receiving, its death-wound in this place, there being in connection with these services a constant ingathering of souls. What could be accomplished through no male speaker, God has accomplished through a woman.

The Infidel's Sheep.

Away among the hills of northern New England were two infidel neighbors, who had lived to man's estate, sinning and blaspheming against God.

[illegible] of them heard the Gospel [illegible]ge, and, hearing, believed unto [ete]rnal life. A short time afterward the converted man went to the house of his infidel neighbor and said to him:

"I have come to talk with you. I have been converted."

"Yes, I heard that you had been down there and gone forward for [illegible]," said the skeptic with a [illegible]; "and I am surprised, for I [illegible] you were about as sensible a man as there was in town."

"Well," said the Christian, "I have a duty to do to you, and I want you to stop talking and hear me. I haven't slept much for two nights thinking of it. I have four [sheep] in my flock that belong to you. They came to my field six years ago, and I knew they had your mark on them, but I took them and marked them with my [illegible] and you inquired all around [illegible] could not hear anything of [illegible] they are in my field, [illegible] the increase of them; and [illegible] I want to settle this matter. The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo. $1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

A Remarkable Cure.
Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir: I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES
Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.
Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.
ROCKPORT, MASS., April 3, 1877.

EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell [illegible] I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (more dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For [illegible] years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," inhaling-tubes, and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering most intense pain, which at one time continued for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.
Yours truly,

duty, let us stand up, save as age or weakness or fatigue excuse us.

Again I remark: Church music must be congregational. This opportunity must be brought down within the range of the whole audience. A song that the worshipers cannot sing is of no more use to them than a sermon in Choctaw. You have a right to sing. Jonathan Edwards used to set apart whole days for singing. Let us wake up to this duty. Let us sing alone, sing in our families, sing in our schools, sing in our churches. Now, I tell you that these songs we sing Sabbath by Sabbath are the national airs of Jesus Christ and of the kingdom of heaven, and if you do not learn to sing them here how do you ever expect to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb? I should not be surprised at all if some of the best anthems of heaven were made up of some of the best songs of earth. May God increase our reverence for Christian psalmody, and keep us from disgracing it by our indifference and frivolity.—Metropolitan Pulpit.

So live, that when thy summons comes to join

To that mysterious realm, where each shall take

Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

In 1816 he became connected with the New York Evening Post, and for half century 'scrawled strange words with the barbarous pen,' as the editor of that widely known and influential newspaper. His signal ability, industry and other journalistic qualities are well known to all our readers. Mr. Bryant's paper has always held a high place for its literary merits, its moral tone and courtesy toward opponents. His contributions to the Reviews and Magazines of the day have been frequent, and not a few of his finest poems first saw light in the pages of the Atlantic and Scribner.

"In 1870, when most men are justified in resting from their labors, he gave to the world his most ambitious literary work—the translation of the 'Iliad' and 'Odyssey,' to which he brought his ripe judgment, his dignified diction and his varied attainments. It is, in the opinion of the most competent judges, by far the best version of the immortal epic that has been attempted. His domestic relations were to the last degree, well adapted and genial. Mr. Bryant, in his poems, painted in its purest forms and brightest colors that love, which is the support and solace of the heart in all the duties and distresses of life.

"Mr. Bryant was an ardent lover of nature, and seldom sings without some reference to her beauty and loveliness, 'the green land of groves, or the 'sky-mingling mountains, that o'er-look the cloud.' His descriptions of rural scenery are accurate, and present the best illustrations of the purity and delicacy of his style. In his poems called "The Evening Wind," "Green River," "The Death of the Flowers," "To the Fringed Gentian," he explores the inmost secrets of nature and shows how natural objects can be wedded to the human mind in love and holy passion."

Peace to the just man's memory; let it grow
Greener with years, and blossom through the flight
Of ages; let the mimic canvass show
His calm, benevolent features; let the light
Stream on his deeds of love that shunned the sight
Of all but heaven, and in the book of fame
The glorious record of his virtues write
And hold it up to men and bid them claim
A palm like his and catch from him the hallowed flame.

Gerrit Smith.

Mr. Smith was almost the Christian ideal of a charitable man. He devoted all the energies of rare business abilities to the accumulation of successive fortunes, which he successively and unreservedly gave away. During the greater portion of his life his income varied from forty to sixty thousand dollars a year, and of this princely revenue he not only gave away regularly, year by year, by far the greater part, but sometimes encroached upon his capital in order to meet the multitudinous demands which his reputation for benevolence brought upon him. What he reserved for his own use amounted to much less than he often bestowed upon a single object that appealed to his sympathies. His house, a large wooden mansion, was meager in its appointments. "He spent nothing on pleasure, nothing on amusement, and next to nothing on dress. His house was large, for it answered [illegible] demands of his hospitality. [illegible] table was bountiful, as it must [illegible] been to feed the people who [illegible] in from the highways and [illegible]; but there was never the [illegible] ostentation. The small checks flew about in all directions, carrying in the aggregate thousands of dollars; but not content with meeting the ordinary demands upon him, Mr. Smith was continually devising new methods of searching out and assisting the needy. At one time he distributed thirty thousand dollars among the destitute old maids and widows of New York State. In 1846 he gave to the poor colored people of the State three thousand farms, averaging from forty to sixty acres each, and himself bore all the expenses connected with the drawing and recording of the deeds. In 1849–50 he gave similar farms to one thousand white males of the State, and, besides accompanying each deed with ten dollars in cash, gave fifty dollars to each of five hundred females.—Harpers' Magazine.

The Frog's Advice to Patrick.

The music of a frog pond is not the most inspiring in the world, but as an evidence that spring has come, it is not unwelcome. There is a good deal of variety, too, in the notes that are heard where frogs congregate. In these temperance times a good deal of excellent advice is given to young men who have resolved to leave off drinking, and to boys who have never begun. The frog's advice to Patrick was not given at a temperance meeting, but no better advice than the frog's can be given to men or boys who are tempted to go where liquor is sold. Patrick was a young Irishman who worked out for a farmer. A girl to whom he was greatly attached lived in the family of a neighboring farmer. Between the two farms there was a piece of low, marshy ground that was quite wet. To go around the marsh the distance was a good mile. To go across it was not ever a quarter of a mile.

Sunday evening came, and Patrick was impatient to visit his girl. Dressed in his best, he started out; but when he reached the marsh he was in doubt whether to go around it or cross it, for he could not tell how deep the water was. Just then a big bull-frog croaked out in a heavy, solemn tone, something that sounded like "Better go round; better go round;" and under the circumstances, Patrick thought the advice very appropriate to his case. While he was hesitating what course to take, a pert young frog, one of the upstarts of the pond, came to the surface and piped out in a shrill voice that sounded to Patrick like these words, "Knee deep, knee deep;" and so he answered: "Indade, and if ye say its only knee deep I'll wade, rather than be going a mile round." Off came his shoes and stockings, and with his pants pulled up above his knees, he "boldly waded in." About the third step he found himself nearly up to his neck in the blackest of marsh mire, and as he was making a desperate effort to flounder out, a solemn looking old fellow, grave as an owl, came up, and with provoking gravity croaked out:—"You're a fool; you're a fool." "Indade and I am that," said Patrick, "for belavin' the young rascal, who towld me it was only knee deep, and for not takin' the ould one's advise, when he told me as plain as any thing, 'Better go round; and I'm sure I wish I had."

Now, my young friend, the saloon-keeper will tell you, not that the mud is knee deep, but that you will walk in pleasant paths, where there is no danger whatever of falling into the slough of drunkeness; if he can see in you any disposition whatever to enter his saloon, but step in once, and if you have ever been the slave of appetite, away you go before you know it, up to your neck in the depths of an unclean habit that has destroyed O how many noble young men and promising boys who have gone just one step too far. Then, when your money is gone, and your good purposes a wreck, when he has ruined you, he will say,—"You're a fool." When temptation to drink anything that will make a fool of you, or worse than a fool, meets you, when you find that the open door and brilliant [illegible] of a drinking saloon [illegible] to draw you as the Norwe- [illegible] drew a ship, think [illegible] advice to Patrick; [illegible] and be sure to [illegible] [illegible] with sodly destruction in handsome bottles a chance to get you into the mire of intemperance, and when you are hopelessly ruined, say to you at the last: "You're a fool."

The Dead Raven.

The subject of our story was only a poor weaver, living in the little German town of Wuppertbal; a poor man in his outward circumstances, but rich toward God and well known in his neighborhood as one who trusted in the Lord at all times. His constant faith expressed itself in what became his habitual utterance under all circumstances of trouble and perplexity. "The Lord helps," he was wont to say; and he said it undauntedly, even when it looked as if the Lord had forsaken him. Such a time it was when, in a season of scarcity, work ran short, many hands were discharged, and the master by whom our weaver was employed, gave him his dismissal. After much fruitless entreaty that he might be kept on, he said at last, "Well, the Lord helps," and so returned home. His wife, when she heard the sad news, bewailed it terribly; but her husband strove to cheer her with his accustomed assurance. "The Lord helps," he said; and even although, as the days went on, poverty pinched them sorely, nothing could shake his firm reliance on Him in whom he trusted. At last came the day when not a penny was left, no fuel in the house, only starvation stared them in the face. Sadly his wife tidied and swept the little room on the ground floor in which they lived. The window was open, and possibly the words were heard outside, with which the weaver strove to keep up their courage: "The Lord helps." Presently a street boy looked saucily in, and threw a dead raven at the feet of the pious man; "There saint! there is something fur you to eat!" he cried.

The weaver picked up the dead raven, and, stroking its feathers down, said compassionately, "Poor creature, thou must have died of hunger." When, however he felt its crop to see whether it was empty, he noticed something hard, and, wishing to know what had caused the bird's death he began to examine it. What was his surprise when, on opening the gullet, a gold necklace fell into his hand! The wife looked at it confounded; the weaver exclaimed, "The Lord helps," and in haste took the chain to the nearest goldsmith, told him how he had found it, and received with gladness two dollars, which the goldsmith offered to lend him for his present need.

The goldsmith soon cleaned the trinket and recognized it as one he had seen before. "Shall I tell you the owner?" he asked, when the weaver called again. "Yes," was the joyful answer, "For I would gladly give it back into the right hands."

But what cause had he to admire the wonderful ways of God, when the goldsmith pronounced the name of his master at the factory! Quickly he took the necklace, and went to his former employer. In his family, too, there was much joy at the discovery, for suspicion was removed from a servant. But the merchant was ashamed and touched; he had not forgotten the words uttered by the poor man when he was dismissed. "Yes," he said thoughtfully and kindly; "the Lord helps; and now you shall not only go home richly rewarded, but I will no longer leave without work so faithful and pious a workman, whom the Lord so evidently stands by and helps; you shall henceforth be no more in need." Thus He who fed Elijah by living ravens, proves Himself equally able to supply the needs of His tired servant by the same bird when dead.—Sword and Trowel.

The Megaphone.

This is the name given by Mr. Edison to his latest invention. The following is Mr. Edison's own account of the origin and use of the instrument, as given to a reporter of the New York Herald:

"Strange as it may seem, it came to life through the mistake of a reporter. Some weeks ago a reporter came to see my phonograph and went back and got it all mixed up in his paper. He stated that I had got up a machine to make partially deaf people hear. The item was extensively copied, but I thought nothing more of it until after a while I found myself receiving letters from all over the country asking about it. I answered some, saying it was a mistake, but they kept putting in upon me, until I was getting them at the rate of twenty or thirty a day. Then I began thinking about the matter and began experimenting. One day while at work on it, I heard some one loudly singing 'Mary had a little lamb.' I looked around; nobody was near me, and nobody was singing. Then I discovered that the singer was one of my young men, who, in a distant corner of the room, was softly singing to himself The instrument magnified the sound, and I heard it distinctly, although I am pretty deaf, while others in the room had not heard a whisper. That was the first of the megaphone. It can be taken to a theater by a person hard of hearing just as a person near-sighted now takes an opera-glass. All you do is to place it on your lap, let the tube touch your ear, and all sounds come to you magnified fifty times if necessary. The loudness can be regulated for the ear as you regulate a telescope for the eye."

Anecdote of Lorenzo Dow.

Lorenzo Dow, whose name is still fresh in the mind of many of the older inhabitants, it is said was on his way to preach in South Carolina, when underneath an old spruce tree he overtook a colored lad who was blowing a large tin horn, and could send forth a blast with rise and swell and cadence, which waked the echoes of the distant hills.

Calling aside the blower, Dow said to him: "What's your name?"

"My name? Gabriel, sir," said the brother in ebony.

"Well, Gabriel, have you been to Church Hill?"

"Yes, massa, I've been dar many a time."

"Du you remember a big spruce pine tree on the hill?"

"Yes, massa, I know dat pine tree."

"Did you know that Lorenzo Dow had been appointed to preach under that tree to morrow?"

"Oh! yes, massa, everybody knows dat."

"Well, Gabriel, I am Lorenzo Dow, and if you'll take your horn and go to-morrow morning and climb up in that pine tree and hide yourself among the branches before the people begin to gather, and wait there till I call your name, and then blow such a blast with your horn as I heard you blow a minute ago, I'll give you a dollar. Will you do it, Gabriel?"

"Yes, massa, I takes dat dollar."

Gabriel, like Zacheus, was hid away in the tree top in due time. An immense concourse of persons of all sizes and colors, assembled at the appointed hour, and Dow preached on the judgment at the last day. By his powers of description he wrought the multitude up to the highest pitch of excitement in describing the scenes of the resurrection at the call of the trumpet peals which were to awaken the sleeping nations. "Then," said he, "suppose, my dying friends, suppose you should hear at this moment the sound of Gabriel's trumpet"—

Sure enough, at that moment the trumpet sounded. The women shrieked, and many fainted; the men sprang up and stood aghast; some ran, and all felt for a time that the judgement was set and the books were opened. Dow stood and watched the drifting storm till fright abated, and some one discovered the colored angel who had caused the alarm quietly perched on a limb of the old spruce, and wanted to get him down to whip him. Then Dow resumed his theme, saying, "I forbid all persons present from touching that boy up there. If a colored boy with a tin horn can frighten you almost out of your wits, what will you do when you shall hear the trumpet's thunder from the archangel? How will you be able to stand the great wrath of God?"

TRUST.

Just as God leads, I onward go,
Oft amid thorns and briers seen;
God does not yet His guidance show,
But in the end it shall be seen
How by a loving Father's will,
Faithful and true, He leads me still.

An orator declaring that fortune knocked at every man's door once, an old Irishman said, "When she knocked at mine I must have been out."

"Humble as I am," said a bullying spouter, to a mass meeting of the unterrified, "I still remember that I'm a fraction of this magnificent Republic." You are, indeed," said a bystander, "and a vulgar one at that."

The Lost Found.

One day last week a little child strayed away from her home. It happened to be situated near the edge of a dark and dismal swamp. And somehow—in following a bird, or a squirrel, or in some such way—the little creature wandered into the depths. Night came on and she could not be found. Father and mother vainly exhausted their affectionate search through all probable localities. Then the neighbors were called in—with like ill success. Some one suggested sending for the nearest State detective, as one whose trained skill might better guide their further effort; and as speedily as possible he was brought from the nearest city—five or six miles away.

Looking over the premises, and considering all the circumstances, he reached these conclusions: The child is in the swamp. She cannot have gone very far in. Worn out with fright and hunger and fatigue, she has fallen asleep; so that in the double darkness of the dense swamp it is impossible now to find her. She will awake by and by. Then she will cry as loudly as he strength will permit. If she be not rescued then, she cannot hold out long.

Reasoning thus, he stationed three watchers at different places in the edge of the swamp, so positioned that wherever she might be within the depth beyond which it was not probable she could have strayed, they would be likely to hear her voice.

As the midnight began to move on toward the morning, the little forlorn creature awoke, and—as had been anticipated—began to cry mightily. Her cry was heard, and, under its guidance, before very long all the difficulties were overcome, and the poor thing was found in a pitiable plight indeed, and brought out to the arms of her distracted parents.

Is there no lesson in this for a world full of lost and straying souls? One thing is sure. God their father knows that they are lost, and has organized a process of salvation. Another thing is sure. He is watching and waiting, "more than they that watch and wait for the morning," to hear them when waking from their sleep of sin, and thoroughly conscious of the darkness and despair of their condition, they cry out for help.

If that awakening child had been mature enough to reason, and could have anticipated the plans that would be laid for its relief, no doubt it would have felt that its only hope lay in crying out, as loudly as it could, until its cry should bring that relief. It would not doubt that its parents were looking for some chance to save it, so it would cry in faith.

So with every lost child of sin. God has organized for you a salvation. You can get it by crying out for it. Have faith. Do all you can. And never fear that with your doing and God's doing, the lost shall not be found.

Home-Made Chloride of Lime.

Prof. Nash gives the following directions for making this very useful disinfectant and fertilizer; "Take one barrel of lime and one bushel of salt; dissolve the salt in as little water as will dissolve the whole; slack the lime with the water, putting on more water than will slack it, so much that it will form a very thick paste; this will not take all the water; put on, therefore, a little of the remainder daily until the lime has taken the whole. The result will be a powerful deodorizer, equally good for all out door purposes with the article bought under that name at the apothecary's, and costing not one-twentieth part as much. This should be kept under a shed or some out-building; it should be kept moist, and it may be applied whenever offensive odors are generated, with the assurance that it will be effective to purify the air, and will add to the value of the manure much more than it costs. It would be well for every farmer to prepare a quantity of this and have it always on hand."

On the 14th inst., at Havana, Spanish troops, led by General Martinez Campos and Captain General Jovelar, made a triumphal entry into the city amid unbounded enthusiasm, Cubans and Spaniards uniting in fraternal exhibitions of joy. The streets were strewn with palm leaves and flowers, and spanned by triumphal arches, with inscriptions to the pacifiers of Cuba. The municipality of Havana presented to each General a golden laurel wreath.

The New Orleans University.

This institution has just closed its most important year of its history, having on last Thursday night [illegible] its first class in the full classical course. This school is the outgrowth of years of labor and prayers by faithful men and women, under the direction of the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

HISTORICAL.

The property on the corner of Camp and Race streets, fronting on Coliseum square, was bought by Dr. J. P. Newman, and the Trustees of Ames Church in 1869. A second property adjoining was bought some years later and paid for principally by the Freedmen's Aid Society. The property is worth over $30,000. A good building is needed, and there is room for a building 40x60 fronting the square. Here is a chance for some one of means to do a grand work for the Master.

The University is chartered by the Legislature and has full authority to organize all departments of instruction, and to establish preparatory schools in any parish of the State. The instructors have from the first been supported by the Freedmen's Aid Society of the M. E. Church. If there be any who have given grudgingly, or have turned a deaf ear to Dr. Rust's appeals for aid, we only wish they could have attended the examinations and various exercises of the past week.

DEPARTMENTS OF INSTRUCTION.

The departments of instruction now include the Collegiate, the Preparatory, the Theological, the Medical and the Musical. The Preparatory school is small and as this department usually furnishes largely the numbers in such institutions, this fact accounts for the lack of good numbers. Over one hundred have attended the past year. The [illegible] is not to do the work of [illegible] schools. BACCALAUREATE SERMON.

The Baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. Marcus Dale, pastor of Wesley Chapel, where all the public exercises were held. His text was, "What lack I yet?" A very large audience was present and the sermon was instructive and inspiring. None who heard it will soon forget it. The speaker began by saying: "A class of our own race having finished a course of study in the New Orleans University, are now ready to graduate. If there ever was an occasion in this church upon which you should rejoice and give glory to God it must be this. Many of the older ones present remember that when a congregation was present to lay the corner-stone of this church an officer of the law broke up the assembly because the people were colored, and no corner-stone made of granite was ever laid. Christ is our corner-stone and he is leading us onward and upward. What has God wrought for us as a people?" The speaker then referred in detail to the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in hastening to the colored people as soon as the manacles were stricken from their limbs to give them education and enlightenment. He spoke of the Missionary Society supporting preachers, of the Church Extension Society building Churches, and of the Freedmen's Aid Society establishing schools. Speaking of the church he said that as to size it was bounded on the east by the rising sun, on the west be the setting sun, on the north by the aurora borealis, and on the south by the Judgment. No people in so few years ever received so much at the hands of a church as our people have received since the war from the old Mother Methodist Church. May the dear old church grow until the whole world is brought to Christ.

A young man had come to Christ asking what he should do to inherit eternal life. The Savior told him that he must keep the commandments. This he had done and asked, "What lack I yet?" Christ saw that he lacked a heart experience. He was outwardly good, but had no heart realization that he was a sinner and must be willing to sacrifice everything if need be to be a follower of Christ. Christ gave a test and the young man could not meet it, and went away sorrowful. No man can be Christ's whose heart does not submit to his rule. The speaker then addressed the graduating class upon thoughts suggested by this young man's course. The heart, first of all, must be right, and that this may be so you must recognize what God has done for you. You have through His blessings finished a course of study. Thank Him for your success. Then you must seek to give to others the same light and blessings you have received. First of all be well guarded in your faith in Christ and then enter in the spirit of Christ the great fields of usefulness about you. Your race is to be elevated. Legislation cannot do this. It must be done by individual intelligence and morality. Personal duties and responsibilities must be taught. God has prepared you for this work. Go then into the vineyard of the Lord and work. God will reward you.

The great work of educating and elevating our race must be done by Christian teachers, especially by intelligent, faithful ministers of the gospel. We must admit that the type of piety among us is often poor. For centuries we were trained in the school of oppression, where almost every distinction between right and wrong was ignored. But piety may be [illegible] even if it is defective. Our people experience the blessed fact of sins pardoned, and as intelligence increases, morality will become more perfect, character will become better fortified against temptation, and step by step our [illegible] take a higher moral plane. [illegible] demand of the hour with us is [illegible] ministers and teachers. God [illegible] you, my young friends, to go [illegible] as examples. Two of your [illegible] are to be ministers. Thank [illegible] We all love and revere [illegible] old men who went forth [illegible] education and for years [illegible] done noble service. But now [illegible] must understand [illegible] are expected to have a [illegible] before they can be [illegible] our Conferences as [illegible]

GRADUATING EXERCISES.

The graduating exercises took place Thursday night, June 20. Elegantly printed tickets of invitation were sent out and seats reserved for the specially invited guests. A large number of these attended, and the great house was packed and many went away who could not enter. It was a great occasion, and we never saw handsomer boquets or more intelligent and heartfelt interest at any Commencement.

The opening prayer was offered by Rev. C. H. Thompson, D.D., of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The first oration was by J. W. E. Bowens—subject, "Act Your Part Well." Mr. Bowens opened with words of congratulation to the class and compliments to the teachers. He then stated that every man was the architect of his own character, and in well chosen words, delivered in a clear and impressive manner, he discussed his theme. He showed how true it is that there can be no real greatness without there be virtue and godliness.

Mr. S. T. Clanton followed with an oration on "The Basis of National Prosperity." That basis was shown to be mental, physical and religious growth. The speaker did himself great credit.

Miss S. A. Merritt followed with an essay on "Mecca." A description of the city of Mecca was given and a sketch of the life and work of Mohamet, and then with the remark "that every one has their Mecca," Miss Merritt made a happy application of the theme.

Mr. I. E. Mullon spoke on "A Glimpse of the Future." The speaker spoke of the ideal future when there would be no more persecutions, or distinctions based on prejudices, and when these would only be remembered as the weaknesses of men blinded to their own happiness and the good of humanity.

We cannot do justice to the efforts in a few words. All were excellent, and each graduate showed a mastery of the subject in hand. We will publish extracts from each of the pieces and our readers can judge for themselves.

Messrs. Mullon and Bowens and Miss Merritt have been in this school for eight years, and go out having mastered a complete classical course. Mr. Clanton came to us last year from Leland University, and stands as well as any in his class. After the orations and essay President Bean conferred the diplomas in the name of the Faculty and Trustees.

ADDRESS TO CLASS.

The editor of the SOUTHWESTERN gave the address to the class. He congratulated the audience upon the auspicious occasion. No one, he said, could look upon this scene and not be deeply moved. We are in God's house and to Him let us offer our grateful praise for all that He has done for this people. Above us, festooning the galleries, are the stars and stripes; the white exhorts to purity; the blue to fidelity; the red to noble purpose, and the stars mingling upon the azure field tell us, thank God, that the nation is one, and that all her sons have protection and opportunity for brave and successful lives. He spoke of the New Orleans University as a great fact, planted by the prayers and generosity of Christian souls. Over this fact all should rejoice, and he was assured that the success thus far was only a prophecy of the future, and that [illegible] not only in classics and sciences, but in Theology, Medicine and Law, would go [illegible] to bless the [illegible] studying until they could graduate with credit; on the scholarship they had attained and on the creditable manner in which they had just acquitted themselves. He congratulated them on being the first class to graduate, and upon the fact that one of their number was a lady, taking the same honors as her brothers. Only Christian culture accords to woman her true sphere.

He urged as the one essential to success—character. If Mr. Bowen's exhortation "to act well our part" is to be heeded we must have character; if "the basis of National prosperity," of which Mr. Clanton spoke, ever be attained and maintained, it will be because of the character of the people; if, as Miss Merritt truly says, all should strive for the noblest "Mecca," character alone will bring us there, and if with Mr. Mullon we take "a glimpse at the future," we are to remember that only character can make any future for us desirable. He then discussed the elements of a true character. 1. Faith in Christ. 2. A well informed mind. 3. A well chosen calling; and, 4. An unconquerable purpose to succeed.

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. E. Williams.

REMARKS.

1. The New Orleans University has more students, more money and more brains in it to-day than had one-half the present Colleges and Universities of Methodism in America thirty years ago.

2. The colored people are rising—rapidly, gloriously—in intelligence, in morality, and in resources. Only the eyes of fools fail to see this.

3. Deus et Futura!

Public Schools in Louisiana.

Hon. R. M. Lusher, State Superintendent of Public Instruction in Louisiana, has lately made a trip through sixteen parishes, looking after the public schools. We quote from the Democrat. How much the favorableness of the report is due to the organization of the schools under the former administration, we do not know. It would seem from all reports we have seen published by Mr. Lusher, that all organization and efficiency of public schools in Louisiana began when he was inducted into office. This is, however, a great mistake. The present school law and a fairly efficient public school system throughout the State were received from a preceding administration.

We however rejoice in the facts reported below:

In response to the interrogatives of the reporter Mr. Lusher said:

In the parish seats or principal towns the schools were found to be in excellent condition, except at Coushatta, where little had been done by the Board of Directors. The board, however, promised to take immediate action in the matter, and by July 1, measures would be commenced looking to the establishment of schools there for both white and colored pupils.

He found in all the parishes that the colored people were well satisfied with the present system of schools, which they regarded as of a higher and more permanent character than they had had for their children heretofore. In Caddo the colored members of the parish board assured him that they had never before had such schools there.

In most of the town schools the attendance of colored pupils is double that of the whites, and there seems to be a greater degree of diligence and docility on the part of the colored children than whites. Most of the colored schools were in excellent discipline and were well taught.

Gov. Wickliffe visited schools with Mr. Lusher in Bayou Sara, and expressed satisfaction at their conduct.

The prospect for the coming scholastic year is brighter than it ever has been in Louisiana, and the general sentiment is that a compensated inspector for the parish schools would be most beneficial. A strong desire for more schools exists in the parishes, which augurs good.

In Shreveport the schools are patronized by the best people of the city, and in their organization and system of instruction pursued they are equal to the schools of New Orleans.

The schools of Louisiana are, in Mr. Lusher's opinion, as well organized and as well taught as those of the other Southern States. Those of New Orleans excel those of all other Southern cities.

When questioned about the prospects of the University he said:

The State University and Agricultural College at Baton Rouge will be undoubtedly a success. It is attended by upwards of eighty cadets, most of whom are young men between fifteen and eighteen years of age, enjoying excellent practical instruction at the hands of a corps of very able professors. They are all taught practically.

[illegible] and [illegible] weather prevented Mr. Lusher from crossing North Louisiana, but he hopes to [illegible] his tour in the month of October.

Buy a Brick.

Our friends in Texas have gone to work in earnest to build a good brick building for Wiley University at Marshall, Texas. Dr. Rust, of the Freedmen's Aid Society, has bought a splendid piece of ground in the town. Read the appeal on first page. Let the Texas preachers read it to their congregations.

Prof. Davis has also hit on the novel idea of selling bricks in the building at five cents apiece. Any one sending five cents get a beautiful card representing a brick. Read the following and then buy a brick.

WILEY UNIVERSITY, MARSHALL, TEXAS, May 28th, 1878.

Wiley University, located at Marshall, Texas, is a School opened to all Colored People of the South, for the education and training of teachers and preachers. We respectfully, yet earnestly, request every one to aid us in erecting a two-story brick building, 50x80, by becoming stock owners in the same. Our building is absolutely a necessity to give such school facilities as are needed. Any one is made the owner of any number of brick in the building by paying five cents a brick. We hope every man, woman and child will become partners in the enterprise. Cannot every child buy from one to five brick, and every grown person from five to twenty and upwards?

Communism.

We hear very much of Communism in these days. In Germany the twice attempted assassination of Emperor William has led to the arrest of many persons, and developed the fact that in Europe the Commune is an inter-national order. The American Commune is in all the States. A society has lately been organized in this city. Last week the Communists carried an election in San Francisco. What is Communism? It is an organization teaching that the State should own everything—railroads, telegraphs, steamships, real estate, all property, and that every one should be guaranteed enough to make them comfortable and no man should be allowed any more. The church and all forms of its organization are to discarded. Marriage and the family circle are to be done away with.

The Cincinnati Times publishes a letter from a communist from which we quote the following specimen of blasphemous sentiments:

"As to the family relation, it has been a point of hot argument among us whether our unanimous views on that subject should be boldly and frankly advanced, or not urged till the establishment of the Commune. I have always urged that none of our views are wrong, and therefore all should be equally asserted. The family relation is an artificial one, and tends directly to inequality. The family once allowed, Communism is an absurd chimera. A little reflection will convince one of this. The family, the priesthood and property abolished together, Communism and universal equality becomes a possibility and a fact. The numbers, even, of the sexes are unequal. The children in different families are unequal in number. How, then, can all have equal lives without community in all things? Plain talk is best. We gain nothing by dissimulation. All children should belong to the State—that is, too society. All women should belong to all men; and should any man say "except my mother, my daughter, or my wife," that man has not yet freed himself from the effects of his warped and one-sided education begun in helpless childhood. No. No one's relations are any better or any worse than any one else's, nor shall one ture better or worse than another."

General News Items.

Augusta, Ga., June 23.—Hon. A. H. Stephens arrived last night and was received by a large crowd at the depot, and hailed with a salute of thirteen guns. He briefly addressed his friends from the platform of the car and thanked them for the ovation. He said: "Before I leave this city I will answer face to face all assaults that have been made upon me."

Cleveland, O., June 23.—The marriage of Senator B. K. Bruce (colored) of Mississippi, to Miss Josephine B. Wilson, of this city, is announced. After the wedding the couple will leave for New York, where they will take passage for Europe. They expect to remain on the continent for nine months.

Berlin, June 24.—The congress decided before final adjournment of the sitting to allow the Russians nine months from the signature of a definite treaty to withdraw from Eastern Roumania and Bulgaria.

Washington, June 23.—Returns made to the General Land Office show an extraordinary tide of immigration into the States of Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Colorado and Dakota, where settlements are being made under the homestead and pre-emption acts. In one district of Dakota there were 10,000 entries made by actual settlers at its single land office, and more than 1700 in the month of May.

Malheur City, Oregon, June 23.—The Indians are now in Harney valley, between Stone mountain and Silver river. Two men have been killed in Happy valley. The Indians are destroying horses and cattle, and apparently have a stronghold on the west side of Stone's mountain. A white scout sent from Fort Harney was in their camp for a few days, and they sent him back with a message to bring lots of soldiers. He said he saw about 300 warriors. Harney valley is deserted. Thirteen men of Company A, First Cavalry, under McGregor, scouting towards Happy valley, are rumored to have had their horses taken by the hostiles. Gen. Howard's cavalry and infantry will form a junction at some point on the Harney road Sunday night. Stewart's battalion of foot troops will be 25 miles on that road from Malheur Agency. Bernard is still pushing along the hostile trail. He has about 140 men. Stewart and Grover concentrated, will have about 380 men. Gen. Howard will have his troops concentrated in the vicinity of old Camp Harney Sunday night.

Cincinnati, June 22.—A special to the Cincinnati Commercial from Glasgow Junction, Ky., June 21, says: Another wonderful cave was recently discovered near this town. It has already been explored for a distance of twenty-three miles in one direction, called the long route, and sixteen miles in another direction, called the short route. The avenues are very wide. A span of horses can easily be driven through for a distance of eleven miles. Three rivers, wide, and very deep, are encountered on the long route; one of them is navigable for fourteen miles, until the passes become too narrow to admit a boat. This forms the third or river route, which has to be explored in a boat. The cave is wonderful beyond description, and far surpasses in grandeur the Mammoth or any cave ever before discovered. Several mummified remains have been discovered in one of the large rooms. They were reposing in stone coffins, rudely constructed, and from appearances may have been in this cave for centuries. They present every appearance of the Egyptian mummies. Great excitement prevails over this important discovery.

JULY 7, 1878.—BIRTH OF CHRIST THE LORD.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 2: 8-20.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."—11.

TOPIC.—Good Tidings.

[Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.]

The Circumstances.—Though far separated in point of time, there really is an intimate connection between the series of lessons just closed and the present one. Jeremiah, it will be remembered, when consoled by the Lord for the second time while he was in prison, received from him an assurance that not only the people would again be returned to Jerusalem, but was granted a look into the future when he would cause "the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David."

The Good Tidings Brought (8-12).—1. The tidings were brought to humble men. When an heir apparent to a throne is born, other royalties and the great ones of the earth are immediately notified of the fact. The truest royalty, however, does not always sit upon a throne, nor is found in places of rule. God sought for truly royal men to communicate the wonderful tidings upon the earth that his Son was born, and he found them in the simple shepherds who kept their flocks in the fields near Bethlehem.

Though the shepherds were honored with having the tidings first told to them, they were not allowed to think, even at the beginning of its communication, that it was meant wholly for them, "I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." In this was a hint to the shepherds. They read in those words their commission to tell the story after they had seen the babe. If it was for all people, they must have argued, then we have no business to keep this great matter to ourselves. Pity that others now would not reason as much to the point!

The rest of the message is full of significance. "Unto you is born." In that Christ's humanity is expressed. It is the "word made flesh"—the fulfillment of the song of Isaiah: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given."

He came to earth as a babe—touched life in all its essentials. Made full experience of it in its weakness—left it when it was the sweetest. Was welcomed by no demonstrations of joy such as awake all the echoes of the hills when a royal heir is born. His only welcome, except that which was given by grim poverty, was a mother's thankful embrace and the visit of a few unknown shepherds. The outcasts and the homeless of the earth have thus a brother in him who is King above all kings. He knows what life is at the worst—"was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin."

The Good Tidings Confirmed (13, 14).—The words of the angel had immediate confirmation. "Suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

The song told the men of earth how the event was regarded in heaven. It was the occasion there of the birth of a new hymn of praise. An anthem never known among them was taken up and sung by the thousand thousands who stand before the throne. It was a song of joy and love—of gratitude to God for the new era of peace on earth and good will toward men—of God's good will toward men—not of men for each other, though that, in the end, is involved. Their adoration was evoked by the fact that here was the proof that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

The Good Tidings Proved (15-20).—The entrancing song of the angels ceased, and they returned from whence they came—or else the shepherds never would have sought for the child. When they departed they left behind them no doubts in the minds of the men who had heard their song and the announcement which had preceded it. There were no "ifs" in their belief. They proposed going to Bethlehem, not for the purpose of testing the truth of what they had heard, but to "see this thing which is come to pass."

The manger was found—whether easily or not we do not know. But the text says that "they found," Mary and Joseph—thus implying that they had to search somewhat for them. As had been told them, the babe was lying in a manger. Before the child whose resting place was the feeding trough of the cattle they bowed in adoration, because the manger was the symbol of the royalty for which they were seeking. They were the first to visit the newly born King. After them came the Magi. As ever, simplicity found the Savior first—science afterwards.

"And when they had seen it they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child." Singular time of night to be preaching the gospel—wasn't it? All their hearers were those whom they had roused up from slumber. For a time they must have made a great commotion in that caravanserai, telling what they had heard and seen concerning this child that had been born in among the cattle. But they were full of their recent experience and positive in their faith—just in the condition to be effective preachers of the gospel. They must tell the joyful news, for, as we have seen, they had been given to understand that it was not meant merely for them. And so the gospel was first made known to men by angels from heaven, but the first human preachers were these simple shepherds. The theme was one worthy of proclamation by the highest celestial beings, and was not to be denied an utterance by the very lowliest of humanity.

The closing of this narrative is not without its great lesson. The shepherds returned to duty. They did not wait idly about the manger. It was a great descent—from listening to the voice and hearing the songs of the angels, and from bowing in wonder and adoration before the resting place of the Infant Redeemer of Israel, to watching over their flocks of sheep. And yet they returned to their daily tasks, and did it cheerfully. They went back glorifying and praising God for all the things which they had heard and seen. No true celestial experience, no real glimpse of the Savior, ever begets a distaste for daily labor, however humble it may be, but, rather, fits one for it, so that he can do it with an inward song.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR JULY

Opens brightly and seasonably with a story of patriotic interest, by Charles H. Woodman, entitled "The Girl who Saved the General"; it is a stirring account of the heroic act of a young girl during the bombardment of her father's plantation in the Revolutionary War; and is illustrated by a telling frontispiece by Mr. H. F. Farney.

After this comes several lively stories. There is "The Barbecue," by Sarah Winter Kellogg, with a fine picture by Walter Shirlaw, and telling in a droll vein how a Fourth of July was celebrated down South by a "tolerbul" bad boy. Then comes "Sneeze Dobson's First Independence Day," by Mrs. M. H. W. Jaquith, with a laughable picture, and giving a racy description of the observance of the day in an inland village; and the flavor of July fun is well kept up by the tale of "A Boy's Experience with Tar Marbles" on a very warm day, its three illustrations being by Jessie Curtis.

Besides these attractions there is a profusely illustrated story entitled "Too Many Birthdays;" and a funny poem, "The Yankee Boys that didn't number Ten," with ten comical silhouette illustrations by Hopkins.

"How the Weather is Foretold" is clearly explained in an article by Mr. James H. Flint; Professor W. K. Brooks of John Hopkins University, in a liberally illustrated paper, discourses pleasantly about various "Birds and their Families;" and "The Story of Perseus," by Mary A. Robinson, gives a pleasant [illegible] into the wonderland of ancient [illegible]

To reach them the Great Jackson Route is the shortest, quickest and only direct line. It is in excellent order, having been practically rebuilt with steel rails. No one passing over it can fail to notice the smooth track, absence of dust, and thoroughly satisfactory condition of everything connected with it. Pullman cars run through to Chicago and Cincinnati without Change, and there is no change of cars from there to nearly if not quite all the points to which excursion tickets are sold. Books, maps, and folders, giving full descriptions of the Northwestern watering places, and the routes and rates thereto, can be had at the office of the Great Jackson Route, No. 22 Camp street, under City Hotel, where any one intending to spend the summer away from this city is invited to call before deciding to go elsewhere.

The Great Jackson Route is also without a superior, as a line to New York and all the principal Eastern cities, reaching them with but one change of cars.

The Methodist Hymnal,
AND
Hymnal with Tunes.

We are now prepared to fill orders for the following editions of the "Methodist Hymnal:"

16mo, Roan Gilt Edge	1 40
*Hymnal with Tunes, 12mo	1 00
Hymnal with Tunes, 8vo	1 75

Since the manuscript of the Hymnal was delivered by the Committee, October 26th, last, time has been required to prepare and perfect the indexes, to complete the arrangements of the Hymns and Tunes, and to adjust all to a system of uniform numbering. Time has also been consumed in the transmission of proofs to and from the members of the Committee, but there has been no unnecessary delay. In view of these facts, and the amount of work involved in issuing so many editions in good style, we think that it has been completed at the earliest moment practicable.

The new book contains a great variety of the best spiritual songs, adapting it both to public and social worship. It should be used in social meetings and Sunday-schools, and thus be the means of familiarizing our children with the living hymns of the church. The cheaper editions will cost little more than the ordinary Sunday-school song books that last but a season. The Hymnal with Tunes is a rich and varied treasury of sacred music, and the 12mo edition is the cheapest complete Hymn and Tune Book in the land.

We ask all pastors to aid in the general and immediate introduction of the Hymnal, and Hymnal with Tunes. Let it be the occasion of an effort to intensify the true spirit of worship where it flourishes, and to revive it where it languishes, that the Methodist Episcopal Church may soon become, as aforetime, mighty in song.

*The 12mo size may be delayed a few days.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bells.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Dr. J. M. Howe's
Inhaling Tube!
AND
COMMON AIR WILL CURE
CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $2.50, or call at this residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. may2'78-tf

"Is that the way a dear little boy with a sweet little mouth speaks when I say please to him?" she asked.

And Toddles shook all his curls hard, and said just as solemn, "No; but sister Carrie do; and sister Carrie said me must talk like her do."

Miss Gray just looked at me so grave; and I believe I'd like to have gone through that floor, if it was wood, and no carpet, and an awful black cellar under.

"Me wanted the slate," said Toddles.

"Bring it here, dear," Miss Gray said.

So he never cried, nor nothing, but toddled right up and gave it to her just as sweet!

"Now Toddles," Miss Gray said, looking at me too, "You showed us something of how sister Carrie acted when she didn't want to do any thing; s'pose you let me see how you act just like yourself."

Toddles hung his head a moment; and then he looked up with such a smile through his curls; and says Toddles, "Oo may take it wever I want it or not; but—dont oo love me?"

Miss Gray just hugged him; and all the girls said, "What a darling!" And he was too; but I was awful 'shamed of myself!—Well Spring.

Womanly Modesty.

Man loves the mysterious. A cloudless sky the full blown rose leave him unmoved, but the violet which hides its blushing beauties behind the bush, and the moon when emerging from behind a cloud, are to him sources of inspiration and pleasure. Modesty is to merit what shade is to a figure in painting—it gives it boldness and prominence. Nothing adds more to female beauty than modesty; it sheds around the countenance a halo of light, which is borrowed from virtue. Botanist have given the rosy hue which tinges the cup of the white rose the name of 'maiden blush.' This pure and delicate hue is the only paint Christian virgins should use; it is the richest ornament. A woman without modesty is like a faded flower diffusing an unwholesome odor, which the prudent gardener will throw from him. Her destiny is melancholy, for it terminates in shame and repentance. Beauty passes like the flowers of the albo, which bloom and die in a few hours; but modesty gives the female charms which supply the place of the transitory freshness of youth.

Are you suffering from ill-health in any of its many and multifarious forms, consequent upon a lingering, nervous, chronic or functional disease? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, fretful, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are you subject to loss of memory, have spells of fainting, fullness of blood in the head, feel listless, moping, unfit for business or pleasure, and subject to fits of melancholy? Are your kidneys, stomach, or blood, in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia or aches and pains? Have you been indiscreet in early years and find yourself harassed with a multitude of gloomy symptoms? Are you timid, nervous, and forgetful and your mind continually dwelling on the subject? Have you lost confidence in yourself and energy for business pursuits? Are you subject to any of the following symptoms: Restless nights, broken sleep, nightmare, dreams, palpitation of the heart, bashfulness, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, pimples and blotches on the face and back, and other despondent symptoms? Thousands of young men, the middle aged, and even the old, suffer from nervous and physical debility. Thousands of females, too, are broken down in health and spirits from disorders peculiar to their sex, and who, from false modesty or neglect prolong their sufferings. DR. PIERCE'S
REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks" wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly,
S. D. REMICK.

Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering Coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

[illegible] ing in purpose to do every duty. They were to be men of decision of character.

Young gentlemen, you stand to-day on the threshold of active, earnest life. I take it for granted that each one of you has a purpose to succeed in some calling, and I know of no subject of greater importance to you than the one suggested by the text.

I. WITHOUT DECISION OF CHARACTER SUCCESS IS IMPOSSIBLE IN ANY SPHERE OF LIFE.

1. Without decision there can be no manhood; men become things. Decision gives activity and independence. Indecision makes a man the creature of circumstances. Such a man can have no hope of success. It would be very foolish in a printer to scatter broadcast his type on a table and expect them to arrange themselves into words and sentences. Just as foolish is he who goes forth into the world without purpose or aim and yet expects to succeed. Decision is to character, what bones are in the body. With decision a man is a living, active power; without decision a man is like a block of wood in an eddying whirlpool, drifted at the mercy of the waves.

2. Decision of character is necessary to success in practical life. And let it be here remembered that all proper labor is honorable. The day laborer in the cotton field, the man who carries the hod, and the man who does the rough work of the deck hand on the steamboat, do work that is necessary, and therefore honorable. And a man who succeeds in making a competent living for himself and loved ones, in the field or on the steamboat deck, and lives a virtuous and good life, is a much more honorable man, than he who assumes to be a minister, or a lawyer, or a doctor, and has neither the purpose nor the character to succeed. Many in choosing a calling fail to understand that all labor is honorable, and often disdain to do work for which they were fitted, and which, if well done, would bring support and promotion. Such persons often undertake labors for which they have no adaptation, and failure is [illegible]. Many first-rate wood sawyers are spoiled to make miserable [illegible] that the calling be such as providence indicates, that is the one best adapted to us, at present; and the one which, if we follow well, will either give success in its own paths, or, lead to other and better fields of activity? How [illegible] that calling be well followed? [illegible] must of course be good health, healthy minds and sufficient knowledge to understand the work [illegible]. But a man may have all [illegible] and yet without he has decision of character enough to be earnest and persistent he cannot succeed. To live well and do our [illegible] manfully requires a purpose, [illegible] unwavering, that shall [illegible] in the midst of difficulties, [illegible] in the midst [illegible], and that will [illegible] discouragements or [illegible] not a quiet [illegible] our barks float [illegible] beyond. [illegible] and wear all laurels. But he cannot. True he has with him the image of his Maker, and the full capabilities of his being are beyond comprehension. But he is allied to the earth by his body, and is therefore circumscribed as to place, and ahead of him a few steps is the grave; his mental faculties have been blighted by sin and knowledge is acquired slowly, and his faculties and powers of execution are circumscribed. What then? Is there no success? Yes, there is success; but as compared with what the world needs to have done, with even the greatest men, it must be a very limited success. But there can be no success whatever, without one field of activity be chosen and entered, with a fixed purpose to win. Our ambition may impel us to do many great things—such as command vast armies with our military genius, mold human destiny with the pen, enchant thousands with eloquence, inspire the millions with music, elevate the oppressed and bring to naught the tyrannical, carry the Word of Life to all heathens and hasten the millennium—but to attempt all is to fail in all. There must be one work and singleness and fixedness of purpose to succeed in that work. In other words, the conditions of man's being demand decision of character as an essential element of success.

4. In the Christian life this element of character forms a most essential part. There may be genuineness of experience, there may be good intentions, there may be an intelligent and saving faith, and yet there may be no spiritual power to resist temptation, or to develop a successful Christian character.—Young gentlemen, I trust all of you either are or soon will be Christians. Let me say to you that there can be no success which leaves out the salvation of the soul. The body may be well developed and beautiful, but it must die; the mind may be cultivated, social position may be attained, and success may crown you in your worldly pursuits. But all possible satisfaction to be gained from these, ends in this life, which is but the beginning of your existence. If your soul be not saved by faith in the Lord Jesus [illegible] inevitable and fearful will be your defeat in the world to come. If I urge upon you decision of character as necessary to success in your practical, worldly pursuits, so, as the soul is more than the body, with still greater earnestness do I exhort you to decision of character in the work of saving your souls. To be undecided and wavering in the Christian life is to hazard your eternal welfare, and bring reproach on the church, and to dishonor the blessed Savior.

II. THE FOUNDATION OF THIS INDISPENSIBLE ELEMENT OF CHARACTER RESTS IN THE WILL.

1. The will is the directing power in man. Decision is an action of the will. The intellect reasons, the sensibilities feel but the will directs. Every conscious act involves an exercise of the will. It is evident, therefore, that to have decision in the sense of unwavering firmness, the will must be properly educated.

2. The will is the strongest power God has created. Man rules the earth but the controling power in man is his will. Will bridges rivers, tunnels lakes, knits the desert over with railroads, levels forests, and floats navies. Will rules empires, demolishes thrones, and executes reforms. The will alone can contend with omnipotence. "God worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." His "good pleasure" is man's salvation. For this He gave His well beloved son; for this the church was established; for this the Comforter was given; for this conscience speaks; for this the angels are messengers of mercy and peace, and for this man's pathway is crowded with every possible motive to virtue. But in spite of all that God has done, man can refuse salvation and be lost. Man may be annihilated [illegible] while he lives and is an [illegible] moral agent he has the [illegible] of contrary choice, and can [illegible] save him and [illegible] are proofs of [illegible] in spite of all the [illegible] angels, men and [illegible] consciences are plunging [illegible] to have decision of [illegible] By [illegible] must [illegible]

When in the right path, the more we know and the more elements of influence we can combine to help us forward, the better. We are on the voyage of life and the will stands as the pilot guiding us to our certain destiny. A pilot, to be safe, must know the way himself, or he must have a chart. Our pilot, the will, is effected by the imperfections of our bodies which are subject to disease and pain; by the circumscribed and imperfect knowledge of our minds, and by the depraved sinful nature of our souls. Such a pilot must have a chart. He can not know the way himself. The chart given to the human soul by the author of all good is truth, in its broadest and fullest meaning. No matter what its source, all truth is valuable. Whenever the soul apprehends a truth, however simple that truth may be, it touches God. All rays of the light, no matter where they touch the earth, all from the same sun, and it matters not how small may be a ray or where you see it, if you look along its shining path you will look into the sun. Truth is but God manifested in nature, or among men. Her rays shine from the same source and every one points with unerring directness into the face of God. Young gentlemen, glean truth from every possible field. If it comes shining in a ray of light, catch it; if it comes singing in the evening breeze, or thundering in the cataract, hear it; if it be given you by the geologist, or astronomer, or botanist, or mathematician, or philologist, or historian, or philosopher, or economist, take it and thank God for it; if it comes to you from your own inner self, as the voice of intuition, listen to its teachings, for it must never be forgotten that man was created in the image of his Maker, and that therefore there must be reflected from within him something divine.

Many will go thus far in accepting truth and stop. I warn you against this error. Remember that there is a God who rules the destinies of men, and that he has revealed his will and covenant to man. The Bible gives man truth which no human wisdom or logic can reveal. The "Great Unknown" of philosophy is here revealed in all his glory and majesty as the Lord God Almighty, the creator and preserver of all things. Questions relating to our origin, our natures and destiny are here answered. While you seek the wisdom of all other books do no forget the Bible. It is the sun of all truth, relating to man's highest and noblest nature. Without it there is no remedy for sin, no light beyond the grave. Without it the soul has no guide. In the Bible is marked out plainly the way to the highest spiritual life in this world and eternal joy in the world to come. The author of that way knew it well Himself. While on the earth He traveled the whole length of the journey. He started from the haunts of poverty—the manger was His cradle; He entered Heaven and the throne of God is His abiding place. While in this way He cleared it of every obstacle, covered up every pitfall, avoided every snare, chained every lion, climbed every mountain, traversed every valley, sailed over every sea, placed a lighthouse upon every shoal and headland, spanned the river of death, entered the tomb and turned its darkness and despair into light and immortality, and from Mount Olivet He ascended in triumph to His throne on high. Follow in the footsteps of Jesus. Accept the salvation which he provides and offers. And then, with well informed minds, inspired to search out every possible truth, and with a conscience within made certain by the love of God shed abroad in your hearts, your wills will be right, and you have the first essential to decision of character.

4. The will must not only be right but it must be strong. Strength to be effective must be inherent. A man's body is strong when he has great power of endurance in labor and of recuperation in fatigue. A strong mind is one which has within itself the power of clear, consecutive and vigorous thought, which, concentrated upon any given subject, grasps it; or, which turned to any given course of life circumvents obstacles and creates resources. A strong will has within itself strength which makes it master of all motives, and the executive of whatever the judgment approves. Having chosen a calling, [illegible] entered upon the discharge of any duty, there must be a purpose, strong and unwavering, that let come what will—come storm or sunshine, sweeping tempest or gentle breeze—that calling shall be followed and that duty performed. Duty says, "Cross yonder mountain of difficulty." But there are hindrances in the way. We may lack experience. The world is looking on. Some are ridiculing. Others are pointing the finger of scorn. Pleasure says "do not go." Policy says, "wait awhile." Inclination says, "go another way." Ease says, "stand still." But we must have wills that shall disregard everything, but the one right thing, and leads us over the mountain.

Napoleon had a will that every true man should emulate. His ambition was false but his will was divine. See him at the foot of the Alps determined to cross with his vast army. His Generals look upon the attempt as madness. Nature has raised barier after barier, until their snow-capped heads pierce the fleecy clouds, bidding defiance to his advance; around him were chasms filled with rushing torrents; before him rose ledge upon ledge of solid rock; and above him were vast avalanches ready, by the moving of a single stone, to bury his whole army—yet he falters not. He sends forward his Aid to explore the route. He returns. "Is the route passable?" "Barely passable, sire." "Let the army march," was the command, and foot by foot and man by man they commence ascending the dizzy heights. Here was will, which no circumstances could defeat.

Paul had such a will. The voice of duty was to him the voice of God. Though he must go to prison, suffer hunger and thirst, be betrayed by friends, be flogged in the public streets, his purpose never changed. Wherever duty called he went. On his way to Jerusalem it was told him that persecutions of a fearful type awaited him. He was at the house of Phillip the Evangelist. His friends urged and exhorted and entreated with tears that he should not go. His reply was, "I am ready not only to be bound only, but to die for our Lord Jesus Christ."

5. The highest decision of character demands yet another element of will. There must be consecration of will. To consecrate means, to set apart, to dedicate to sacred purposes. This element of consecration forms the crowning glory and triumph of the Christian life. Paul means this when he exhorts, "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Professing Christ and joining the church are but the first step in the Christian life. Yonder is a ship going to sea. Standing on the deck are two men, each equally intelligent, dressed the same and about the same duties. The one moves with firm step and with an air of ease that impresses you at once that he has seen service. He is a sailor. The other is equally willing and determined, but his every act indicates that he has not seen service. He is as yet only a landsman in sailor's clothes. It is one thing to take out naturalization papers, but it is quite another to become an American citizen in fact. It is vastly different to enter upon a calling and do its duties simply in a matter-of-fact way, and entering upon it with full purpose of heart to love it and give all our powers to it. The idea of consecration should not be confined to the specific duties of Christians. It should enter into the whole life. To cultivate the mind, to care for the body, to do well the duties of home and of business should be considered as sacred as the work of prayer. Whatever it is right to do should be done in the name of the Lord, and in a manner to secure His blessing. This is consecration.

Young gentlemen, have decision of character, make Christ your example and Savior, accept and follow truth, and then with brave hearts enter upon your life work and God will give you victory.

Appeal for Help—Wiley University.

Members of the Texas Annual Conference and friends of the cause of Christian Education:

Dear Brethren—Need we speak of the importance of the subject of education? Need we talk of the lack of educational advantages for our people? The ground long parched by drouth drinketh in the rain, so need our people the waters of education. By building up an educational institution, we do a great work; but we are financially unable to do what is necessary to be done, without the co-operation of the friends of our cause. We appeal to you, especially to the preachers' of the Texas Annual Conference for co-operation in raising the needed funds. The F. A. Society of the M. E. Church offers to furnish half the means necessary to erect a suitable building for our school at Marshall; provided, that we will raise the other half. We are poor financially, but in numbers we are many. Agents were appointed by our last Annual Conference to canvass the Conference, the members pledging their hearty co-operation. Some money has already been raised for the purpose. From $1,500 to $2,000 can be safely pledged from Harrison county. From $4,000 to $5,000 ought to be raised by our Conference. We must have as much as $2,500 to provide for the actual present necessities of the school. $5,000 with the $5,000 the F. A. Society would then give, would place our school on a footing to compare well with any in the State, and we, by our actions would demonstrate to the world that we are on the track of progress. Then we appeal to you again for co-operation and aid, and in such remote or poor districts that your committee of canvassers does not reach, we ask you to raise the amount of fifty cents a member, that is made your duty by the action of the annual conference; and where nothing more can be done, hold at least one good festival, and send the proceeds to the Treasurer of Wiley University, Marshall, Texas. We have a beautiful location for our school, secured without the cost of a dollar to us, and we trust in you and Providence that our labors shall not be compelled to cease, until a beautiful building shall crown our hill, overlooking the pleasant and prosperous city of Marshall. The United States Mint.

It was founded nearly one hundred years ago, and in it was coined the first money used in the United States. Until 1816 all the work was done by hand or horse-power; the building was guarded by watch-dogs, and the artisans were supplied with plentiful quantities of liquor as a fatigue-ration, the ancient and simple-minded citizens looking upon them with especial favor. The earliest director was appointed by Washington. The original copper cents were made in 1773, the silver dollars in 1794, and the gold eagles in 1795. Both the metal and the machinery were imported; but in coining, as in many other things, the American has made such progress within the century that the implements of his own construction are now superior to the models after which they are patterned.

In passing through the deposit-room all the metal is carefully weighed. The largest scale, with a ponderous beam and huge trays, combines extreme delicacy with its strength, and balances from six thousand ounces to the one-hundredth part of an ounce; another scale tells three thousand ounces at a time, and a third tells three hundred ounces. They are adjusted several times a week, erected on solid masonry, and are true to a grain. Having been weighed, the silver is carried to the melting-room where it is mixed with copper, in order to give it sufficient hardness to endure the friction of constant handling, and melted in stone crucibles, heated to 1,800 deg. by charcoal-fires. This heat is so intense that the workmen must protect their hands and arms by gloves and gauntlets. The stone crucibles are placed within others of plumbago, in order to insure them against breaking. Reduced to a molten fluid, the metal is now poured into iron moulds, whence it emerges in the form of ingots, which are transferred to the rolling-mills which shape them by a rapid process of attenuation into long, narrow slips.

The coining-press is a massive engine of mirror-like steel and brass. It is fed with the blanks through a vertical brass tube in the same way that the milling-machine is fed, and a very charming young lady satisfies its appetite, which demands eighty blanks a minute. Its power is that of the toggle-joint, and it moves with the soniferous rock of a baby-giant's cradle. As the blanks reach the bottom of the tube they are seized singly by a pair of steel feeders similar in motion to human fingers and thumbs, and "carried forward and lodged in the collar between the upper and lower dies. At the same moment the lever is descending, and, by the time the planchet is in position, the toggle-joint, brought into a vertical position, imparts to the piece a pressure which, within the narrow limits of its motion, is almost incalculable. The immediate relaxation of the joint causes the upper die to be lifted, when the feeders, coming up with a second planchet, push away the one already coined. The planchet before being struck is slightly less in diameter than the steel ring or collar into which it drops; but the pressure upon the dies causes the piece to expand in the collar, and takes from it the reeding or fluting of its edge." The tinkle of the falling coins, and the measured swing of the machine are musical, and would interweave with other instruments in a miser's symphony. Do they awaken far-reaching thoughts in the girl who fills the tube, and sees the insensate press casting off the coins at the rate of more than fourteen millions a year? Every time she hears the tinkle in the box near her feet, and inestimably powerful agent is entering the world, and from the machine to which she is so carefully ministering come the multifarious evil and good of all civilization.—Appleton's Journal.

What Constitutes Intemperance?

In connection with life insurance intemperance has an important economic bearing, not only upon insurance companies but upon the insured. What constitutes intemperance becomes, therefore, an important question. A judicial decision has recently been given upon this point in the Court of Common Pleas of this city. It appears that the husband of Lydia A. McGinty took out an insurance on his life in April, 1866, for $5,000, for her benefit in the United States Life Insurance Company. He declared that he was temperate. Nine years afterwards he died. The company refused to pay, on the ground that he was not temperate and had made false representations. The widow sued the company. The evidence was conflicting. Judge Robinson charged that the moderate use of wines or liquors did not constitute intemperance. The jury gave the plaintiff a verdict for $6,007 45, and the company appealed. The Common Pleas General Term has decided, Chief-Justice Daly and Judge Larremore both giving opinions, that Judge Robinson's charge was correct, and that, the evidence being conflicting, the jury's decision can not be disturbed.

If this decision is to be accepted in the future as a precedent, it will be financially prudent for insurance companies to henceforth make total abstinence from alcoholic liquors a condition of their polices. No fact in the sphere of scientific investigation is better established than that alcoholic liquors, used in what is termed "moderation," though unattended with the usual signs of inebriety, do beget conditions of bodily disease, and expose those who thus use them, to a higher rate of mortality. The larger number of policies issued to moderate drinkers, by any insurance company, the greater will be the financial risks and the less desirable, in the light of this decision, will it be to insure in that company. The safest and best of all will be the company or companies wherein such only are accepted for insurance as abjure wholly all alcoholic beverages.—Nat. Temp. Advocate.

In a recent letter Congressman Frye, of Maine, thus speaks of the practical working of the Prohibitory Liquor law in his State after a struggle of about twenty-five years: "To-day it is as easy and as thoroughly enforced as any other law for the punishment of crime. It was for years a party issue—the Democrats against the Republicans—but so strong has it become that the Democratic party has been compelled to cease from any public manifestations of opposition. At their last convention a resolution was offered against it, and was promptly voted down by a largely increased majority with considerable enthusiasm. It is a mistake to wait for public opinion to demand the law. Our experience clearly shows that the law enforced will create public opinion. The people of Maine would not consent to any repeal or modification of the law."

The oil production of western Pennsylvania at the present time amounts to over 40,000 barrels a day. Two years ago, it was 15,000.

There are 8,000,000 pupils enrolled in the public schools of the United States. The average daily attendance is 4,500,000. The estimated population between six and sixteen years of age is 10,000,000.

The Elevated Railroad, in New York city, in the few days in which it has been open, has proved itself immensely popular, so much so that the supply of cars is found to be entirely inadequate to accomodate the crowds.

Fire has destroyed the house, in Abbeville, S. C., in which was passed the last resolution of the Confederate government—the resolution to disband. The owner of the house, Mr. Perrin, was the first to sign the document declaring his State a seceder in 1860.

The Steamship "Russia," of the Cunard Line, is now making her two hundredth round trip between this country and Europe. This vessel has traveled over 700,000 miles since she was launched, and in all her trips she is said never to have lost a boat, nor incurred the slightest accident, nor even lost a piece of rope.

Mr. Christian K. Ross, the father of Charlie Ross, has been appointed Master Warden of the Port of Philadelphia, at a yearly salary of $2,500. He has spent all the money he had and all he could get hold of in his search for his stolen boy. Nearly $80,000 have been expended in efforts to restore the lost child to its parents, and he does not propose to give up the search.

The Nautilus, which left Boston June 3, was spoken by the Adriatic, of the White Star Line, on June 19, at a point about one fourth the distance to Europe. The little vessel (only 19 feet long) is the smallest that ever attempted to cross the Atlantic. Her two passengers (brothers) were well, and the only assistance they required was information as to their latitude and longitude.

Two little girls, 5 and 8 years old, daughters of Mr. Moench who resides near Dixon, Mo., in their play hid themselves in a trunk, a few days ago, and smothered to death. The trunk had no spring lock, and why they were unable to raise the lid remains a mystery, but it is supposed the heat overcame them immediately. Their faces gave no indication that they struggled or suffered, being calm and smiling. The little girls were particularly bright, intelligent and happy.

The New York Tribune claims to have made a thorough investigation of the extent to which communism has grown in that city, and reports that the number of men belonging to Communist or Socialist organizations in New York and Brooklyn is only about 1,300, that most of them are Germans and many beer-sellers. They indulge in extravagant language, but are not drilling or arming, and the police believe no trouble is feared.

Our invitation to the nations of Europe to participate in a conference on the subject of remonetizing silver, (incorporated in the silver bill), has now been accepted by France, Greece, Holland, Italy, Russia, Sweden and Switzerland. It is not probable that other large powers will accept, yet the conference will be held, nevertheless, and the president has named the three gentlemen to represent our government. They are: Ex-Governor Fenton, of New York; Hon. John Groesbeck, of Ohio; General Francis A. Walker of Connecticut, Professor in Yale College.

Alcorn University of Mississippi.

This State institution is located five miles east of Rodney, Miss. Rodney is on the river three hundred and fifty miles, by water, from New Orleans. Thursday evening, June 13, we took the good packet steamer Frank Pargond, Captain Pepper Commander, and at 3 A. M. Saturday morning was at Rodney. This is an ancient village nestled under the river bluffs, which seems in some way to have offended the "Father of waters," for that most important personage of the North American Continent has quite withdrawn from said village, and left it a mile or more to one side greatly to the discomfiture of travelers who land in the middle of the night.

RODNEY

and its vicinity have witnessed some important historical scenes. Years ago many families of wealth and influence had their homes in this region, chiefly in and around Oakland a point five miles east of Rodney, where was Oakland College then an aristocratic and flourishing Presbyterian school. The same buildings are now occupied by Alcorn University. Only three miles from Oakland is Brainsburg, the point on the river where General Grant crossed to get in the rear of Vicksburg to capture it. We drove along the road where his army marched in that memorable campaign. Near the same spot on the river General Jackson had for several years a country store. His first stock of goods consisted chiefly of a barrel of whisky, brought down the river in a flat boat. Here he bought and sold slaves, and took a hand in horse racing, and kindred sports. The General did grand service in whipping the British below this city, and still grander service in [illegible] Nullification in South Carolina; but as we rode over the ground we could but think, how sad that any great man's life should be marred with the inevitable results [illegible] upon himself and others, of a [illegible] years of life so low and debasing. A few miles from Oakland Aaron Burr was captured, and [illegible] stopped awhile. General Zachary Taylor's old plantation is not far off. The eccentric [illegible] Dow rode through this region [illegible] his mule, and blew his horn [illegible] the multitudes when he [illegible] from housetops or haystacks [illegible] any other accessible altitude [illegible] the people thronged. The political agitation between the Union and State Rights parties was at its highth, led by H. S. Foot and Jefferson Davis. The President and faculty were suspected of leaning too much to the Union party, and in some way this suspicion made a strong impression on the community. Dr. Chemberlain in a published card disavowed all connection with politics. A citizen felt himself in some way, either personally or politically, implicated, in the publication, and on the fifth of September, rode to the President's gate and deliberately stabbed him to the heart with a bowie knife. On the second day after the horrible deed the assassin committed suicide. Such a deed in the midst of so much culture and refinement, committed upon a man so pure and good, and so universally loved was very difficult to account for. Perhaps it was the beginning of those days in the South when the institution of slavery was so strong and intolerant as to forbid the presence of any man of influence, even remotely suspected of plotting its overthrow? Such at least is the opinion of meny who now live in Oakland.

During the war Oakland College became involved. In 1871 the Synod of Mississippi refused longer to provide the funds to prevent further embarrassment, and the entire property was sold to the State of Mississippi for $40,000, and was established, for the education of colored young men. The State University for white young men is located at Oxford. It is to be regretted that the Presbyterians of the Southwest could not have held the property and utilized the many associations which cluster about Oakland College to build up a splendid University. But the opportunity presenting itself the Legislature did a good work in buying. Beyond the fact of establishing the school, but little that is favorable, can be said of the administration of the school under Republican appointees. When the Democrats took charge of the State, ten Southern gentlemen in the immediate neighborhood, all Democrats but one, were appointed trustees. These are: Dr. W. G. Williams, chairman; Col. T. H. Hunt, R. L. Evans, Dr. Jas. N. Beck, Maj. P. B. January, John A. Limerick, J. B. Herring, Wm. J. Martin, Wm. B. Murdock and Dr. H. C. Snodgrass, Secretary. The first step of these gentlemen was to secure the return to the Presidency, of Rev. Dr. H. R. Revels, who because of his protest against corruption had before been compelled to resign. His return is a perfect vindication of his former course. These gentlemen give a careful personal supervision to the school and in every way they show their interest in the work, and determination to make the school a permanent and grand success. The State appropriates yearly enough money to pay the bills. The amount now required is about $8,000.

THE FACULTY

of Alcorn is sufficient in size and fully capable of giving all the instruction demanded. President Revels enjoys the respect and confidence of all classes. He is doing a good work for his people. He has those rare qualifications which enable him to labor in harmony with all classes. The whites respect and help him, and the colored people believe in him and rally about him. Last year, as the result of the mismanagement that had preceded, the school began with a small attendance. This year one hundred and seventeen [illegible] enrolled, and a sophmore class [illegible]. We know of no point in Mississippi where Providence has combined so many favorable circumstances to thoroughly unite [illegible] harmonize the two races, and [illegible] know of no man better qualified [illegible] carry on and complete that work [illegible] Dr. Revels. God bless the [illegible]! God bless the Trustees! [illegible] Alcorn University have a [illegible] students! Next to the President is Prof. George B. [illegible], A. M., a graduate of Oberlin. He is an experienced and successful teacher. Professors Henry [illegible] and Herbert A. Clark, [illegible] both graduates from Cincinnati, [illegible] and capable and enthusiastic in [illegible] work. [illegible]

tion given in the school. On Tuesday night an exhibition was given to an immense audience, which reflected great credit on the students. Commencement exercises were held on Wednesday. We were not present but understand the day's addresses and music were excellent.

THE FUTURE.

The outlook for Alcorn University is good. Under Dr. Revels the institution has won the support and confidence of the people of wealth and intelligence who live near the school and know all about it. While the present counsels prevail the school will never lack for material resources. What it needs is more students, and continued thorough instructions, and that it will have. Its future is assured.

A friend from Meridian, Miss., asks if we have any rules and regulations for the organization of Temperance Societies. We have not, and do not think anything more than a simple organization providing for officers, time and place of meeting is necessary. The great point is to have a pledge the signing and keeping of which will constitute a member. Here is the Murphy pledge which is as good as any:

"I, the undersigned, do pledge my word and honor, God helping me, to abstain from all intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and that I will, by all honorable means encourage others to abstain."

Let this be printed on a card and signed by the person, and then he can carry it with him.

Notes by the Way.

Schools in Tennessee are divided into two classes, public and private. The former are associated in the minds of meny with poor schools, or schools for the poor, hence there is considerable opposition to the public school system of the State. Private schools have always been more popular. They can be made select; the rich can keep their children separated from the poor, and keep them from what they consider low associations. This feeling is quite strong in many places in Tennessee, and the public school system is only tolerated, not encouraged. Then, two, there are those who consider the two systems as antagonistic. The public school destroys the private, and vice versa. This is obviated in some places by the union of the two, the private schools taking the public money, and all the scholastic population of the school district in which it is located, for a given length of time. Private schools of a high grade do best where there is the most efficient system of public schools. There is really no antagonism between the two systems properly conducted. In holding Teachers' Institutes in Tennessee, for the colored teachers, we have been as cordially received as the state of public opinion in the community would allow. This varies as to the wealth and political proclivities of the leading citizens. One thing has been noticeable, the wealthy, intelligent Southerners have almost uniformly been most cordial in approbation of the work of educating the colored people, and are found visiting our Institutes and speaking words of encouragement.

Our Institute at Trenton, held on the 14th and 15th of June, was held in plain sight of the jail, whence was taken a few years ago fourteen negroes and most of them murdered. The Trenton massacre will long be remembered. No one would have supposed such a crime possible from the interest taken by the whites in our Institute. They filled the places left vacant by the colored people, and many came to the door who could not even get comfortable standing room. The people of Trenton have been thoroughly stirred up on the subject of schools, and manifest a deep interest in the advancement of the colored people. At Covington there was less interest manifested, but the county (Tipton) is doing a good work in pushing forward her schools. There are ten or twelve students from the Central Tennessee College teaching in this county, and are giving the people and Superintendent a high degree of satisfaction. Tipton county stands very high in efficiency in the education of the colored people. We heard of complaints to the effect that white schools were kept up longer in the same districts than colored schools, and lower wages were paid colored teachers having the same grade of certificate as the white teachers; and when there happened to be no colored school in the district, all the money was used for the white school. We do not vouch for the truth of these reports, and from what we saw of the County Superintendent we are confident [illegible] would not approve any such [illegible]

At Somerville, in Fayette county, [illegible] the privilege of looking at [illegible] Court-house in the South, and one of the most substantial jails. The town boasts of no school house or any public school. Public schools are only kept up two or three months in the year in this county, and as one of the teachers said in the Institute, "The children forget during the long vacation of nine months, what they learned during the short term of school." This county is proving that it is more expensive to take care of criminals than to prevent crime by educating all the children. This county has a majority of colored people, but Republicanism died as a party when the Reeves brothers were killed a few years ago in this place. It will be a long time before this will reach the front rank in school matters. It moves forward, however. At the close of our Institute the colored teachers organized a County Teachers' Association. We spent Sunday, June 23, at Mason. Rev. C. E. Alexander is in charge of our preparatory school here, and is doing well. The school is steadily growing in public favor. The attendance was over a hundred and thirty. The Sunday-school crowded the church and the congregation was such as to fill the house, and many around the doors and windows not able to get in. A subscription in the form of personal notes was taken up, to pay the debt on the house, to repair it, and to make preparation to build a new church, which is badly needed. The subscription amounted to over two hundred dollars. The pastor, J. P. Price, is doing a good work here and the M. E. Church is doing well in the community.

I find the Murphy movement going on actively all through West Tennessee. White and colored are uniting with it by the hundreds. It affects the liquor traffic. The saloon keepers are annoyed, and in some places angry. In Trenton one saloon was closed and others doing much less business. At Mason one man who sold liquor took the pledge and gave up the traffic. At Memphis the work is going on actively. St. John M. E. Church is used nightly, and is sometimes crowded with interested workers and listeners to eloquent and earnest appeals to sign the pledge. Our brethren in Memphis have done well in opening their beautiful audience room for this noble work. I heard incidentally as I passed through Memphis last week that some churches could not be used for the promotion of the cause of temperance. Rev. J. W. Register, pastor of St. John's, is doing a good work. It is unfortunate that our church is situated in a very respectable part of the city, where the neighbors all belong to other churches. If St. John's does not flourish it will be largely because of too much respectability. Rev. H. Primm, the pastor of our colored church, Centenary Chapel, is making a good impression, and doing faithful pastoral work. He meets with opposition, not the least of which is from the other colored churches in his neighborhood. Patient, persevering toil for the Master will triumph in Memphis as well as any where else, and the city needs it.

J. BRADEN.

Cleveland District, Holston Conference.

We have just completed our third round of quarterly meetings, and are pleased to find the charges generally in good condition. Quite a number of revival meetings have been conducted during the Winter and Spring, with encouraging results. Over one hundred precious souls have professed faith in Jesus, and joined the M. E. Church. Rev. D. W. Hayes, in charge of the Wesley Chapel, has shared most largely in the number added. He is an excellent christian minister, the right man in the right place, and has a live and strong working membership, a fine and steadily growing Sunday-school. This church has raised and paid near $1,000 of their obligations, and we think we may safely say (what cannot always be said) that they will meet every dime of their assessment before conference. The other pastors, with one exception, have been, and are still earnest and faithful, and presented encouraging reports to their conference, showing that the Lord has wonderfully blessed their efforts. One preacher left his work, without giving us any notice of it, for two months, just at a time when they most needed him. We have arranged, however, as best we could to have the work cared for. Our quarterly meetings were well attended, and very interesting time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. To God be all the glory.

Emancipation Celebration.

The Thirteenth Anniversary of Emancipation was well observed in this vicinity. About seven or eight hundred people from this and adjoining counties were on the ground. The oration was delivered by Rev. V. M. Cole, in a masterly and effective manner. The Emancipation Proclamation was read by Hon. W. Reynolds, followed by Prof. Ball, of Chapel Hill, in a lecture on the future destiny of the race. Speeches were the order of the day. The Navasota Brass Band discoursed delightful music at the conclusion of each speech. I will metion particularly the advice of Bro. Thos. Cole to the farmer on the destruction of the cotton worm. Being a young man, only nineteen years of age, it shows that he is a great thinker for the benefit of his fellow man. Chief Marshall W. H. Burwell conducted the march from the M. E. Church through the city, then north to the ground, in a very creditable manner. Notwithstanding the companies were made up of raw recruits, he kept up good order in the line. Every thing passed off in a becoming manner. I did not see or learn during the day that King Alcohol had one subject in his sway. The white citizens (as they ever do) lent a helping hand to make the celebration a success. Refreshments for the inner man were plentiful, and when the sun began to sink low in the west all went to their homes delighted that they had been there.

Rev. Edward [illegible], Bryan, Texas: "There have been fifteen recent accessions to the church, seven conversions and three backsliders reclaimed; ten baptisms, seven adult and three infant. There will be a union campmeeting of the Bryan and Brazos circuits held near this place, commencing on the second Thursday of August.

Rev. Isaac Hayward, Baton Rouge, La.: "Our church and Sunday-school are both in good condition and constantly increasing in membership. Rev. R. P. Kennon died on the 17th of June. He was one of our local preachers and a useful man in the church. He died strong in faith. He leaves a wife and three children."

Rev. James Ellis, Summit, Miss., reports a constant increase in membership, that his congregations are large and that he has a good Sunday-school.

Rev. Granville Norman, Columbus Circuit, Texas: "We have been blessed with a glorious revival. The meetings were continued ten days and thirty-one persons were happily converted. We bless the Lord for his goodness."

Rev. R. W. Overton, pastor of Camp Parapet and Plum Street Churches, of this city: "Both Sunday-schools on my work are in good condition, and constantly increasing in members. In Camp Parapet school an interesting class for old folks has been recently organized, which now has thirty members. Notwitstanding the scarcity of money our collections have increased in proportion to the increase of members."

Rev. A. Lemon, Benton, Miss.: "Our recent quarterly services were largely attended and were a time of great blessing to us. Elder J. W. Dunn preached a grand sermon, the communion services were generally attended by our membership, there were four accessions to the church and twenty baptisms."

Rev. D. D. Goodwin, DeKalb, Miss.: "When we came to this work we found it in a disorganized and very bad condition and the situation was very discouraging. But we endeavored to put our trust in the Lord and he has blessed us. We have had five accessions to the church, have baptised four adults and twelve infants. Our Sunday-school now has one hundred and fifty scholars and is very prosperous."

Rev. W. A. Primus, Stoney Point, La.: "We have just closed a meeting in which there were four conversions and many others deeply convicted. May the spirit follow these, whose hearts have been touched and give them no spiritual rest until they find it in accepting Christ as their Savior."

Rev. C. L. Crump, Panola, Miss.: "On last Sunday we baptized eight adults and eleven children. On the nineteeth of July we expect to have a big meeting, to which all are invited. We should be glad to have the assistance of any of our friends of Greenwood District who can be with us."

General News Items.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 24.—Senator B. K. Bruce, of Mississippi, was married to-night to Miss Josephine B. Willson, eldest daughter of Dr. Joseph Willson of this city. The ceremonies took place at the house of the bride's parents, and were witnessed by about seventy guests from the city. The wedding was performed by the Rev Dr. Rulison, rector of St. Paul's Church, where Senator Cameron was married. Following the ceremony a reception was held, after which they left on a special car for New York, by way of the Lake Shore and Mich. South. Road. On Wednesday Senator Bruce and wife sail for Europe, to be absent four months. On their return they will live in Washington. Mrs. Bruce is light complexioned and very intelligent. She is 24 years old, was educated in the public schools of this city, and graduated from the high school in 1872, since when she has been a teacher here.

St. Louis, June 30.—Another bloody affray, growing out of the dual city government at East St. Louis, took place at 12:30 p.m. to-day. A party of twelve or fifteen deputy marshals, headed by Mayor Bowman, marched to the engine-house, which is the headquarters of the metropolitan police, and which is also used as a council chamber by what is called the Wider Council. The metropolitans barred the doors and windows of the lower story, and when the Bowman party endeavored to force an entrance the metropolitans fired from the second story windows. The attacking party also fired. About sixteen shots were fired, and five of the Bowman deputy marshals were killed. The deputies then fell back to their headquarters, and the metropolitans are still guarding the windows of their headquarters. They declare they will defend it to the last.

New York, June 30.—General Grant will leave Berlin Wednesday for Copenhagen, via Hamburg.

London, June 30.—A dispatch from Berlin says there are rumors current in that city that the Emperor William is contemplating abdication. The condition of the Emperor is considered satisfactory. All the wounds have been heavily cicatized and the bandages removed.

Washington, June 30.—The amount of deficiencies made by acts of Congress passed during the month of June is over $7,000,000. The total amount of deficiencies provided for during the last session of Congress, including the short session, is $15,192,488 87. The very large unforseen deficiencies met during the last month will make the expenditures during the month exceed the revenues nearly $3,000,000. The amount paid of the above for the navy was $2,250,000.

Berlin, July 1.—A meeting of the Servian commission appointed by the congress was held to-day, Prince Hohenlohe presiding. The commission confirmed the independence of Servia, and also guaranteed her an addition to her territory of 192 squares miles and 182,000 inhabitants. The congress to-day unanimously sanctioned the retrocession of Bessarabia, with some light concessions to Roumania.

New York, July 1.—A special to the Tribune from Washington says although no official acceptance by England of the invitation extended by the United States to the representatives to the International monetary congress in Paris has been received, yet no doubt is entertained but that England will be represented at the congress. She will, however, make a condition that the results shall not be binding upon the English government until they have been ratified by Parliament. The congress meets on the eighth of August.

Washington, July 1.—In view of our great demand for troops for service on the plains orders have been issued to the various recruiting offices to hasten enlistments, in order to bring up the numerical force of the army to 25,000. The Secretary of War intends to throw into the section of country threatened by hostile Indians all the force possible. Dispatches just received here from the northern border say there are no signs of Sitting Bull, or any organized body of warriors entering the United States for the purpose of resuming hostilities.

Washington July 1.—The government has under serious consideration the question of Mexican and Indian depredations on the Rio Grande, as it has been the source of serious annoyance for so many years. The last raid made by these people into Texas resulted in serious loss of life to American citizens, as well as a large loss of property carried off and destroyed. Immediately on receipt of General Ord's official report of this raid it was resolved by the Cabinet to adopt a more vigorous policy on the Mexican border, and Gen. Ord was sent for to give his views on the subject. He has been here several days in close consultation with the President, Mr. Evarts, Mr. McCrary and Gen. Sherman, and although final action has not yet been decided upon, it can be stated authoritatively that this government will use all its power to put an end to the depredations of the class referred to, and that when Gen. Ord returns to Texas he will carry with him full instructions on the subject.

London, July 2.—A dispatch from Vienna says the government of Bosnia invites the inhabitants of that province, regardless of creed, to resist the Austrian occupation and it is freely distributing arms and ammunition.

Died.

At Deasonville, Miss., Mrs. Polly Pickett, an aged member of the M. E. Church.

Sister Pickett was formerly a member of the Baptist Church, but about eight years since united with us. Having lived a faithful Christian, she met death without fear and passed joyfully to the rest prepared for the people of God. She leaves a husband and daughter and five grandchildren. Her funeral was largely attended by members of the Baptist and Methodist churches, and by other friends.

JULY 14, 1878.—THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 2: 40-52.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man."—52.

Topic.—Serving as a Child.

[Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.]

Even upon the cradle fell the shadow of the cross. What was done under Pilate to Jesus as a man, Herod would have done to him as a babe. In order to save the life of the child, Joseph and Mary were obliged to fly into Egypt. And then occurred that massacre of the innocents at Bethlehem which was the most infamous act of a life crowded with acts of infamy. There he remained until the death of Herod, "that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, out of Egypt have I called my Son."

The Child Growing (40-42).—When the holy family returned, they "turned aside into the parts of Galilee," where was their old home. It was a despised portion of the country, often called in derision, "Galilee of the Gentiles," and they settled in a village whose name was especially [illegible]. Nathanael asked with wonder: "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" and the disgrace [illegible] that name followed him [illegible] life, and lent its ignominy to [illegible] the shame of the cross. It [illegible] a quiet and uneventful little [illegible] in the midst of its beau[illegible] grew up.

[illegible] twelve years occu[illegible] must have been [illegible] in the boy life. [illegible] was [illegible] then a [illegible] his [illegible] He ceased to [illegible] was [illegible] even then of his own divinity. It is not, as appears at first sight, a somewhat rude reply, for it is in no sense a rebuke to the mother for endeavoring to find where he was, but an expression of surprise that they should have had to seek for him. "Wist ye not that I must be," literally, "in the things of my Father" implies that if they had only thought for a moment, they, remembering his divine conception, would have immediately come to the temple, instead of fruitlessly searching elsewhere.

The Child Obedient (51-52).—His obedience was shown by his readily leaving the circle which had such a charm for him and going down with them to Nazareth. And after he got there his obedience was further shown by the fact that he was "subject unto them." There was no assumption of superiority. He was as ready to obey after as before. He felt himself "above" none of the little duties required of him. He worked with his father in the shop; for it was the maxim of the Jews that not to teach a boy a trade was to make him a thief. From the fact that no more is said about Joseph, it is inferred that his death must have taken place not long after their return to Nazareth. But he did not die before he had taught his art to his son, and, in course of time he was known as "the carpenter." Mark 6: 3. His was the gradual unfolding of a perfect bud into a perfect flower. It was the development of a life so beautiful that it secured the love and the admiration of men, as well as the approval of God. He was no strange, incomprehensible lad, but had enough of humanity in him not to startle those with whom he associated, and enough of the divine to be inexplicably sweet and lovable. If Jesus, as he absolutely was, could be held [illegible] how powerfully he would draw all men unto him!

[illegible] LONGER REMAIN FAT?

[illegible] was considered by the ancients as [illegible] coarseness. Even yet the slim [illegible] Grecian [illegible] are regarded [illegible] female beauty. Corpulence is [illegible] be a disease, and Allan's Anti-[illegible] has demonstrated it to be curable, [illegible] chemically neutralizes in the [illegible] glucose, saccharine and oleaginous substances, thus preventing the formation of fat. Its use insures a loss of from [illegible] five pounds per week. It is purely [illegible]ble and perfectly harmless. Sold by druggists.

bid all that is objectionable in the deportment of students, and enjoin in their conduct and habits, all that is calculated to lead them to the love and the practice of the adorning virtues of life, and these rules will be rigidly enforced to an extent that will render it impossible for any to remain in the University who will not obey them.

The expenses of students here are less than they are at any other institution of the kind in the State. They are as follows, viz:

For Board and Washing, $1.62½ per week, until the number of boarding students amounts to forty, when this charge will be reduced to $1.25 per week. This covers all the expenses of students at this University; but each one of them is advised to bring with him, if possible, one sheet and one blanket as a part of his outfit.

In view of the facts hereinbefore detailed, it does not seem that there should be any hesitancy in making the assertion, that there is no other educational establishment within the limits of the United States, which offers to colored students so cheaply, or advantageously, the benefits of an education higher than that afforded in the common schools.

The Fall Term will begin on Wednesday, September 6th.

Young men coming to this University should endeavor to reach Vicksburg by the first train on on Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays, as a packet for Rodney leaves that city in the afternoon of each of those days. The University ambulance will meet each packet at Rodney, and convey students and their baggage to the University, free of charge. For full particulars address,

The Great Jackson Route

Has now on sale Excursion tickets to the beautiful summer resorts of the Northwest, at very low rates. They will remain on sale till Sept. 30, and will be good to return till Oct. 31. They include such well known points as Waukesha, Oconomowoc and Green Lake, Wis., St. Paul, Minn.; Grand Haven and Mackinaw, Mich.; and Niagara Falls, besides numerous others of perhaps equal attractions. There are no more desirable places at which to spend the summer than these cool and healthful resorts, situated in the lovely lake district of Wisconsin, or on the noble Lake Michigan and Niagara river. Boarding is cheap and of the best quality, and at many of them are mineral springs particularly adapted to the cure of complaints engendered by a Southern climate. All are easily accessible from large cities, and combine with their associations the benefits of rural life.

To reach them the Great Jackson Route is the shortest, quickest and only direct line. It is in excellent order, having been practically rebuilt with steel rails. No one passing over it can fail to notice the smooth track, absence of dust, and thoroughly satisfactory condition of everything connected with it. Pullman cars run through to Chicago and Cincinnati without Change, and there is no change of cars from there to nearly if not quite all the points to which excursion tickets are sold. Books, maps, and folders, giving full descriptions of the Northwestern watering places, and the routes and rates thereto, can be had at the office of the Great Jackson Route, No. 22 Camp street, under City Hotel, where any one intending to spend the summer away from this city is invited to call before deciding to go elsewhere.

The Great Jackson Route is also without a superior, as a line to New York and all the principal Eastern cities, reaching them with but one change of cars.

COURSE OF STUDY
FOR Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ [illegible], ¶ [illegible] of the Discipline of 1876, the following has been prescribed as a Course of [illegible] for Local Preachers:

[illegible] candidates for license to preach be [illegible] in the common branches of [illegible] education, and on their [illegible] acquaintance with the Bible [illegible] doctrines and usages of the Church.

[illegible] History, Bin[illegible] Steele's [illegible] Episcopal [illegible]

[illegible] History—Old [illegible] Watson's Life [illegible] Years of [illegible]

[illegible] Doctrines. [illegible] Three [illegible] Law [illegible] the [illegible]

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence. Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. BEERS, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. ADAMS, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. may2'78-tf

Burned Molasses Candy.

There is a stately dwelling-house in Philadelphia which has a singular history. It stands in a grove of walnut trees; the wood-work is all of walnut; carved panels representing walnut boughs decorate the dining-room; and on the carriage of the owner, instead of a coat of arms, is a bunch of walnuts just bursting from the husks.

The story is this: About forty years ago a poor woman kept a cent store in an alley in the lower part of the city. A piece of dried beef and two or three brooms were the heavy part of the stock. One day when making molasses candy, to be sold to the street children, it was scorched. The woman was in despair. The loss was a serious one in a trade whose profits were counted by pennies.

She was quick-witted, however, and ready with expedients. She cracked some walnuts, mixed the kernels with the candy, and wrote a placard, "The new Nut Candy, one cent a cake."

The children dropped in on their way to school. The candy was liked. They came back for more the next day. The fame of the cheap confection spread from one school to another. The maker shrewdly confined herself to making that.

Presently she took a large shop in the alley. In a year or two she again moved, but this time it was into one of the principal streets. To-day her original walnut candy is sent to all parts of the country. The woman disposed of her business a few years ago for a sum which made her rich for life. Is it any wonder that she took a ripe walnut for her crest?

But it was not to the walnuts nor to the lucky chance that she owes her fortune. How many women have burned their candy, and the result was only scorched molasses? How many men saw apples fall before Sir Isaac Newton? It is the keen eye and ready brain that can seize on failures and make them successes, and which, with honesty, make the best business capital for man or woman.—Youth's Companion.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo.......................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever palms and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs: in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory.

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 3, 1877.

MR. EDITOR;—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for each medicine. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Billiousness Torpid Liver or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Billiousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

Paris Letter.

Last Monday there were 190 [illegible] visitors registered at the Exhibition. The greatest number of visitors during 1867 was 172,000, and we are not yet quite in the height of the season. Why this popularity? Because the [illegible] being politically in the cold, have taken the resolution to keep aloof from the great show. This is a perfect example of cutting off the nose to revenge the face. The immense crowd on Monday had room [illegible] the [illegible] to the English section, where, not being a Sunday, exhibits were no longer on display. The Canadian annex, chronically on the point of being inaugurated, had gaping thousands to admire the specimens of the Dominion's natural products, most tastefully arranged, thanks to the excellent judgment and taste of those zealous officials, Prof. Selwyn and Dr. May, whom I have to personally thank for their urbanity and [illegible] to communicate all required information. [illegible] cences. The blocks of coal, of plumbago; the monster apples, the seducing furs, &c., indicate that the Dominion flows with a peculiar, but valuable, milk and honey. In the corners of this trophy court are exhibits of Australian produce—wools, ores, woods, wines, preserves. That of Victoria is not only striking, from its look of robust plenty and richness, but also from its remarkable artistic arrangement, due to Mr. Saville Grant, member of the Australian Commission. [illegible]

[illegible] secured a little education years ago have not advanced, and who settle themselves on a community, because they are cheap, or are the political tools of some demagogue, or are sons or daughters of influential families, they are kept in their positions, although utterly unfit for them, and thus rob the children of opportunities to improve under better instructors. These drones will soon have to quit, as the increasing light around them will make their ignorance too patent to be endured. Our church gives no uncertain sound on temperance and education. Our people are doing a good work in helping on these great boons to all the people. Our preparatory school at Mason, for the colored youth is steadily winning its way to a fine reputation as a thorough educational institution, and the West Tennessee Seminary, at Hollow Rock, is doing a fine work among the whites.

Holly Springs Public School.

Mr. Editor:—By request I attended the examination exercises of Prof. Frank Hill's colored school on the 19th inst., in Holly Springs, Miss. Those present as spectators were agreeably surprised at the proficiency of many of the pupils. It was evident that they had studied well and not without profit. The excellent spelling and proficiency in arithmetic exhibited by James Well's, Jr., a boy of ten years, elicited commendation. At the close of the examination Col. E. W. Upshaw and Rev. E. D. Miller by request delivered short addresses to the school. At night the school gave an exhibition consisting of declamation, tableaux and music which was largely attended and much enjoyed. The excellent singing and powerful voice of a little girl, the daughter of Sol. Rather, [illegible] truly wonderful. If [illegible] will [illegible] the Nashville Jubilee Singers [illegible] Prof. Hill and his [illegible] Rev. [illegible] high with their patrons.

OBSERVER.

The Late Southern General Conference.

The Methodist Advocate, of Atlanta, has a spirited editorial on the late Southern General Conference, [illegible] the points made by Dr. Summers who states that it was the most unsatisfactory General Conference ever held of that church, and adds others. We quote as follows:

The history of the M. E. Church, South, is not so flattering as might be supposed. The conference which seceded in 1844 had 439,238 members. The "border war" in 1845, 6, took thousands more from the Methodist Episcopal Church, so that the loss to that body by that division was 500,000, or over. These went into the Southern organization. Of this number 175,000 were colored, leaving in the neighborhood of 325,000 white members in the Church by the time it was fairly organized. Now it has [illegible] white members in the South, [illegible] Though the statistics have not been published for the past two years, so as to afford an opportunity to make more exact calculations, it is evident that the white membership has scarcely more than doubled since the organization of the Church, thirty-four years ago, though the white population has more than doubled during that time, advancing from 4,632,640 in 1840, to [illegible] in 1870. The Methodist Episcopal Church has increased much faster than the population.

After the war the colored members withdrew or were elbowed out of that communion. If these are taken into account, the net increase in members has been only about fifty [illegible] in thirty-four years [illegible] has much more than [illegible] in that time. But [illegible]

[illegible] In the South. Now it has lost caste [illegible] It started with a strong Book Concern, having in 1844, publishing houses at [illegible], Charleston and Nashville. These were all surrendered to the Southern Church at the division together with all of the notes and accounts due from preachers in the South, and in addition to these, the Agents at New York paid to the South 191,000, and that at Cincinnati [illegible], in cash, making probably [illegible] or over to commence operations with. That is all gone. The only thing left is the House at Nashville, which is from [illegible] more in debt than it is worth! Not less than half a million of dollars have been sunken in efforts to sustain a Publishing House by that denomination, for which it has nothing to show.

It may be observed also that while the growth in wealth and white population [illegible] been in the [illegible] South. On the border [illegible] where the [illegible] wealth and population are [illegible] the Methodist Episcopal Church [illegible] white [illegible] than the Church South. On the [illegible] Atlantic and Gulf coast it has [illegible] with the white population [illegible] membered that it has gathered numbers at the expense of a proper moral standard. A writer in a leading paper a few years since objected to the proposed new rule on temperance because if adopted it would "drive fifty thousand of the best supporting members from the communion." The abrogation of the probationary system and lax discipline have added many thousands and tens of thousands of names to the records, but only, in many cases, to be burdens to the societies.

The financial strength of the Southern Church was in slavery. That supported the preachers, built Churches, furnished the sinews of war for every movement. That is gone. If a Church is in debt, a school to be aided, or a young man to be educated, one cannot now put [illegible] girl into the market and sell her to the highest bidder, [illegible] to raise the necessary means. Money for the Church comes hard and slow in these days, hence the bitter cry of poverty, hard times, and the constant call on the North for help. The bottom has fallen out of that treasury. The Church South started out wrong. It did not separate because its members were persecuted and deprived of their rights, but in the interest of slavery, at the dictate of public opinion, and to gain popularity with the worldly. It thought itself strong and invulnerable, and like Jeshurun "waxed fat and kicked." When it ought to have been educating the poor and raising up the lowly it was earnestly defending slavery! When it ought to have been spreading Scriptural holiness, it was absorbed in supporting the Southern Confederacy. These are some of the reasons to be added to those given by Dr. Summers why the late General Conference was so nearly a failure.

We write this in sorrow and from a sense of duty to that Church as well as to our own, alike to Methodism and to Christianity. We should be glad to see the M. E. Church, South, arise from the graves of 1844 and 1861, where it has been so long sitting in lamentation, and [illegible] its power to the front ranks of the aggressive force of evangelical Christendom.

Ex-Gov. Brown on Prohibition.

Hon. B. Gratz Brown, of Missouri, formerly Governor of that State, and also United States Senator, and candidate for Vice President upon the ticket with Horace Greeley, has lately published a letter of much political significance, in which he says:

"It is all very well that the reason be appealed to, the sympathy, the love, the interest of the individual, the family, the country, etc., to induce such abstinence and to invite such pledges; but when all this is gained, what avails it if it cannot be made permanent? The way, however, to make sure of all the ground which is gained in any great moral revolution is to destroy the agencies of immorality, [illegible] and seduction [illegible] as you go along [illegible] armed foe behind; in this matter of temperance reform it is essential. Close up the saloons that invite to the social glass. Make it unlawful to publicly vend intoxicating liquor under any pretense. Send the dram shop keepers at once to making a living in other callings that are not harmful to the public. Correct public sentiment will go along by striking examples of the reprobation it is intended thereafter to visit upon such calling. Do these things, and do them thoroughly, and of the one thousand men who have donned the red ribbon, or the blue, you will find at the end of the year that nine hundred and ninety-nine will join again in your procession and hold the fort. But to do this requires the amending of the laws, the revision of the statutes, the correcting of local charters, the invocation, in short, of the power of the state, and that is politics. It is idle to think about it in any other light. And it is not only political, but the most dominant politics of the age. [illegible] the temperance cause can never successfully be [illegible] until it be [illegible] a political [illegible] must be apparent to all who consider what is wanted for its full triumph, and how alone that want can be supplied. Experience proves that liquor selling don't stop itself. The history of each day in the year blazons its criminal character in our police courts. The depressing reactions which follow reform movements where the traffic remains unchecked tell the necessity for suppression. But the legislation needed to effect its prohibition can only come of men sent to the halls of legislation commissioned to do that work first and before all else. To select such men and elect them is politics. How such politics shall be best conducted, through what instrumentality of association of parties, whether by independent movement or by [illegible] old organizations, are other and very different questions, which will require grave consideration when the moment for resolve arrives."

Liberia.

J. Milton Turner, ex-Minister from the United States to Liberia, thinks that the scheme to colonize Liberia from the Southern States is one of the greatest frauds of this century. He condemns the emigration societies which encourage our negro population to hope that they may better their condition by crossing the Atlantic. He says they speak the truth when they say that emigrants will find the soil fertile; that constant summer prevails; that there are valuable minerals, luxuriant vegetation and tropical fruits; but they don't add that the most primitive agricultural implements are used, such as cutlasses, bill hooks, etc., and that neither horses, mules, nor donkeys can stand the climate. The miasma caused by the heavy rains, alternating with hot sunshine, produces sickness half the year. During the rest of the year the extreme heat [illegible] lassitude [illegible] sumption of the native inhabitants. Imported rice is sold at $4 a bushel. The immigrant has to pay from $14 to $18 a barrel for flour; $1 a pound for butter; thirty-five cents per yard for calico, and other prices in the same proportion. He has to compete with the native for labor. The native is strong and hardy, and able, at twenty-five or fifty cents a day to perform the labor usually assigned to horses in other countries. For ordinary services all that an immigrant can expect is $2 a week. The immigrant society promises six month's support to the immigrants. At the expiration of that time the colonists are left helpless and without means of livelihood, ignorant of the ways of the country, hating the native and hated by him, and probably suffering from disease. At the departure of every vessel for America there are many who beg to be taken back. The captains refuse to carry them, even if they have money to pay their passage, for the captains say, if they allow these men to get back and tell of the actual condition of affairs in the colony the immigration society will no longer employ them, and the immigrants remain to suffer and die.—Chicago Times.

An Honest Rumseller.

FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS:—Having recently opened a commodious establishment for the sale of all the choicest liquors, including "lager beer," I embrace this opportunity of informing you that I have begun the business of making drunkards, paupers, and beggars for the sober, industrious, and respectable to support.

I shall deal in such spirits as will excite men to riot, robbery and bloodshed, and by so doing diminish the comforts, increase the expenses, and endanger the welfare of the community. I will undertake at short notice, for a small sum, and with considerable expense on my part, to prepare inmates for the alms-house, the prison, and the gallows. I will furnish an article warranted to increase the [illegible] and multiply [illegible] distressing [illegible] among men.

I will supply a drink calculated to deprive some of life, many of reason, most of property, and all of peace; which will make fathers to act like madmen, wives to be made worse than widows, children to become double orphans, to grow up in ignorance, and prove a burden and a curse to the nation. I will obstruct the progress of religion, defile the purity of the church, and cause temporal, spiritual, and eternal death.

And if any are so impertinent as to ask why I bring such accumulated misery upon a comparatively happy people, my honest reply is, that I have a license, given under the laws of the commonwealth, and thus I have purchased the right to ruin the character, impair the health, shorten the lives, and destroy both souls and bodies of men.

I know it is written, "Thou shalt not kill;" that woe is pronounced upon him that giveth strong drink to his neighbor, and that no drunkard shall enter the kingdom of heaven; and I do not expect that I, a drunkard maker, will share a better fate. But what can I do? I must have money, even at the expense of my soul. Do you not think I offer enough in return for the money? Many times it will be more than my customers can conveniently carry.

☞ Particular Notice.—I most affectionately warn all my patrons to keep clear of the temperance men—such as the Murphys, Sons of Temperance, Good Templars, members of the Temple of Honor, Red-Ribbon men, Royal Purple men, and all other teetotalers, by whatever name they are known, as they will persuade you to sign the pledge, save your money, and with it support your family in comfort and respectability, thus cheating me out of what you would spend at my establishment. I know what they have done and what they will do. Look out for them.

My sign is the blue and red light.

[illegible] are often [illegible] acting as [illegible] are kept of any [illegible]; debts are [illegible]ly accumulating against the society and creditors are compelled to wait until patience ceases to be a virtue. Things are loose—no one can tell anything about how matters stand.

Money is subscribed to build a church, and [illegible] when built and furnished has cost twice as much as was intended, while the subscriptions shrink away from one cause and another [illegible] half. Then comes the dedication, when a fresh onslaught is made upon the community which, for persistency in the way of begging, almost becomes profane. An excitement is produced and under it subscriptions are made which can never be paid. It reminds one of the man who made a will bequeathing large sums to different persons, but when questioned about his resources said that was their lookout, all he had to do was to make the will. Well people in this way show their good will toward the church by subscribing liberally on dedication day—the paying is quite another thing. But such pledges, however well intended, will not satisfy the creditors.

Then the dedication is proclaimed a great success—the debt being entirely paid, and usually some hundreds over. The trumpets are sounded loud and long, the papers publish it and congratulations are the order of the day. But about four years pass, the blast of the dedication trumpet has died away, and what do we find? A debt about as large as it was on dedication day. What has become of all the money is the question which everybody asks. Let us see. First, a large portion of the subscriptions [illegible] never been paid; some are [illegible] and ought not to [illegible] led to much; some have [illegible] to other places and can[illegible] or if found disregard [illegible] still others have become bankrupt, or have died and [illegible] is left to meet the demand. This is a colored school founded by the U. S. Government in part, and partly by the A. Miss. Association. Its examinations began June 24, lasting three days, during which a number of distinguished men were in attendance; among others Gov. Colquitt, Bishop Haven, and a visiting committee appointed by the State; this is done because the State of Georgia received from the Federal Government as the proceeds of the swamp and other lands a large sum, of which is given $8,000 per annum to this college. I was not present at the examinations, but was at the public exercises and was much pleased with the addresses of the graduating class, consisting of fifteen students.

I carefully noted the style and manner of the addresses and essays and was somewhat startled by the manifest care with which all that [illegible] to the field of history and and patriotism, was restricted, not to say cut out.

I trust Georgia will not be guilty of the crime of Virginia, in emasculating her school books in the interest of such a wretched thing as "the lost cause." I once told a Virginia principal of a High School that his State might for a few years ignore her own colonial and revolutionary record, and that of the other colonies, but the time would come when the young men of Virginia would go back to her Patrick Henrys, her Jeffersons, and her earlier Bacons, and take her just position in the ranks of free and independent communities—her young men will cast the "University edition" of rebellious home books aside and fall back on antecedent literature.

I trust Georgia will not commit such a blunder, and cut out of the school curriculum great and glorious facts of American history, perish the memory of our errors and our wrongs, but let the right and the truth live. In this connection I respectfully call on Gov. Colquitt and on the coming men of [illegible] to protect the schools and [illegible] books of Georgia from this [illegible] ignoble emasculation of the history of the country, and in [illegible] to suppress at the [illegible] of the young life of the nation [illegible] error.

Holly Springs, Miss., District.

The Holly Springs District, upon the whole, has enjoyed in the past five months a goodly degree of prosperity. Early in the year a gracious revival visited [illegible] of our charges, adding many precious souls to Christ. The [illegible] rains, causing an increased growth of grass, have greatly [illegible] the crops in some sections, as well as hindered the people in their [illegible] to the Church. At many of our [illegible] it was with difficulty we got the Conference to convene. Ministerial support has fallen [illegible] below the figures of last year; many of the brethren are keenly [illegible] by want, but none have [illegible] their duty, while their work [illegible] all seem determined that [illegible] must and shall be done. The yearly collections come in slowly, [illegible] a prospect of better in the future. We have perfected several defective titles to our church property, from which the Church in this district has suffered materially. We have purchased several beautiful church sites, one [illegible] comprising [illegible] lots in [illegible] little inland town, also [illegible] tenement houses, which add greatly to the value of our church [illegible] this district. [illegible] of the [illegible] ing admirably in carrying out [illegible] scheme, by which we [illegible] means for the purpose [illegible] additional building [illegible] Rev. [illegible]

[illegible] that in [illegible] field and in the short space of time accomplished the work of breaking and laying off the ground and planting it in a proper manner. The brethren at this point are intent in proving to the Mississippi Conference that by a co-operative christian effort the Church [illegible] all the [illegible] become self-supporting so soon as [illegible]

The progress of our Sunday school work is gratifying indeed. Success in this direction is doubtless to some extent due to the influence of the Holly Springs Sunday school. This school is no doubt one of the best regulated in the State, officered as it is by the faculties of the State Normal and Shaw University. Those efficient instructors know how not only to make rules and regulations, but to carry them out to their fullest extent. We have in regular attendance two hundred; they are from the two Universities and the common schools of the city. When we remember that the public schools of the State receive a great portion of their teachers from this source, moral and religious progress may be looked for.

Rev. J. F. Marshall, Alexandria, La.: "Since we came to this work there have been twenty-three conversions and forty accessions to the church. Our church property has been undergoing thorough repairs—new steeple and new roof, and church and parsonage painted. Fraternity, too, is a reality with us, not only talked of but practiced. Rev. A. N. Ogden of the Episcopal Church, and Rev. C. Keener of the M. E. Church, South, have both recently preached for us. Rev. Wade Hamilton, San Augustine, Texas: "We have just closed a three weeks meeting in which we had the assistance of Rev. Plato Thompson. We received into the church in full connection forty-eight members, and on probation thirty-seven. Many others bowed at the altar as seekers of salvation. We pray that they may soon be led into the glorious light and liberty of the gospel. We have at this place a nice new house of worship, worth [illegible].00, built by our members without aid from Church Extension Society. The title to the property is perfect."

Rev. James J. Shumpert, Aberdeen, Miss.: "Our work is prospering spiritually and financially. There have been so far sixty conversions, eleven persons received in full connection and one hundred and [illegible] on probation. Our [illegible] is in good condition, [illegible] recently [illegible] improvements in our church building."

The new Roumania has the Dobrudscha annexed to it, and Roumania and Montenegro are to be independent states. The latter occupies Antivari as a seaport. Roumania promises to remove all disabilities now imposed upon the Jews residing within her border, and to secure to them equal political and legal rights with all her other inhabitants. Austria is to make an arrangement with Turkey for the future annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina; meanwhile an arrangement for a joint military occupation of the two provinces is to be effected on such terms as may be agreed upon between the Porte and the Emperor. Servia is to be an independent State. The Russian army is to withdraw north of the Balkans within the next three months. The question of Batoum is to be referred to a commission, and the ratification of the Greek frontier is to be settled by a conference between Turkish and Grecian commissioners, but the latter are not open to ask for more than the border districts of Epirus and Thessaly. The Danube is to be made a free river, open alike to ships of all nations.

Berlin, July 7.—Without much further discussion the congress approved the proposition that Batoum should become a Russian port, on condition that it should be free to the commerce of the world, and on condition of complete dismantling of its fortifications. The Turks, as compensation, are to retain Bayazid. The congress will close on Tuesday next, after signing the preliminary treaty. There will be a grand banquet at the castle of the Crown Prince, at Potsdam, on Friday, after which the members will depart. Prince Bismarck leaves Saturday for Kissingen.

We had the pleasure yesterday evening of an interview with Mr. G. L. Conlon, just returned from Morgan City, who reports that the Morgan Railroad is fairly up to its work. The steamer Porter, now under repairs in Algiers, will soon be ready to transport the rails across the gulf, and the initiatory movement to Texas is in a fair way of being brought to a final terminus. The road from Lafourche Crossing, or to speak more specifically, the [illegible] that is to start from one mile [illegible] Lafourche Crossing is now [illegible] progress. Contracts have been awarded for building the necessary bridges, and the work is expected to be finished in about two weeks. There is no doubt that the road will very soon be built up to Thibodaux. These are only incidental items. The [illegible] men are determined to be up to the mark in every way, and before long our citizens may expect a good road at least as far as Vermilionville.—Democrat.

Kingston, Ont., July 8.—There is great excitement here over the expected trouble in Montreal on the twelfth inst. When the news was received on Saturday night that protection was withdrawn from their brethren in Montreal the greatest excitement prevailed. The Orangemen from this city and vicinity have finally decided to go to Montreal in a body on the twelfth, and a meeting will be held to-night, at which final arrangements for going will be completed. It is impossible to say how many will go, but as the body is very strong in this city, they could easily muster from [illegible] to 4000 men. A battery has [illegible] received orders to proceed to Montreal. They will leave Wednesday morning.

A statement purporting to be an affidavit of Eliza Pinkston, and contradicting former testimony given by her has recently been made public. Canton, Miss., June [illegible], 1878.

[illegible]—Ex-Congressman Zacharie is here for the purpose of interviewing Eliza Pinkston. I saw her yesterday, when she told me they wanted her to come to town to meet a gentleman from New Orleans. I have seen her since her interview with Mr. Zacharie, and she tells me they wanted her to say the colored people [illegible] her husband, and they [illegible] paid money to tell the [illegible] to her former testimony, but [illegible] her to sign a paper, (which was not read to her) before Mr. Garrett, justice of the peace. I think they have put up a job on Eliza. She told me that her former testimony was the truth, and she intended to stand by it. She lives about a mile from town, and can be easily got if wanted. Look out for the pretended statement that Zacharie will take to the city with him. [illegible], etc.,

Daniel De Vinne at John-Street.

The venerable Rev. Daniel De Vinne, of the New York East Conference, addressed the Old John-street congregation Sunday morning last. "I am eighty-seven years of age," said the veteran, "and my memory fails me in many things, but I love God as intensely as I ever did." He gave some account, interspersed with reminiscences, of the founding of the John-street Church Sunday-school in 1815, the first Sabbath-school organized in this city. Mr. De Vinne was at that time, sixty-three years ago, a teacher of one of the classes. He also referred briefly to the establishment by himself and other Christian workers of a Sunday-school in Brooklyn, in the following year, in Adams street, near Sands street, the building being yet in existence. A third Sunday-[illegible]barked was the formation at Woodville, Miss., in 1819, of a Sunday-school for the religious instruction of slave children; but in this movement he nearly lost his life, as the slave-holding sympathizers of that part of Mississippi broke up the establishment, and he left under the menaces of knives and pistols. In conclusion, he called attention to the great spread of Sunday-school work in the land, and then, raising his trembling hands above the congregation, he exclaimed: "O, how God has blessed our beloved country! Let us strive to please and honor him, that he may continue to shower blessings upon us and our descendants!"—N. Y. Advocate.

It is always a matter of bitter complaint among the Roman Catholics, that they are charged with unduly worshiping the Virgin Mary. They carefully explain that they pay divine worship to God only, and that prayers are addressed to Mary as the first of created beings, and as an effective mediator between men and her son. On this ground they entreat us to perceive the difference between the latria which belongs to God and the hyperdulia which they gladly offer to Mary. That the priests understand this may be admitted; but examples are shown daily of the utter inability of the common people to comprehend the purely [illegible] distinctions with which Roman Catholic theology abounds. Here, for instance, is the May number of The Guardian Angel, a children's paper approved by eight Catholic prelates. Since May has been adopted as the "month of Mary," the paper is filled with articles in her honor. A few sentences, not unduly torn from their surroundings, will show the alarming extent to which the Roman Catholic child is taught to look to Mary, rather than Christ, for salvation: "The musical voices of the happy children, singing hymns to the Blessed Mother, floated on the breeze, and up to the Mother's throne in Heaven." "The sisters, together with the children, offered up their prayers to the Virgin Mary. A miracle was enacted: when the little girl returned home, her mother was better." "Our most gracious Queen heard the prayers of her sweet little subjects, and restored her beloved mother." "Little children, ever pray to the Blessed Virgin, and always serve and honor her, and your path through life will be joyful and your death happy." "Solemnly consecrate yourself to the service of the Blessed Virgin [illegible] the refuge of sinners." If Mary is the refuge of sinners, what is the mission of her son?—Sunday-school Times.

The Street of Nations.

One of the most curious features of the Paris exhibition, and one that first attracts general attention, is the Street of Nations. On either side of this avenue is a series of typical façades, that is, of fronts of buildings erected by the exhibiting nations, and each of a special type of architecture. That of the United [illegible] the care in its details, [illegible] to the idea of a thoughtful and practical [illegible] a friendly dwelling [illegible] by its elegant simplicity and charming coloring. It suggests the idea that those who are driving away the Holy Spirit from their hearts are shutting out a Spirit as gentle as a dove! 3. There came a voice from heaven which said: "Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased." The evidence that Jesus was the Christ was greater than had been promised the prophet—an experience which is common to all of those who have sought and found him. The voice came after the descent of the Holy Spirit. And that suggests the fact that, when he has come down and taken possession of any heart, then God can say, and that one will, as it were, hear a voice from heaven saying: "Thou art my beloved son; in thee I am well pleased."

A grand Picnic and Barbecue will be held at Oakland Riding Park Tuesday, July 30th, 1878. This is the entertainment which was postponed from July [illegible] on account of bad weather, and tickets purchased for that occasion will be [illegible] for this. It will be conducted on the plan of the old Virginia barbecues, the meats being cooked in trenches on the ground. The [illegible] gentlemen will have general supervision:—Chas. Malone, Geo. D. Refreshments can be had on the grounds at reasonable rates. A good band of music will be in attendance. Take Canal street and Ridge Cemetery cars. [illegible] tickets beforehand—price 25 [illegible]. not by what he was not and what he failed to do. His tendency lives and grows, and [illegible] has died out among thoughtful people. Although Jefferson and Paine preached him to Americans, and wrote him in documents that will not die, the practical mind of the people has too much ballast to be carried away by abstract notions of the Rousseau school. Dr. Osgood thinks that when the day of social, political and religious renewals arrive mankind will have occasion to remember the struggles of Rousseau, who has by his very contradictions has helped mankind to correct ideas of living.

We are informed that Mr. Francis Murphy, the great temperance apostle, has arranged with Messrs. A. S. Barnes & Co., of New York, to publish his new Gospel Temperance Hymnal. It will be specially adapted for use in the gospel temperance cause, revival, praise and prayer meetings. The publication may be expected at an early date.

We have been favored by the publishers with a copy of the "Reminiscences" mentioned in the note of Mr. Lea. It is a work of thrilling interest. Mr. Coffin has recently died and the record of his experience and observation in regard to slavery is now for the first time given to the public:

Editor Southwestern—I read with great interest "Reminiscences of Levi Coffin," a work of over seven hundred pages, published by the Western Tract Society of Cincinnati, and D. Appleton & Co., New York. Mr. Coffin was a plain Quaker merchant of Cincinnati, Ohio, for many years, and was called by his enemies the President of the Underground Railroad. A man of sterling integrity, and one who it is claimed never knowingly violated law. Born and raised in the South, he was intimately acquainted with the institution of slavery, but like all other members of his church never owned a slave. Thousands, I doubt not, would read the work with interest did they know something of its contents, especially how as no one could be damaged by it even by implication.

The [illegible] Jackson Route

[illegible] possible from [illegible], and combine with their [illegible] the benefits of rural life.

To reach them the Great Jackson Route is the shortest, quickest and only direct line. It is in excellent order, having been practically rebuilt with steel rails. No one passing over it can fail to notice the smooth track, absence of dust, and the [illegible] satisfactory condition of everything connected with it. Pullman cars run through to Chicago and Cincinnati without change, and there is no change of cars from there to nearly if not quite all the points to which excursion tickets are sold. Books, maps, and folders, giving full descriptions of the Northwestern watering places, and the routes and rates thereto, can be had at the office of the Great Jackson Route, No. 22 Camp street, under City Hotel, where any one intending to spend the summer away from this city is invited to call before deciding to go elsewhere.

The Great Jackson Route is also without a superior, as a line to New York and all the principal Eastern cities, reaching them with but one change of cars.

BEATTY

Pianos Another battle on high prices Raging War on the monopolist renewed. See Beatty's latest Newspaper full reply (sent free) before buying Piano or Organ. Read my latest circular. Lowest prices ever given. Address, Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J. Organs till [illegible]

[illegible] is the wonderful medicine [illegible] above directed [illegible], the discoverer believes he has combined in harmony more of Nature's sovereign curative properties, which God has instilled into the vegetable kingdom for healing the sick, than were ever before combined in one medicine. The evidence of this fact is found in the great variety of most obstinate diseases which it has been found to conquer. In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest Coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. By its great and thorough blood-purifying properties, it cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. Mercurial disease, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt-rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all the numerous diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

INVALIDS' HOTEL.

The very large number of invalid people who daily visit Buffalo, from every quarter of the United States and Canada, that they may consult Dr. R. V. Pierce and the widely celebrated Faculty of Specialists in Medicine and Surgery associated with him, rendered it necessary that the founder of this institution should provide a place on grand and commodious scale for their entertainment and comfort.

ADVANTAGES [illegible].—The Invalids' Hotel is more complete in its appointments than any similar institution in the world. The building is located in one of the most healthful and desirable portions of the City of Buffalo, and commands a fine view of Lake Erie, [illegible] being [illegible] of beautiful parks. The Hotel is furnished with a patent safety passenger elevator, to convey patients to and from the different floors, is provided with all kinds of approved baths, and has also connected with it a well-appointed gymnasium and bowling alley to afford proper means of exercise.

CHRONIC DISEASES of all forms, whether requiring medical, surgical, or mechanical, treatment, come within the province of our several specialties.

DISEASES OF WOMEN.—Especially are the facilities of this infirmary of a superior order as regards the remedial means and appliances for the cure of all those chronic diseases peculiar to females. The employment, in moderation, of tonic, chemical, electro-thermal, and other approved baths, is in many cases an invaluable auxiliary to the remedial means to which we resort in such cases. Dry friction to the surface, general shampooing, Swedish movements, and light calisthenic exercises, to enliven and equalize the circulation of the blood in the system, relieve congested parts, improve digestion, and strengthen the muscles, produce important beneficial results in all cases to which these means are applicable. No experimenting is resorted to in the treatment. The most approved medicines are carefully employed, and the judicious regulation of the diet, to suit the condition of the patient, the thorough ventilation of the sleeping apartment, the cheering influence of music, social intercourse, innocent games for amusement, and all those agencies which tend to divert the mind of the patient from despondency, and thus promote recovery, are not neglected.

NERVOUS DISEASES.—Paralysis, Epilepsy (Fits), Chorea (St. Vitus's Dance), and other nervous affections, receive the attention of an expert in this specialty, by which the greatest skill is attained and the most happy results secured.

LUNG DISEASES.—This division of the practice in the Invalids' Hotel is very ably managed by a gentleman of mature judgment and skill. Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Diseases are very largely treated in this department, and with results which have been highly gratifying to both physician and patient.

EYE AND EAR.—Special [illegible] delicate operations on [illegible] skilled oculist [illegible] of the [illegible] city [illegible]

COURSE OF STUDY
FOR Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ 59, §5 of the Discipline of 1876, the following has been prescribed as a Course of Study for Local Preachers:

I.—Let candidates for license to preach be examined in the common branches of an English education, and on their general acquaintance with the Bible and the doctrines and usages of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

II. First Year.—The Bible—History. Binney's Theological Compend. Steele's Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

To be Read.—Scripture History—Old Testament.—Smith's. Watson's Life of Wesley. A Hundred Years of Methodism.—Simpson.

III. Second Year.—The Bible—Doctrines. Wakefield's Theology—First Three Books. Christian Baptism.—Merrill.

To be Read.—Scripture History—New Testament.—Smith's. History of the United States.—Ridpath. Butler's Church History—1 vol., 8 vo.

IV. Third Year.—The Bible—Sacraments. Wakefield's Theology—Last Four Books. Christian Perfection—Wesley's Plain Account.

To be Read.—Wesley's Sermons.—Vol. 1. Introduction to the Gospel Records.—Nast. D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation—In one vol., 8 vo.

V. Fourth Year.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.

To be Read.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been presented, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years [illegible]

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops.

W. L. Harris, Secretary.

The lining is held in position by the thumb-screws in the cover, and can be easily removed, thus enabling every part to be cleaned, leaving no chance for the collection of rust or other foreign matter between the lining and outer wall.

OFFICE AMERICAN COTTON TIE CO. LIMITED
47 Carondelet St. New Orleans, La.

In view of the constantly increasing popularity and demand for the Celebrated Arrow Tie, the universally recognized favorite Tie of Planters, Cotton Pressman and Shippers of Cotton generally, the American Cotton Tie Co., Limited, sole proprietors and manufacturers of said Tie, commanding unequalled facilities, have, in addition to the large stock now on hand, contracted for increased quantities, sufficient to meet the largest demand for Cotton Ties, to cover the entire crop of the coming season, and now, through their Agents generally, offer the popular and irrepressible ARROW TIE at $2.50 per bundle, less 2½ per cent discount for cash, in Bundles complete, being less than the market value of plain hoop iron; and it being the purpose of the Company to merit the continued patronage of the Planting community and to defy all competition that may arise; their Agents are instructed to contract with Dealers, Factors and country Merchants at the above named price and terms for future delivery up to the first of August in quantities as may be required from time to time, settlements being made on delivery.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,

Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo. $1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

and wish to recover the same degree of health, strength, and energy as experienced in former years? Do any of the following symptoms or class of symptoms meet your diseased condition? Are you suffering from ill-health in any of its many and manifold forms, consequent upon a lingering, nervous, chronic or functional disease? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, fretful, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are you subject to loss of memory, have spells of fainting, fullness of blood in the head, feel listless, moping, unfit for business or pleasure and subject to fits of melancholy? Are your kidneys, stomach, or blood, in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia or aches and pains? Have you been indiscreet in early years and find yourself harassed with a multitude of gloomy symptoms? Are you timid, nervous, and forgetful and your mind continually dwelling on the subject? Have you lost confidence in yourself and energy for business pursuits? Are you subject to any of the following symptoms: Restless nights, broken sleep, nightmare, dreams, palpitation of the heart, bashfulness, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, pimples and blotches on the face and back, and other despondent symptoms? Thousands of young men, the middle aged, and even the old, suffer from nervous and physical debility. Thousands of females, too, are broken down in health and spirits from disorders peculiar to their sex, and who, from false modesty or neglect prolong their sufferings. Why, then, further neglect a subject so productive of health and happiness when there is at hand a means of restoration?
